Eleven Children, Father of Five Of Them, Die in Fire

10-Family Tenement In Amsterdam N.Y. Destroyed

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Eleven children and the father of five of them died in a fire that destroyed a 10-family tenement early today.

Eight bodies, seven those of children, were recovered.

Five other persons were injured, one critically.

Police said the fire, which occurred about 12:30 a. m. EST, was caused by an overflowing oil stove.

An undetermined number of persons fled in their nightclothes into a snowstorm and sub-freezing temperatures. Police and firemen helped several out.

WAKENED BY DOG

Mrs. Anna Gagliardy said a dog's bark awakened her. Smelling smoke, she dragged her 84-year-old mother, Mrs. Celia Losiba, feet first, from their ground-floor apartment.

Patrolman Marvin Swart, who was in a patrol car 10 blocks from the scene, kicked in three doorways.

"The fire was a ball of flame inside," he said. "I found a boy about 13 kneeling, dead beside a crib. The baby in the crib was dead, too.

"There was a lot of screaming, and one woman kept hollering to go back for her two dogs."

DRUMS EXPLODE

Assistant fire chief Samuel Palumbo said flames were shooting from front and rear windows when firemen arrived. Four 50-gallon oil drums in the basement kept exploding, he said.

"It was impossible at the time to send firemen in there to get anybody without losing extra life," he said.

The roof of the building collapsed and portions crashed into the cellar.

Most of the residents were believed to be Puerto Ricans.

Bodies recovered included those of Juan Rivera, 40, and his children, John, 14; Ilda, 11, Domingo, 9; Angel, 5; a one-year-old boy and two of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Motyka.

Two other Motyka children were trapped in the flaming, two-storey brick building. They were counted as dead.

Two children of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Heaton also were trapped and considered dead. They were Donna, 3, and Marion, six months.

St. Laurent Eats Breakfast Cake On His Birthday

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent today celebrated his 73rd birthday by sampling a slice of cake, at breakfast.

A big white cake, trimmed with chocolate and inscribed "happy birthday," was placed on the Canadian leader's morning tray with the compliments of the hotel management.

Mrs. Mathieu Samson, the prime minister's daughter, declined to accept a slice, saying "I never eat cake in the morning."

The Canadian prime minister, here for the Commonwealth conference, wanted to keep his birthday quiet. "He wanted to work tonight, but I finally persuaded him to see a play with me," said Mrs. Samson, who will accompany her father to most social functions arranged during the conference.

The prime minister will see the play, "The Teahouse of the August Moon," dealing with American relations in the Far East. It appears an appropriate choice since one of the Commonwealth conference's main topics is Formosa, in which the United States is playing a major role.

Await China's Reply to UN Invitation

By WILLIAM HARCOURT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Diplomats speculated today on the reply Red China will make to a United Nations invitation to discuss a cease-fire in the war between Nationalist and Red China.

One Eastern diplomat is reported to have privately expressed the belief that Red China won't accept a cease-fire discussion in the UN security council, but instead will propose a Geneva-type conference somewhere else, probably New Delhi.

Other diplomats, however, say they expect that Red China will agree to take part in the security council discussions.

The Formosan problem came to the UN Monday after weeks of private talks among Britain, the United States and New Zealand in the face of the danger of the Chinese crisis exploding into a third world war.

The council voted to invite Red Chinese participation in its further discussions after deciding to take up first a New Zealand, rather than a Russian, proposal for a Formosa cease-fire.

TERMED INSULT

Nationalist China did not vote for either proposal, and vehemently opposed as an insult the Red Chinese invitation.

New Zealand's proposal, adopted 9 to 1 (Russia), with Nationalist China abstaining, calls for security council action toward a prompt cease-fire.

The Russian proposal charges the U.S. with aggression against Red China and calls for total withdrawal of American forces from Formosa and an interim cease-fire.

When the council meets again it will complete action on the New Zealand item before taking up the Russian one.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Revised official forecasts weather office at 11 a.m.

Synopsis: The storm over Oklahoma that threatened to bring snow to southern Ontario tonight now appears to be moving east and the precipitation from this disturbance is expected to remain south of the Great Lakes.

Careless Driving Charges Laid In Double Fatality

KINGSTON (CP)—Police investigating a traffic accident Monday in which two district men were killed said today they have charged two Montreal truck drivers with careless driving.

Leopold Lebrun and Maurice Brisson were released on bail of $500 each.

Police reported John H. Fidler, 42, and Sigmn. Murray Mandole, 26, were killed when a truck crushed the English-type sports car in which they were riding. The sports car was pushing a larger car.

Investigators said they believe a second truck ran over one of the bodies on the roadway after the crash.

Two Eskimos Preparing in Toronto For Big Moving Day 'Down North'

TORONTO (CP)—Two Eskimos report for work at a Toronto machine shop today to learn all about tractors. No dog teams for them.

So far Peter Thatcher and Elijah Tokok haven't tinkered with anything more complicated than an outboard motor. But they have the Eskimo's natural leaning toward the mechanical and the federal government expects they will learn enough in the next few months to play a major part in the Arctic's biggest moving day.

In the next two years the Northwest Territories' settlement of Aklavik will be moved 33 air miles east of its present location. And the plan is for Peter and Elijah to return home and operate and repair the heavy machinery to be used in the moving job.

One reason for the move is that soil conditions make it impossible to construct an efficient sewerage system there. The present location is generally unsatisfactory.

Forty-five Eskimos applied for the federally-sponsored course in mechanics. Peter and Elijah were chosen and they arrived by train Monday night after flying from Aklavik to Edmonton.

Peter and Elijah were welcomed to Toronto by Rt. Rev. Donald B. Marsh, Anglican bishop of the Arctic. He took them on a shopping and sightseeing tour, and said he believes they will have no trouble passing their courses.

"Eskimos are a practical race by nature," he said. "One man I know gained a reputation as a watch-mender without taking a single lesson.

"They are wizards with machinery—they have to be."

HOUSE DEBATES BUTTER PRICES, POTATO TARIFFS

All Speakers Request Steadier Returns

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower prices for butter; higher import tariffs on potatoes; a steadier return for farmers.

The Commons heard all three proposed Monday as solutions to some of Canada's agricultural problems. Proponents were three opposition members among a dozen speakers in the continuing throne speech debate.

Ross Thatcher, Saskatchewan CCF member for Moose Jaw-Lake Centre, said butter producers must cut prices if they want to regain the home market from margarine and compete in export markets at the world price of some 40 cents a pound.

But the price won't fall, he said, so long as the government buys butter at the support price of 58 cents.

Hardship would result from a sharp drop in the butter floor price. But dairymen and the government should face hard economic facts.

Another member, however, said the floor price should be unchanged.

Robert Perron (PC—Dorchester) said the government should announce continuation of the 58-cent support as soon as possible to relieve farmers from anxieties after their economic problems last year with poor crops. Removal of the floor price would be another blow.

Clouds Hamper Air Search For Belleville Man

VANCOUVER (CP)—Clouds today continued to shroud mountainous Garibaldi Park, where an RCAF T-33 jet trainer is believed to have crashed Saturday.

Search aircraft were unable to operate Sunday or Monday because of poor weather over the area 90 miles north of here.

Lost when the T-33 drifted off course during a flight from Gimli, Man., to Vancouver were FO. K. Bradley of Gimli and formerly of Belleville, Ont., and FO. J. L. Nelson of Gimli, formerly of Ottawa.

75 Lives Saved

HAMILTON (CP)—Seventy-five lives were saved in rescues reported to the Royal Canadian Humane Association during the past year.

The association's annual meeting today was told that six rescues were by boys aged nine to 12 years and two by 12-year-old girls. One rescue was performed by a husband and wife.

There were 65 rescues from drowning.

Gold medals were awarded posthumously to Sub-Lt. Arthur Corscadden of Toronto and John Ramsay Mitchell of Kitchener who sacrificed their lives to save others.

J. H. Moore of Hamilton was re-elected president.

Normal Winter Day Expected As Storm Centres Cross Border

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The weather import-export business is booming between Canada and the United States.

What Canada imported Monday from Michigan, she'll export today to the New England States.

Most of Canada can expect a normal winter day today—cool enough, with some clouds, some sunshine. A little snow is expected in the central provinces, rain in British Columbia and heavier snow in Newfoundland.

Temperatures for the most part are to be reasonable. You have to go to the far north for a deep freeze.

A storm centred over Michigan Monday dumped more than three inches of snow on southern Ontario, sending motorists slithering in Toronto, Hamilton, London and Windsor areas. This was to move eastward today, giving Montreal and Ottawa a short dash of snow, then back across the border.

By afternoon, the heavy weather is due in the New England states.

Taking the Canadian picture from east to west today, the weather forecasters saw it like this:

Newfoundland trudging through steadily falling snow on top of that which fell Monday while the thermometer hovered around zero.

Maritime provinces shivering under cloudy skies, the temperature at zero in Halifax, 12 below at Moncton and generally below zero.

Quebec and northeastern Ontario getting snow in the morning, clouds in the afternoon and reading temperatures between five below and 10 above—an improvement over the 40 below at Kapuskasing in northern Ontario Monday.

Southern Ontario shivering too much in temperatures between 25 above and freezing, but slipping through snowflurries, cloudiness and some sunny intervals.

Northwestern Ontario teeth chattering louder than the rest of Canada, except the far north. Temperatures about 10 to 20 below, even then a pleasant change from the 34 below at White River Monday.

Southern Manitoba and Saskatchewan ear-muffing in 10-above temperatures and under cloudy skies.

Southern Alberta basking in chinook breezes with temperatures of 35 above and a few clouds.

British Columbia snow-shoeing and out in slickers, with snow in the interior, rain all along the coast.

Proposal for Formosa Parley Before Commonwealth Meet

By FRASER WIGHTON

LONDON (Reuters)—A proposal for an international parley to tackle the problem of the Formosa crisis came under study today by delegates to the conference of Commonwealth prime ministers.

The plan envisages a conference on the lines of the one in Geneva last summer which brought peace to Indochina. The object would be to secure negotiating elbow room, away from the speech-making atmosphere of the United Nations.

This morning's session of the conference was again held in the cabinet room of 10 Downing street, residence of Prime Minister Churchill, who is chairman.

Attending are the prime ministers of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, Pakistan, Ceylon and the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland. Deputy Premier Charles Swart represents South Africa.

The Formosa crisis continues to overshadow the conference, but the Commonwealth statesmen are agreed that any initiative on their part must await the outcome of the impending UN Security Council debate. This discussion, arising from New Zealand's move to obtain a cease-fire sponsored by the UN, may not be over for several weeks.

In discussing abatement of the Formosa tension, the Commonwealth leaders are taking into account the possibility that the Security Council will fail to end the fighting and that in any case a long-term solution will still need to be found even if a cease-fire is achieved.

India's Prime Minister Nehru is said to believe that Communist China will need to be satisfied that some political settlement is assured before it will agree to end hostilities. This settlement would have to bear on the future both of Formosa and the Pescadores, as well as the coastal islands.

Since it would be virtually impossible for the UN to negotiate such a settlement, the alternative could be a Geneva-type meeting at which all sides would be represented.

Such a meeting would give scope for secret diplomacy like that which led up to the Indochina settlement. It would not necessarily be confined to the Formosa issue. There is already wide support here for the suggestion of Canada's External Affairs Minister Pearson that a conference of this kind could deal with other Far Eastern problems.

One subject which it is thought might tempt Communist China to agree to such a meeting is the still-unsettled future of Korea. The Geneva conference failed to unite Korea, and the Peiping government is known to want a resumption of the talks on this issue.

Princess Stops at Montreal, Is Now Winging to Trinidad

By SAM SUMMERLIN

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) Making her first visit to the new world, Princess Margaret winged toward Trinidad today for the start of a month-long tour of the colorful Caribbean.

The silvery airliner Canopus carrying Queen Elizabeth's lively 24-year-old sister was scheduled to land at Port of Spain's flag-decked airport at 3 p.m. EST.

With the mercury here hitting above 85 degrees, the princess was promised a relief from winter chill. It was blustery cold and misty when she took off from London Monday, and her plane's first refuelling stop was at Montreal, where the temperature was 10 below zero.

Despite the bitter cold more than 100 spectators, reporters and photographers were on hand at Montreal's Dorval airport when the British Overseas Airliner roared in just before midnight for its 56-minute stop.

The Canopus made the transatlantic hop—Margaret's first flight across that ocean—in 13 hours, 10 minutes. Shifting weather conditions forced it to by-pass fogbound Gander, Nfld., and Goose Bay, Labrador, two other possible refuelling points.

Shortly after the takeoff from London, the princess rode for a while in the pilot's compartment. Air Commodore Sir Edward Fielden, captain of the flight, said they enjoyed "lovely weather" and there had been "not a worry."

CBC Employees Plan Strike Vote On Wednesday

OTTAWA (CP)—A strike vote looms Wednesday among some 650 CBC radio and TV technicians who are faced with a conciliation board rejection of their union's contract demands.

Officials of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians, which will hold the vote, have asked members to reject the conciliation board's recommendations and empower the union to call a strike if the CBC does not come to terms by Feb. 16.

CBC general manager Alphonse Ouimet announced Monday the CBC has accepted the board's report—a majority one—which gave a flat turndown to demands for wage increases ranging between $9.50 and $84 a week.

The future plans of both sides are being kept secret. But informants said the labor department likely will try to get them to resume negotiations, deadlocked since last summer when NABET's first contract with the CBC expired.

HEATER TOLL NINE

NEW YORK (AP)—A 16-year-old youth and a four-year-old boy died early today in a Brooklyn tenement fire. Two girls and their father were dragged unconscious from the house. The blaze, caused by a later explosion, brought to nine the total of kerosene heater fire deaths in New York City since Sunday.

U.S. TO CLARIFY STATUS OF ISLES OFF CHINA COAST

Washington Drafting Agreed Announcement

By FRED HAMPSON

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP)—Fresh fighting on sea and in the air boiled up around the embattled Tachen islands again today while the United States and Nationalist China debated the future of Chiang Kai-shek's offshore island outposts.

An American source said the finishing touches were being put in Washington to an agreed announcement clarifying the status of the Nationalist strongholds just off the Red mainland.

In the explosive Tachen area, Nationalist and Communist Chinese hammered each other with bombs and guns.

The defence ministry said four Nationalist planes clashed with Russian-built MiG-15 fighters in broad daylight but returned to base after successfully carrying out their missions.

FIRES STARTED

The ministry said two of the Nationalist planes dive-bombed and strafed Red targets on newly-captured Yikiangshan island, starting many fires despite heavy Red anti-aircraft fire from Yikiangshan and Toumen island, five miles to the northwest.

Four waves of MiG-15s tried to intercept them as they returned to base but the Nationalist planes escaped, the ministry said.

A few minutes later two Nationalist fighter bombers clashed with several MiGs north of the Tachens but returned to base, the minister reported. The mission of these two planes was not disclosed.

Apparently the evacuation of the Tachens is set to go, once the signal is given. Press reports here say the Nationalists want to stay on the Tachens until they have assurances that the U.S. will offer protection to Quemoy and Matsu islands, near the Tachens.

A minor evacuation of civilians was carried out today in two U.S.-built, Nationalist-operated landing ships. But U.S. Navy help would be needed, and ready, for a wholesale withdrawal.

FLEET READY

The U.S. 7th Fleet, built around at least four big carriers, cruised or rode at anchor off Formosa waiting presumably for orders to sail into the shadow of Red China's Chekiang coast and take off 15,000 of Chiang Kai-shek's soldiers and their equipment.

The soldiers now are on the two Tachen islands which have been menaced by capture of Yikiangshan and by the massing of Red air strength on mainland airfields only a few flying minutes away.

Most military officers say the main Tachens could defend themselves against invasion but could not endure for long an intensive aerial pounding.

The delay in issuing an evacuation order is a question about which there is much speculation.

WANTS COMMITMENT

Some say Chiang will not give up these islands unless the U.S. agrees to help him defend Matsu and Quemoy. However, Washington seems unwilling to make specific commitments that go beyond the resolution passed by Congress. This resolution pledges the U.S. to secure and protect Formosa and the Pescadores, and "related positions and territories . . . now in friendly hands."

Would Permit Commercial Fishing In All of Ontario's Larger Lakes

KENORA (CP) — An Ontario government official Monday supported the idea of permitting commercial fishing of all kinds in the larger Ontario lakes.

W. H. R. Werner of the fish and wild life division, department of lands and forests, told delegates to the annual convention of the Northern Ontario Outfitters Association that such fishing should be without restriction other than the ordinary commercial fishing regulations.

"This should be done in order that the crop of all species of fish may be harvested more completely and not be wasted through natural mortality," he said.

Mr. Werner said that in medium-size lakes commercial fishing of all kinds should be permitted. Whether this fishing should be restricted as to time of year would depend on the species of fish in the lake, general biology of the lake and angling pressure.

A plan to control the development of Ontario recreational areas so that orderly expansion may keep pace with growing needs was outlined Monday by A. S. Bray, chief of the lands division of the Ontario department of lands and forests.

He said there will be periodic review of the plan which it is hoped will become part of Ontario's land regulations.

"It is our intention to submit it to cabinet council to give it legal status," he said.

Mr. Bray said the department is trying to open up areas already easily accessible where services such as electricity can be easily supplied.

35 Crew Members Of Sunk Icebreaker Rescued By Ferry

Ship Seemed to Cave In In Collision Near Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — A ferry boat and a rescue icebreaker collided in dense frost-fog amid grinding icefloes early today, sending the icebreaker Lady Grey to the bottom while her 35 crew members scrambled up rope ladders to the safety of the bigger ship.

One crew member of the 827-ton government ship Lady Grey said his cabin "just seemed to cave in" when the collision came on one of the coldest mornings of the year on the St. Lawrence River.

The 49-year-old Lady Grey was crushed by the ferry boat Cite de Levis, which carried 11 passengers and a crew of 10. There were no fatalities. The icebreaker was on her way to help the ice-trapped, 1,259-ton ferry when the accident occurred.

A spokesman for the transport department which operated the icebreaker said:

"There was time only to remove the crew from the icebreaker to the ferry. Then the icebreaker sank in 90 feet of water."

JUMPS GAP

A Lady Grey crew member, Guy Lacroix, 24, said he took a running jump over the gap between the two ships just after the collision, knowing his own ship was doomed.

Paul Cote of Quebec said he was in a cabin which "just seemed to cave in" when the smash came five miles east of Quebec City, where the Lady Grey had gone to extricate the drifting ferry from ice.

"I rushed out to see the port side of our ship completely crushed," said Cote.

"Everyone yelled 'we're sinking,' and before I knew what was happening we were climbing onto the ferry by ladders which were lowered to us."

PUSHED BY ICE

Capt. Henri Pouliot of the Cite de Levis said he was making a regular run when his vessel became trapped in ice.

"We were drifting in this fog, trapped in the ice when I suddenly saw the Lady Grey's two masts. I reversed my engines but the ice kept pushing us towards the Lady Grey."

The icebreaker's crew, under Capt. Ludger Blais, all made it safely aboard the flat, high-sided ferry which is built to carry cars and many passengers. Officials said Capt. Pouliot then followed the path knifed for him by the ill-fated icebreaker.

Canners, Growers Will Open Talks On Crop Prices

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiations between canneries and growers of corn, peas and tomatoes will begin here Thursday, the Ontario board announced today.

The marketing board will ask the Ontario Food Processors' Association to agree to a Feb. 15 deadline for negotiations, it said. Unsettled matters would then go to arbitration.

Last year terms and prices of the crops were not finally agreed upon until April.

CITY & DISTRICT NEWS

MORE SNOW IN JAN. THAN SAME MONTH OF LAST YEAR

Although it might be hard to credit after last week's chilly spell, January temperatures were meaner last year than in the month just past.

Mean temperature for that month in 1954 was 15 degrees compared with 17 degrees in 1955. The high reached last year was higher at 43 degrees against 41 degrees, while the low was the same for both years at 14 degrees below.

Some .72 inch of rain fell in January 1954 compared with .62 inch, while snowfall was 20.2 inches against 13.2 inches.

Precipitation was 2.74 compared with 1.94 in the month past.

CUSTOMS RETURNS SHOW DECREASE

Customs returns for January this year were down over $37,000 from receipts for the same month 1954.

Returns for January 1955 today were reported at $435,807.14 down from $473,664.08 in 1954.

NO DAMAGE REPORTED

Over-heated stoves were responsible for two runs by the local fire department Monday night and this morning. Shortly before midnight last night the reels were called to a residence on No. 2 Highway east of the city, and this morning firemen went to the 2nd Concession of Sidney. No damage was reported.

Grant of $25,000 Over 5-Year Period Asked by Albert College

The city of Belleville has been asked to make a grant of $25,000 to be spread over a five-year period to the Albert College Centennial Campaign.

The objective of the campaign is $300,000, the money to be used for an addition to the girls' residence, a new gymnasium-auditorium, kitchen equipment, increased accommodation for staff and bursaries for students.

Albert College Principal A. E. MacKenzie as spokesman for a delegation of Belleville members of the college board of governors, made the request to council and read a brief reviewing the history of Albert and what the college meant to the city economically.

Also addressing council were W. J. Morrison, vice-chairman of the board of governors, and Judge J. C. Anderson.

Reviewing the history of Albert College which he said had received its charter back in 1857 when it was known as the Belleville Seminary, Mr. MacKenzie stressed that the institution was suffering from growing pains with increased accommodation being badly needed for girl students and for staff.

Since 1942 the registration at Albert had practically doubled, this year the registration being 185, the highest in history, and students were being turned away because of lack of room.

Mr. MacKenzie stressed that throughout the years Albert had been a credit to the city and had made Belleville well and favorably known throughout Ontario, Canada, and foreign countries. Students from 10 countries outside of Canada were now at the college.

CITY HAS STAKE IN COLLEGE

It was noted that already Belleville had a stake in the college as the city had made the Trent Road site available when the present college was constructed back in the early 1920's.

Referring to the forthcoming campaign, Mr. MacKenzie noted that it was expected that half of the total objective of $300,000 would be raised from the churches in the Bay of Quinte and Toronto Conferences of the United Church. The other $150,000 was expected to be raised from corporations and public subscriptions.

The proposed new addition to the girls' residence to be annexed to the present manor on Highland Ave. would cost an estimated $155,000. The Gymnasium-auditorium would cost another $50,000, kitchen equipment, $20,000, increased accommodation for staff, $30,000 while $45,000 was required for bursaries. It was hoped that construction could be commenced in the summer of 1955.

To a question from Alderman David, Mr. MacKenzie replied that Albert College received no grant from the Federal, Provincial or any municipal government. To be eligible for grants it would be necessary for the institution to become a junior college.

Alderman Grandame questioned the advisability of building an addition to the present manor. He was told the addition would match the present manor and was also planned so that at any time the present building could be torn down and a complete new structure erected.

W. J. Morrison noted that the decision to expand at Albert had been the unanimous decision of members of the board of governors. He said the appeal to the city was being made on an economic basis taking into consideration the amount of money Albert spent in Belleville.

"I know of the great work which Albert is doing and also of the need for such schools as Albert in addition to the regular schools," he said.

Judge Anderson said that Albert had added prestige to Belleville. Albert has felt it was part of Belleville and had identified itself with life in Belleville.

He stressed that city council could do much to give leadership to Albert's Centennial Campaign. "You already have an investment there and by voting a grant can greatly encourage citizens to contribute to the campaign."

He said he sympathized with council's effort to control the tax rate but asked that council look at the matter on a long term basis.

Council had no discussion on the grant request, the matter being referred to the special budget meeting of council to be held tonight.

Service Station Interior Gutted, 2 Cars Scorched

STIRLING. (Special.) — Fire gutted the interior of Bill Montgomery's service station in Stirling's west end early Monday morning and scorched two cars in the service department. Total amount of damage was not estimated.

Montgomery, who lives next door to the gas station, discovered the fire about 2.00 a.m., Monday and, turned in the alarm. Stirling fire brigade, under chief Earl Fox, fought flames with two lines of hose in 18 below zero weather for more than an hour before bringing the blaze under control.

Two cars in the service pits were pushed from the building by firemen but paint and tires on both vehicles were ruined. A large quantity of tires and automotive accessories stored in the building was lost.

Frame houses on either side of the station were not damaged. Firemen prevented flames from igniting oil in a large oil tank at the rear of the property.

The fire is believed to have started in the chimney of the station's wood stove.

When the fire was out Mrs. Montgomery served coffee and sandwiches to 25 firefighters.

Gas pumps, some distance in front of the station, were in service Monday afternoon.

Council to Sell Remaining Lots To Highest Bidder

Belleville city council is back in the real estate business and will sell remaining city owned lots to the highest bidder.

This was decided by members of council, Monday evening, after a property committee recommendation to sell two lots on Southview Avenue to A. Gajdicar for $500 each had been turned down. Council later passed a recommendation from Mayor J. Both for the remaining city owned lots to be advertised and sold to the highest bidder with $500 as the minimum price."

Alderman Moxam as chairman of the property committee noted it had been the decision of last year's committee to sell the lots in question for $500 minimum plus the local improvement charges for the life of the debentures. He felt this was a good price and at the same time would afford the private individual to purchase a lot on which to build a home.

But Mayor Both said he would like to see all city property sold by tender and Alderman Graham noted he had heard on the street that people were prepared to pay more than $500 for the lots. He did not agree with the mayor, however, that the lots be sold by tender. He felt if the lots were publicized a higher price could be secured.

Alderman Tice noted if the two lots in question were sold there would be only eight more lots left. His feeling was that it was better to sell the lots and get houses built rather than hold out for a higher price with the city paying the local improvements.

But Mayor Both returned that the proper and only way to sell city lots was by tender. "I want to prove to the public that we were selling lots too cheaply," he said.

Council split evenly when the property committee recommendation was voted on. Approving the recommendation were Aldermen Clarke, David, Humphreys, Hyde, Keegan, Moxam and Tice. Opposing were Mayor Both and Alderman Forrester, Graham, Grandame, McCabe, Safe and Smith.

Later when Mayor Both introduced his recommendation to advertise city lots and sell them by tender, Alderman Graham moved an amendment calling for the words "by tender" to be deleted. The amendment was lost and the original motion by the mayor was carried.

SAFE FROM EVERYONE

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP)—The owners of the Medford Grocery Co. almost wish the thief who visited their place of business Sunday night had been more successful. He jammed up the combination on an impregnable safe imbedded in a foot and a half of concrete. He couldn't get it open. Neither can company officials.

On Split Vote Council Rejects No-Parking Rule on Bridge St.

Belleville city council and members of the city traffic committee are evading the issue in their efforts to alleviate traffic congestion in the downtown Bridge St. area.

Council members were told this by a spokesman for a Bridge St. delegation, who had petitioned their opposition to the proposed parking ban on Bridge St. from Front to Church Streets, between 4.30 and 6.00 o'clock in the afternoons.

"There is only one answer to the problem and council keeps evading it," ex-mayor Glencoe Thompson said. "The answer is another bridge across the Moira River near the C.P.R. bridge."

Several Bridge St. merchants voiced their opposition to the traffic committee recommendation, which would ban parking in the Bridge St. area during the evening rush hour and most of them claimed discrimination.

"If the no-parking ban were general in the downtown area then we might have gone along with it but we are opposed unless the ban is general. There are good merchants on Bridge St. too," pointed out Mr. Thompson.

On a split vote divided evenly for and against the traffic committee recommendation was lost and for the time being at least curb parking will continue on Bridge St.

Ex-alderman Newt Wilbur contended that a ban on parking would still not control traffic and would not help matters. He would not approve even of a trial period for the no-parking ban.

WOULD BACK COMMITTEE

George DeVuyst claiming to represent the local restaurant association, said the suggested parking ban would "put Bridge Street merchants out of business."

Alderman Enos David as chairman of the traffic committee, admitted the proposed parking ban was not his idea but he was still prepared to back up the committee recommendation. He denied that any discrimination against Bridge Street merchants was intended and expressed the opinion that the parking ban would not interfere with business.

"I'm opposed to the recommendation for the simple reason it does not solve anything," stated Alderman Ben Safe. "Let the government build a new highway and our problem will be solved."

Alderman Ralph Graham said the recommendation was an attempt to solve one of the worst traffic bottlenecks in the city. He quoted police officials as saying that the bottleneck was caused mostly by curb parking.

He said the idea had been proposed before but before it was given a proper try pressure had been brought to bear on council and the by-law was rescinded.

He asked that council give the no-parking ban a try and if it did not work he would be only too willing to re-instate parking. "But if it works we would have accomplished a great deal," he said.

said they were opposed for the said they were opopsed for the simple reason no parking would not solve anything.

Alderman Hyde agreed that no parking "may be the answer" but at the same time he sympathized with the merchants. He tabled an amendment calling for no parking be tried for a three-month period following which the matter would be reviewed by council.

FAVORS TRIAL PERIOD

Alderman Jane Forrester noted that she lived on Bridge St. and could see the traffic congestion every day. She was in favor of the trial period.

On a recorded vote the recommendation failed to receive a majority and was declared lost by the clerk-comptroller.

Approving the recommendation were Aldermen David, Forrester, Graham, Hyde, Keegan, Moxam and Smith. Opposing were: Mayor Both and Aldermen Grandame, Clarke, Humphreys, McCabe, Safe and Tice.

Another traffic committee recommendation calling for no action to be taken on requests for traffic lights at the intersection of College St. and Cannifton Road; at the corner of Moira and Coleman Streets, and at West College Street, was referred back to the committee for further consideration.

George DeVuyst earlier had asked specifically regarding the action being taken on the request for a traffic light at Cannifton Road and College Street and was told by the traffic chairman that the committee had not felt that a traffic light was necessary at this time.

Alderman Tice referred to the serious traffic bottleneck at Coleman and Moira and claimed a traffic light was definitely needed at this point.

Again Alderman David replied his committee had felt that a traffic light was not the answer at this point claiming the situation here was no worse than at many other intersections. He noted that the police had promised co-operation for this corner and would direct traffic during the rush hour period.

SENT BACK TO COMMITTEE

Alderman Moxam noted a traffic light for this corner would cost at least $3,000 and he would like to see police direction of traffic tried out.

But Aldermen Keegan and Grandame stressed there was a serious traffic problem here, with Alderman Grandame stating it "was the worst corner in Belleville."

"I travel it every day and I would personally recommend action by council," he said.

When the vote was called councillors sent the traffic committee recommendation back for further consideration.

Dr. Craig, Pres. of Dentists, Favors Water Fluoridation

Dr. G. Harold Craig, president of the Bay of Quinte Dental Society said here yesterday that the next step in prevention of dental decay among school children in Belleville is fluoridation of the city's water supply.

Speaking to the Belleville Rotary Club in the Hotel Quinte, Dr. Craig said that dental decay is becoming "more and more prevalent."

"If we can reduce it by this process (fluoridation) what are we waiting for?"

Dr. Craig quoted from a recent report of Health League of Canada which recently gathered a consensus of opinion on fluoridation from departments of preventive medicine in 92 North American cities. No department expressed an opinion that the process administered in proper quantities was harmful. Some 86 of the departments did, however, advocate fluoridation as a means of preventing decay. Six had no opinion other than proper amounts would not be harmful.

HAVE LOWER INCIDENT

There now are over 100 million people in the U.S. who have been drinking water containing fluorides, most of them during their lifetime. "These districts have had a lower incidence of dental decay than other areas," he said.

Dr. Craig also recalled the Brantford, Ont. experiment with fluoridation and noted the lower incidence of tooth decay in that city since the introduction of the process.

Fluoridation in Belleville would mean a terrific saving in the overall cost of combatting tooth decay, he claimed.

In reply to a question on the specific cost of fluoridation to the city, Dr. Craig said he could not go into the cost "at the moment." However, experiments had shown the annual cost to be around four to 11 cents per person.

"If this procedure prevents one cavity for one child it has paid for itself in 30 years," he said.

Asked if the introduction of the process would not ultimately result in the loss of business to the dental profession, Dr. Craig paralleled his reply with the introduction of immunization and vaccination by the medical profession and said the dental association was behind fluoridation for the good of the community.

During his address Dr. Craig also told the meeting that Belleville needs a full-time school dental officer. With present available funds the schools dental program in the public schools is concentrated on the lower grades.

Conceding he might "be sticking my neck out," Dr. Craig also said the "really diseased mouths" among grade school children examined by dentists, are all coming either from separate school children or from the district schools outside the city. Neither school systems have a dental service, in contrast to the city public schools.

In general, he said, the tooth conditions of the city's public school children, while still not all they should be, are far better than those in the surrounding districts.

Dr. Craig was introduced by Dr. J. A. Loynes and thanked by Carson Elliott.

Land Purchased By Authority In '54 Cost $4,485

Purchase of land within the watershed for reforestation purposes cost the Moira River Conservation Authority $4,485 in 1954, it was shown by the auditor's report read at the Authority annual meeting held last week at Shire Hall.

In all, the Authority has purchased a total of 2,531 acres of land for reforestation at a cost of $17,735.09, most of it being in the Hungerford township area and including the former Hastings county forest at Actinolite. With the exception of 194 acres in Elzevir township and 211 acres in Sidney all land purchased for reforestation has been in Hungerford.

Funds for the operation of the Authority are derived from levies of $2,500 against participating municipalities for administration and for reforestation with grants for similar amounts being received from the province

Administration of the various phases of the Authority operations last year cost $4,725.20, with an additional $3,543.51 being paid out of revenue for the purchase of the O'Hara Mill property in Madoc township which has been bought as a historical site. Field officer and motor vehicle expense totalled $507.98; administration of reforestation $195.70; public relations $304.94; youth education $121; general office expenditures $984.03; parks and recreational facilities $610.30; soil and water conservation $101.25, flood control $1,152.02 and members expenses $747.90.

Special Meeting Will Discuss 1955 Budget

Members of city council will hold a special meeting this evening commencing at 7 o'clock to discuss the 1955 budget.

Several of the various council committees have already discussed their relative budgets and will present them to the council as a whole this evening.

Delegations from the Public School Board and also from the Quinte District High School Board will attend to explain their respective budgets to council.

Finance Chairman Alderman G. Hyde noted that although all budgets will come up for discussion it was not expected the 1955 tax rate would be struck for at least two weeks.

Preston East Dome and Lake Shore were strong among golds. The few active low-priced mines included Jonsmith, up 16 cents to 74 at 1 p. m. on 400,000-share turnover. Consolidated Denison climbed 18 to $2.44. Algom jumped 75 cents to $15.25.

Ont. Advanced In Control Of Alcoholism

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. E. M. Jellinek, an authority on alcoholism as a health problem, says Ontario is one of the most advanced areas in its efforts to remove alcoholism.

Dr. Jellinek, consultant on alcoholism to the World Health Organization, visited the Alcoholism Research Foundation here Monday and said in an interview later it is one of the most modern institutions in the world.

He is compiling a book on the drinking habits and incidence of alcoholism in the larger countries of the world.

He estimated Canada's degree of alcoholism as "about the middle"—nothing to be proud of and something to worry about.

Princess Passed Up Chance To Step on Canadian Soil

MONTREAL (CP) — Princess Margaret, bound for her Caribbean tour passed up her first chance to step on Canadian soil Monday night when her sleek Stratocruiser Canopus made a 56-minute refueling stop at nearby Dorval airport.

The 24-year-old sister of Britain's monarch apparently slept through the stop, to the vocal disappointment of some 100 Montrealers gathered outside the plane in below-zero weather to welcome her.

The shivering, foot-stamping crowed chanted over and over "We want the Princess." But there was no sign of Princess Margaret.

It was Margaret's first trans-Atlantic flight. The plane, which landed at 11:19 p. m. EST to take on some 2,500 gallons of fuel, taxied out to the runway shortly after midnight and took off at 12:15 a. m.

From Montreal, it was scheduled to land early today at Montego bay, Jamaica, before continuing to Trinidad and the start of Margaret's one-month tour of the West Indies. She returns home March 2.

The entire international section of the airport terminal was keyed up with expectancy that Margaret would leave the plane.

Some 15 blue-coated RCMP officers were on hand and a passageway had been roped off from the sanded tarmac to BOAC offices inside. The arrangements were made after it was learned the plane would not land at either Gander, Nfld., or Goose Bay, Labrador.

Both had been tentatively scheduled as refuelling stops but were passed up because of better weather here.

Truck Upsets, Spills Cargo

TRENTON (Special) — A heavily loaded tractor-trailer jack-knifed at the top of Gilmour hill early this morning crashing into the northwest curb, the trailer upsetting and spilling its contents over the corner boulevard and sidewalks on Marmora and Dundas Streets. The driver, Lucien Guernon, 38, Montreal, Quebec, escaped without injury.

Police reported the transport was proceeding west on Dundas Street at Gilmour hill, when the driver, apparently slowing down to make the turn, applied the brakes throwing the trailer into a skid. The report accompanied by a sketch of the mishap, noted that fresh snow had fallen, the roadway was very slippery and not sand coated surface at the time of the investigation.

Damage resulting from the crash included a smashed lamp post, right side racks of trailer broken and right rear dual wheels of trailer damaged.

Top Performance Given by Brando In Capitol Film

(By HARRY MULHALL)

Just what took "On the Waterfront" so long coming Belleville's way is difficult to fathom. But now that it is finally with us, and currently playing at the Capitol Theatre, add it to your list of movie musts.

The film, which cuts the rugged realistic, tells the story of the gradual redemption of a minor waterfront hoodlum, played by Marlon Brando, by a crusading priest, intent on breaking the reign of hoodlum-terror on New York's dockland.

"On the Waterfront" is a banner production that never flags. Crammed with raw emotional appeal it packs more entertainment into a brief space of time than any film ever to leave Hollywood for many a long day. Masterfully directed by one of the industry's tops, Elia Kazan, it contains a cast of stars and supporting players that link together as surely as an anchor chain.

As Terry Molloy, the dumb-bum ex-pugilist, vacillating between loyalty to the gang and the love of a girl, his conscience on two legs, Brando justifies predictions that his performance in this film will be an academy-award winner. Swaggering, stupid, trite and tough, he raps out a performance gentle as a soft-nosed bullet.

FIGHTING PRIEST

Behind him in performance stature comes Karl Malden as the fighting priest, who unable to make an impression on the cowed dockers in his clean-up campaign, concentrates his efforts on Brando, finally achieving his goal when the pug's brother is killed by the gang, and Brando testifies to the Crime Commission.

A newcomer to the screen is Eva Marie Saint, taking the female lead as the girl with whom Brando falls in love. A nymph-like blonde, her sensitive love affair with Brando serves as a deliberate contrast emphasizing the film's harsh story.

Lee J. Cobb, as king-pin of the gang turns in a forceful performance. His final show-down with Brando ends in the most brutal fight scene yet recorded on celluloid.

Leonard Bernstein's tailor-made score lends additional emphasis to the drama.

"On the Waterfront" was made at a time when Hollywood was hailing screen innovations as the shots in the arm needed by the film industry. This film, in black and white and conventional dimensions, discredits that. A few more redemptions like that of Terry Molloy and Hollywood will find itself redeemed.

Mayor's Motion to Add Names To Industrial Commission Lost; Ald. McCabe on Hospital Bd.

Just how a committee recommendation can be presented to council, when the committee has not yet been called to a meeting, was the question raised in city council Monday evening.

Mayor John Both, chairman of the council industrial committee tabled a recommendation naming five additional aldermen to his committee.

As member of the present industrial committee Alderman Jane Forrester declared the recommendation was out of order, noting that the committee had not been called together and that business had been conducted by the chairman without consulting the committee.

The alderman noted that business had been conducted in reference to the claim against the city of Frank Huson and also that the secretary of the industrial committee had been notified his services were being dispensed with as the committee had not yet been organized.

In reply the mayor claimed he had been justified in not calling a meeting of the industrial committee declaring it had been in the best interests of the city not to do so. He referred to a letter from the city solicitor marked "confidential, for information of council members only."

Council went into caucus to consider the letter, the contents of which were not made public. The letter was believed to concern a possible legal action against the city.

RECOMMENDATION LOST

The mayor's recommendation called for Aldermen Smith, Moxam, Humphreys, Clarke and McCabe to be named as the additional members to the industrial committee. Present members are Mayor Both as chairman, with Aldermen Forrester, Argue, Tice and Keegan, the committee having power to add.

Alderman Hyde noted that when he had made the recommendation at an earlier meeting naming industrial committee members he had intended that any additional members would be named from outside council.

"But what's the use of adding to the committee if the chairman is not going to call a meeting?" asked Alderman Safe.

Alderman Keegan said he had voted for additional members being added on the understanding they would be persons from outside of council. "In many instances outside members are of great benefit and I thought that was what was to happen," he said.

The mayor's recommendation to name additional members to his committee was turned down by an 8-6 vote. Opposing were Aldermen David, Forrester, Graham, Hyde, Keegan, Moxam, Safe and Tice. Approving of the recommendation were Mayor Both, and Aldermen Clarke, Grandame, Humphreys, McCabe and Smith.

Alderman Effie McCabe was named as council representative on the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors to fill out the term of Ex-Alderman J. Bradford who retired from council.

THREE NOMINATIONS

There were three nominations for the office, Aldermen Effie McCabe, Jane Forrester and Bruce Smith. On a show of hands council on the first count gave Mrs. McCabe seven votes, Mrs. Forrester six votes and Mr. Smith one vote.

On the final vote, Alderman Moxam who had previously approved of Alderman Smith, voted for Mrs. McCabe thereby eliminating a possible tie. Votes for Mrs. McCabe were registered by Mayor Both, and Aldermen Clarke, David, Grandame, Humphreys, McCabe, Smith, and Moxam. Votes for Mrs. Forrester were given by Aldermen Graham, Hyde, Keegan, Safe, Tice and Forrester.

Council approved of a fire committee recommendation naming Fire Chief Gerald Vance as district deputy fire marshal for Prince Edward county, this despite the objection of Mayor Both who said the province was acting in a "high handed" manner in suggesting Chief Vance for the position.

"As far as I am concerned I would say no, until we know how much it is going to cost the city and what time the chief would spend out of the city," he said.

Alderman Grandame as chairman of fire said that meetings called by Chief Vance as co-ordinator for the Prince Edward district would take little time and would be held in Belleville at no cost to the city.

Alderman Graham noted the chief's duties would be merely that of co-ordinator; that he would act only in an emergency and his duties would not entail him leaving the city.

It was pointed out that the position could be given only to the chief of a full time fire department. Belleville is the nearest full-time department to Prince Edward.

VOTED TO POSITION

But the mayor still voiced his disapproval. "The fact of the matter is that the province hasn't shown any willingness to go into a civil defence program," he pointed out. "If it had shown a good example I would not feel too unkindly."

Council, however, voted to name Chief Vance to the position.

A finance committee recommendation to give the Lakelands Natural Gas Company a franchise for the distribution of gas in Belleville was referred back to the committees until all interested gas firms were contacted.

Alderman Hyde as chairman of the finance committee said he had been a bit disappointed in his committee members in bringing in the recommendation as it had been his understanding that two weeks ago the matter had been referred to his committee and all companies interested were to be contacted.

There was considerable discussion as to legality of giving the Lakeland Gas Company a franchise and also as to the urgency of the matter with Alderman Safe noting the matter could be shelved until 1957 without any harm being done.

The general consensus was that no agreement with a gas company was good until approved by a vote of the people, the by-law providing that it came into effect only after an election. City Solicitor R. A. Pringle noted that franchises could be given to all companies interested but that ultimately the fuel board would decide and make recommendation.

This also was the feeling of Mayor Both who said many such agreements could be given but that the fuel controller would have the last say. "There is no chance to go wrong," he said.

Alderman Forrester referred to a meeting last autumn which representatives from Belleville and certain other district centres had had with the fuel controller. She asked if certain information had been received from the fuel board and when told the information had not been received asked why council should rush in.

Alderman David admitted he was confused on the gas question, while Alderman Keegan asked how the ratepayers could be expected to vote intelligently on the matter when even council did not know the answer.

On recommendation of Alderman Humphreys the matter was referred back to the committee until all interested firms were heard from.

Groundhog Day--Gloomy or Gay Spring Certainly Is Far Away

Things are astir in Groundhogville today!

For tomorrow, February 2, is the day the heads of subterranean houses of their accredited representatives, move topside to see if the world is as wacky as it was when they heard the Giants had won the world series and decided that was enough for one year.

Tomorrow according to legend is Candlemas Day — or if you prefer it — Bear Day.

GROUND HOG DAY

It is the day, oldtimers and superstitious folk will have you believe, that hibernating animals such as Brer Woodchuck (groundhog in Podunk Corners, Split Fibula, Arkansas, Fiddler's Bow, Oklahoma, and other points) and Gramp Grizzly awake from the winter snooze and poke their snouts through a snowy crust to find out what's going on.

Legend has it that if they see their shadow they hightail it for their subterranean boudoirs to finish out a winter night's dream. If skies are dull and snowy with no shadow apparent, they send word down to the missus to wake the kids, pack the gear and come topside to enjoy life, for spring is not far away.

Which only goes to prove that hibernating animals do not carry a too-heavy cargo of brains. What self-respecting woodchuck or bear would leave a nice warm home, with no rent or food bills, taxes, electricity, or car trouble to spend the rest of the winter living in this topsy-turvy atmosphere?

A word of warning. If the skies are dull tomorrow morning and there is a definite scarcity of sunshine, don't start digging out the fishing tackle; looking up vacation spots; starting the spring cleaning, or putting the fur coats and red flannels in moth balls.

The only ones who are being fooled, outside of a lot of superstitious humans, are Brer Groundhog and Gramp Bear. And they don't know any better.

Cradle to Grave Canadian Diet Is Taxes, Taxes

OTTAWA (CP) — Taxes greet Canadians at birth, follow them through life and go with them to their grave.

J. Angus MacLean (PC—Queens) said Monday in the Commons that a new-born Canadian is washed with soap on which there is a 22½-per-cent tariff and a similar sales tax.

The child then was wrapped in baby clothes on which there is a 25-per-cent tariff and put in a bassinet subject to a 15-per-cent tax.

"When he gets a little bit older he is pushed around in a baby carriage on which there is a 22½-per-cent tariff.

"When he is baptized, even the baptismal certificate has a 17½-per-cent tariff on it.

"He goes on through the whole of his life until he eventually shuffles off this mortal coil, when he is placed in a coffin on which there is a 17½-per-cent tariff and is taken to a cemetery in a hearse on which there is a 17½-per-cent tariff.

"His grave is filled in with a shovel on which there is a 15-per-cent tariff."

"There is a 20-per-cent tariff on the shovel handle."

Expert Thinks Gaspe Hanging Was Suicide

MONTREAL (CP)—Dr. Rosaire Fontaine, provincial medico-legal expert, said Monday he found no indication of foul play in the death of a young man whose body was found hanging from a tree in the Gaspe district and is inclined to think it a case of suicide.

The head and torso of the man, identified as 20-year-old Jean Simoneau of Perce, Que., were found hanging by a leather belt near Ste. Anne des Monts, 300 miles east of Quebec.

Mobile Physiotherapy Service Started by Rotary in County

This week the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society inaugurates a mobile physiotherapy service in Hastings County.

Sponsored by the Belleville Rotary club the unit will span the county, ministering to sufferers from rheumatism and arthritis in their homes.

Inauguration of the service follows a speech to the Belleville Rotary here last December by John Pearson, executive secretary of the society. It is the fourth such unit sent into operation in Ontario under the aegis of Rotary clubs.

Following Mr. Pearson's speech on the organization of the society, which laid emphasis on the mobile-unit phase of the work, the city club decided to sponsor a unit here. There now are 20 units operating in Ontario, most of them subsidized by community chest funds.

Yesterday the new unit, self-contained on the four wheels of a station wagon, arrived here in time for the weekly meeting of the club in Hotel Quinte. With it was its operator and driver, physiotherapist Elizabeth Lindsay.

Miss Lindsay, formerly a physiotherapist in hospital in her native England before coming to Canada just over two years ago, also was responsible for operation of the society's Oshawa unit.

As in the other centres Miss Lindsay will operate the unit single-handed, driving the wagon to points of call and attending the patients.

SERVICE TWO-FOLD

The idea of the service is two-fold, Miss Lindsay explained.

"Our program is an educational one also in that we do not just strictly operate to give a patient treatment. We also show the patient the methods of treating himself (or herself)".

This facet of the service instructs patients in the proper use of resting, exercising and heating treatments used in curing or alleviating illnesses.

"We also have equipment to lend them during the period while they are purchasing their own. However we cannot lend it indefinitely because we only have a certain amount of equipment," Miss Lindsay explained.

Included among the equipment compactly stocked in the wagon are two heating baths, two infra-red ray heating lamps, and short-wave infra-red heating equipment.

"We reckon we can treat approximately 100-110 patients a month in their homes," Miss Lindsay said.

"The treatments are not free," she said. "We charge a fee of four dollars and we ask those treated to pay as near to that as possible.

"But should they be unable to pay the treatment is available just the same," she emphasized.

To obtain treatment a patient must be certified by a doctor.

"We do not give any treatment without a doctor's requisition.

Often a patient will request treatment on his or her own behalf, but they first must possess a doctor's requisition form," she said. Headquarters for this latest reinforcement to the county's health front now is located in the Stobie building, Pinnacle and Campbell streets.

Police Blotter

Night operators forced their way into the Walker Hardware store early Sautrday evening and escaped with the cash contents of the store coke machine, police reported today.

Entry to the building was gained through a window on the roof of the store, the thieves then making their way into the main part of the store.

C. Sprague, 50 1-2 Octavia street, reported that a tool case and tools had been stolen from his truck while it was parked at the rear of a local hotel.

Property damage to two vehicles amounting to approximately $350 was caused Saturday evening in a car accident on Moira street near Coleman.

Jacob Albert, 43 East Moira street, was northbound on Coleman and had made a right turn onto Moira, when his car was in collision with a westbound car on Moira street driven by J. S. White, Footbridge Lane. Police said White had been driving while his licence was under suspension.

BOTH SIDES HAPPY WITH AGREEMENT

Rhys M. Sale, president of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada, and Emil Mazey, United Automobile Workers international secretary-treasurer, are both happy about the settlement of the Ford strike.

They are pleased not merely by the settlement of the strike but by the terms of this settlement.

Mr. Mazey says this settlement was a "definite victory" for the union.

Mr. Sale says it was a fair trade.

The impartial observer is likely, at first glance, to agree with Mr. Sale. More mature consideration may lead to the conclusion that Mr. Mazey is also right, that a union victory and a fair trade are not necessarily contradictory terms.

The union victory is easily pinpointed. It was in winning a province-wide contract.

What did the company get in exchange? Most important was a union agreement to revision in seniority clauses. Under the terms of previous contracts, the company had been forced to place men with long service in jobs to which they were not accustomed, when lay-offs became necessary. This proved costly.

Both the union and the company, therefore, won major concessions. The striking point about these concessions, by the company on the one hand and by the union on the other, is that the alterations made will appear to the outside observer as reasonable and just. They are the kind of concessions which should have been quickly made by the opposing sides without an intervening period of 109 days of idleness for plant and workers.

There is another highly interesting point in the terms of settlement, a point interesting not so much for the arrangement reached as for its implications. This is the agreement that the working week can be adjusted to not less than 32 hours for up to six weeks in one year as a way of avoiding layoffs in periods when the demand for cars is slack. One might be tempted to regard this as a concession to the union. Actually, though, this was a proposal by the company. The union had opposed it as merely "spreading the poverty." The reason for this attitude is to be found in cherished seniority rights. Once the union had agreed to a revision of previous seniority clauses, however, it is probable that it recognized this proposal as a protection for men with long service who might otherwise be laid off.

Why did the company advance such a plan in the first place? Probably to help avoid the costly shift of men with seniority to jobs in which they had little or no experience. There may, however, be an additional reason behind it. The next big fight between companies and the union in the automotive industry is almost certain to be over the guaranteed annual wage. Despite arguments advanced against it, it appears that such a guarantee is not impossible—a textile firm at Hamilton has just signed such an agreement. If the company is permitted to reduce the work week in slack times, it can test the efficacy of such an agreement and at the same time demonstrate to the union what would appear to be the only method by which an annual wage can be guaranteed. The automotive industry, subject to sharp fluctuations in demand, can hardly be expected to match the Hamilton textile firm's guarantee of year-round 40-hour-work-weeks, but it might be able to offer something approaching a guarantee of an average work week of a shorter duration. This is pure speculation. Still, it is unlikely that any of the terms of the final settlement were reached by the company and the union without both parties to the agreement giving the most careful consideration to all the implications of the settlement terms.

THE POTHEAD WHALE ON BROADWAY

A girl's best friend is the pothead whale
It feeds the mink she gets from her male admirers.

This may not be great poetry, but it is rather difficult to wax poetic about a pothead male dying on a Newfoundland beach. Nevertheless, just as great oaks from little acorns grow, so will the glamor girl of the future be clad in garments which owe their luxuriousness to the pothead whale's inability to live on dry land.

Newfoundland fishermen, for centuries, have been practising the art of herding the whales close to shore, where they eventually run aground. As the salvage service for whales is notoriously poor, these stranded mammals eventually die. Then all the fishermen have to do is to chop them up. If you have ever chopped up a whale, you know that, monumental though this task may be, it is dwarfed into insignificance by the problem of what to do with a few thousand pounds of whalemeat once you have lugged it home and stored it on the back porch. Problems like this have been known to cause quite a stink in an otherwise happy household.

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland has now come up with a happy solution for this dilemma. He has invited mink ranchers to set up business in Canada's newest province, feeding their little walking bank-rolls on the meat of the beached whale.

So eventually, you see, the pothead whale is going to be strolling along Broadway and basking under the neon lights of Times Square, comfortably ensconced on the shoulders of some striking blonde, who will be having a whale of a time, no doubt.

THE CROWD

More good than bad among the crowd;
More gentle minds than harsh and proud;
In village small and city great
More friendliness than bitter hate.

Who checks the passing throng will find
The few are mean, the many kind.
And for the troubled, weak and old
More pity than indifference cold.

More love for peace than constant strife.
More care for what is best in life.
Though wrong seems plainer to the sight,
Much greater is the love of right.

More faith than faithlessness is here;
More hope and confidence than fear.
Never a crowd has formed but had
More good men in it than were bad.

OFF THE RECORD

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 1, 1935.

The Salvation Army Corps in this city will celebrate on Sunday, February 3, the 51st anniversary of the commencement of its work here in 1884 under the guidance of the much liked and highly esteemed Captain Nellie Ryerson. During the years the Army here has been led by seventy-five commanding officers. The officers in charge here at the present are Adjutant and Mrs. A. W. Martin.

During the month of January 369 transients were given shelter during the night at the police station.

The newly formed Canadian Concert Association of Belleville has now a membership of 502. Numerous Trenton residents are joining the association.

From our file copy at this time in 1895: "Plans have been approved for the re-building of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here, which was destroyed by fire and work will be commenced in the near future. The congregation greatly appreciates the kindness of Mr. Robert Bogle in granting the use of his business college in which to hold services.

The reception tendered to relatives and friends by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Massey at their home in the 5th concession of Sidney township, on the occasion of the 50th or golden anniversary of their marriage was largely attended and the event was most enjoyable. The anniversary was observed on January 28th, in error the date was given as June 28.

30 YEARS AGO

February 1, 1925.

Mr. John Robinson, son of Alderman A. Robinson of this city, has been promoted to be instructor on the air brake car in place of Mr. George McIntosh who has been assigned to other duties. Mr. Robinson has been in the service of the Grand Trunk Railway and the Canadian National Railways for thirty-two years, being at the time of his promotion engineer on the fast trains 14, 15, 16 and 17.

The street parade of Harvey's Greater Minstrels attracted much attention at noon today.

In a hockey match here in the Interscholastic League between Campbellford and Belleville, the local boys won, the score being 4 to 3. It was a hectic battle with a sensational finish as Belleville did not score the winning goal until within a minute of the sounding of the final gong. The following composed the teams: Belleville: Colling, Hurley, Cole, Ross, Galway and Townsend; subs, C. Ketcheson and D. Ketcheson; Campbellford: Fox, Thomas, W. Baker, C. Baker, Iby and Reynolds; subs, Blue and Craighead.

From our file copy at this time in 1895: "Houses that would rent from $6. to $8. per month are not to be had here, so says a citizen who has been looking for one. Decidedly Belleville is progressing at present."

40 YEARS AGO

February 1, 1915.

Mrs. Julia McCloud, widow of Norman McCloud, and without doubt the oldest person in this city, died at an early hour this morning. She was in her 93th year and was born in Stormont County. When a child she came to this district and resided in Thurlow Township and also in Madoc. For upwards of seventy years she made her home in this city. She was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Dan Cameron is in Toronto to attend the Mendelssohn concert.

Mr. J. B. Dutton, implement agent here for six years, will leave shortly to reside in Kingston. Many friends regret his departure from the city.

Miss Peterson of the Ritchie Store went to Port Hope today.

50 YEARS AGO

February 1, 1905.

During January in this city there were twelve marriages, fifteen deaths and nine births.

Sandy Burrows refereed a Trent Valley League hockey match in Colborne last night between Cobourg and Colborne. The latter team won, the score being 7 to 6.

Mr. Harry Johnston of Toronto, formerly of this city, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. Ernest A. Creeper of Claire, Mich., and formerly of this city, is here on a visit to the scenes of his early days. He left here when he was twelve years of age.

Old Proverb Washed Up

(Windsor Star)

There is an old saw about "taking in each other's washing." Its purport is that one doesn't get rich that way, the efforts of one offsetting those of the other, without benefit to either.

Two ingenious women of the English village of Oldham, however, have given a new wrinkle to this proverb. They have proved, to their own satisfaction at least, it is false. The ruse is simplicity itself, even though a peculiar quirk of mind was necessary to see it.

These two industrious housewives merely exchanged washing. They charged each other for doing what each should have done herself. It didn't require any more work. But it enabled them to stamp each other's unemployment insurance cards. After a reasonable period, they fired each other and collected unemployment insurance benefits. And the devious scheme seems to have no loopholes in it.

If continued, however, it may bust up of its own accord. How long can one woman do another's washing, giving entire satisfaction? We can visualize the day when Mrs. Groggins complains to Mrs. Moggins the sheets aren't as white, or the shirts not ironed as neatly, as they should be. When that day comes, the neat little fraud will end in a tirade of bitter language.

Frankness Pays Off

(Hamilton Spectator)

Two neatly-done forced landings in these parts-one by a Mount Hope-bound Silver Star jet trainer in a snowstorm near Watertown, the other by a Mount Hope-based reserve-force Mustang fighter after an engine failure near Guelph—have provided a happy break in the recent chain of fatal RCAF flying accidents.

They have also provided a lesson which the air force might well ponder: That frankness pays off much better than secrecy in such cases. After both forced landings, RCAF officers co-operated in letting the public know what had happened and in permitting the pilots to tell their stories. The result was that the service received credit for the good airmanship which prevented more serious damage to the aircraft and lessened the danger both to the men in them and to people on the ground. This is a pleasant contrast to the secrecy which has surrounded other recent accidents. Some mishaps are unavoidable in the training and operation of an all-weather air force, but secrecy always leads to a suspicion in the public mind that something other than the working of the law of averages in weather, mechanical trouble or pilot error is being concealed and that, in a vague and sinister way, "something is wrong" in the service.

New Zealand Cheese

(Ottawa Journal)

In his statement to the Commons on the import of 2,250,000 pounds of New Zealand cheese into Canada, Trade Minister Howe was somewhat less than frank. In fact, most persons who read or who heard his explanation, and did not know all the facts, would get an entirely wrong impression of the transaction—might wonder why dairy farmers across Canada were up in arms over the deal, and why 3,000 Ontario farm leaders, meeting in Toronto, protested so vigorously and threatened a mass march on Parliament Hill.

• • •

As far as he went Mr. Howe stuck to the bald facts. Trouble was he did not go far enough. There is no moral or legal ground for keeping New Zealand cheese out of this country, there is a duty on it when brought in and there was a verbal agreement in 1952 whereby New Zealand agreed not to send cheese to Canada owing to difficulties we were having reestablishing our cheese on the British market.

But when Mr. Howe, apparently with Mr. Gardiner's blessing, said circumstances had changed and there appeared no good reason for our insisting that the gentleman's agreement be continued, he was stretching the truth a little too far.

The circumstances which made necessary the 1952 verbal agreement with New Zealand have changed little, if at all. We have 10 to 15 million pounds of surplus cheese in Canada today. Our market in the United Kingdom is nothing like it once was. Ontario producers themselves have had to subsidize sales to that market; in fact, have raised a fund of more than $1,000,000 to offer a more attractive price to British buyers. That fund—two cents on every pound of cheese made in Ontario—came out of the pockets of dairy farmers.

Further, Ontario cheese producers are receiving assistance from both the Federal and Ontario Governments in order to operate their marketing scheme and try to sell surplus cheese abroad. If cheaper New Zealand cheese is allowed unrestricted entry, this money could well be wasted. Another point missed by Mr. Howe was that the duty on New Zealand cheese is only one cent a pound—about five per cent.—hardly worth mentioning when costs in the two countries are compared.

• • •

Actually this New Zealand cheese was no more needed in Canada than is snow at the North Pole. It only adds to surplus troubles here, disrupts the market and is an additional source of worry to dairy farmers, who already have enough troubles. It may help some Canadian manufacturer to sell products to New Zealand, a dubious advantage if it means less buying power for many thousand Canadian farmers.

Cash Value Of College

(Kiplinger Letter)

What is a college education worth in money? Here are estimates: Cost about $1,500 a year; four years, $6,000—that much outlay by a student. There are additional expenditures by the institution, of course for education is subsidized.

The lifetime earnings of a college graduate average $268,000; the lifetime earnings of a high shool graduate, $165,000.

For the first eight years of work there is little difference between incomes of the two. But after age 30. high school graduates earn $3,500 a year, college graduates $5,000. From ages 45 to 54, high schoolers average $4,500, college graduates $8,000.

Lawless Lawyers

(Edmonton Journal)

"Who will watch the watchmen?" asked the ancient poet, and the question seems appropriate in view of some recent antics by the alleged guardians of law and order in various parts of the world.

Last month the attorney-general of Alabama was arrested on a charge of complicity in the murder of his elected successor; his alleged accomplices were the district attorney and a deputy sheriff of the town where the killing took place. Now from Panama comes the news that a prominent lawyer has confessed to shooting the late President Remon at the instigation of the vice-president. His reward was to be the post of minister of justice in the new cabinet.

There hasn't been anything quite like this since that unfortunate occasion, during the Wars of the Roses, when the then Lord Chief Justice of England was accused of trying to murder one of his colleagues on the bench. His defence was that he didn't know it was against the law.

Chaperon Is Mourned

The Times of London

An awe-inspiring bevy of great ladies must have been sitting around the Cambridge Union the other night when the young men carried by a comfortable majority, a motion deploring the disappearance of the chaperon.

The detestable Mrs. Palmer was certainly there, very happy, as usual, to play duenna to the Miss Dashwoods—if only they would give her the chance.

Well - upholstered figures, strayed from a later generation and out of the Du—Maurier pictures, raised their lorgnettes approvingly at the light blue squires of dames in eclipse.

It is the prerogative of youth to take a romatic view of the past, and the Cambridge House evidently did that, judging from one speaker (he was a visitor from Oxford) who sighed for the good old days between the wars, vanished beyond recall, in which splendid undergraduates oiled their racing cars with Benedictine.

The romatic view is all very well, but, as Gibbon remarked, a more melancholy duty is imposed on the historian, and he has to record that the chaperon went out because she found the job more nuisance than it was worth.

No British mother, it was pointed out, could tell what position she was bringing up her daughter to fill. She did not know whether she would be rich or poor, have a good position or none at all, live in Piccadilly or in Umata. British girls were so adventurous that, unlike their French sisters, they would go anywhere and do anything.

Anyone Believe It?

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

It was said in a British court that this is the age of the Bikini bathing suit and the pin-up girl and that nudity was not suggestive any more. That's a good argument if you can get away with it.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The custom of having liquor in business offices is on the decline, according to a chartered accountant friend of mine who has frequent contact with executives in many lines of enterprise.

A few years ago, it was not at all uncommon for an executive of senior rank to have a regular little bar in his desk, or in a handy cabinet in his office. Just as naturally as he would pull a box of cigars out of his desk to offer one to a caller, he would, perhaps at noon, before lunch, or near the end of the business day, invite his visitor to have a short fast one. I have seen in office furniture stores handsome executive desks with a set of drawers on one side, and a swing-out cellarette on the other, with shelves with holes in them suitable for bottles and glasses. In many a private office I have seen a crock come out of a filing cabinet or a drawer full of statistics.

But I must say, in agreement with the comment of my chartered accountant friend, that the custom appears to be quietly lapsing.

"A few years ago," says her, "business was more inspirational than it is today. It depended more on personal contact and personal relations. I would say that precisely in proportion to the growth and importance of Canadian business, personal relations, as a factor in business has declined. The day of the jovial, hearty salesman is drawing to a close. Business done in smoke-filled rooms is small business now. Big business has to be done in air-conditioned offices by clear-headed men, many of whom you would slap on the back about as readily as you would slap a strange grizzly bear.

"Some of the fun and fancy has gone out of business generally. And as the character who has to study the accounts, I must say it has greatly improved the mechanics of Canadian industry when the machinery of business, rather than the executives, got oiled."

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

After two years of treatment with medicine and shots for so-called "arthritis", I realized I was steadily getting no better. So I discontinued the doctor's treatment, wrote for your pamphlet on Rheumatiz, began Ca, D, and B complex as you suggest. That was in April, 54. Have never seen my doctor since. All of the pain has left my knees and I feel fine. Married 46 years, now in my 70th year and hoping we can celebrate our golden wedding.

Dr. Brady

Drat it, I was about to subject the amiable Mrs. E. J. C. to a brisk round of choice grade A invective. In short why in the—why do so many readers start on the Ca and D and the B-complex and become interested in I only months later, if at all?

But by bitter experience I have learned at last not to blow my top like that until I have checked and double-checked.

This precaution probably saves me some embarrassment. On the other hand, when I discover on examination of the rheumatiz pamphlet that I have omitted mention of iodin deficiency as one of the factors that must be corrected, I am so perturbed that—well, it's lucky for you poor souls with the rheumatiz that I can put these petty problems out of my mind and hie to the bowling green this beautiful sunny afternoon. After the game I'll decide whether to scrap the last printing of the Calcium and Rheumatiz pamphlet and order a new printing to include instructions for correcting iodin deficiency, or whether to continue the pamphlet as is, and send along with it the Iidon Ration pamphlet, without charge.

Meanwhile let me remind you that in my judgment joint disability of more than a year's duration is usually not arthritis at all (joint inflammation) but rheumatiz (degeneration of joint tissues) due to prolonged, probably lifelong nutritional deficiency.

A GREAT MESSAGE

Yesterday Glen Cunningham spoke at a high school in our part of the country and it was my privilege to hear him.

Many readers will recall Cunningham as one of the fastest runners of all time. When he was a child, he had an accident which was so serious that nobody believed he would ever be able to walk again. By sheer courage and the faith of both the boy and his parents, he got up out of an invalid's bed, learned to walk all over again as if he had been a baby; then set himself to be an athlete. A world record which he established more than twenty years ago still stands—one of four world records never to have been broken.

Glen Cunningham now goes about the country speaking to high school students on the living of an active, purposeful life. He tells them what it means to surmout difficulties. He points out pathways which lead to real success. He is particularly vehement in his denunciation of beverage alcohol, or any other variety of narcotic. He says no one can use these things without damaging either his present usefulness or his potential.

In the midst of all the ballyhoo today, it is good to hear a voice like this raised in behalf of straight, clean living and one by a man who gives his message in terms young people can understand and appreciate.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MAGIC MIAMI

After an absence of half a dozen years, I have returned to Miami and Miami Beach for a mental, bodily, and spiritual cleansing and renewal. In all directions you view an amazing miracle, the dream of two men—Carl Fisher and Jim Allison. They literally pumped a city from the bay about Miami. They had little to work on except their faith and undefeatable courage. Theirs was the vision that transformed a jungle into a paradise!

It all took faith, daring and will. Nothing was too difficult. The growth of this section has not a parallel in all the history of America. There are more hotels here than in the city of New York- And there are permanent homes by the thousand, with new ones seemingly poking their noses out of the sand each year. For every class of people there is no other home or vacation land so beautiful and healthful.

But it's the picture of the dream that has been so graphically realized that stirs me as I drive about this section and see magnificent buildings, totalling into the millions, all to give health and happiness to people from all over this continent. I see cars from every section of the United States and Canada, and many foreign lands. There is something here for the humblest and the richest. God's sunshine made it possible for the giants, whose vision brought it all to fruition. Even discounting all this, the miracle remains! It's magic Miami!

In less than fifty years, and scarcely more than thirty, all this development has been brought about. Even a costly depression couldn't stop Miami or Miami Beach. Every section of the state, a well, has realized from the faith of others. When I first visited Miami it was a small city. It is a metropolis today with its increasing interests and its two great newspapers to tell the people about it all. I can't help but think, however, of the one hotel on the Beach when I first came to look, and later to wonder!

Just One Way To End Party

(New Orleans Item)

A New Orleans woman planning a cocktail party thought the invitations ought to read "from 6 to 8," but her husband objected that this would appear to be telling the guests when to go home. So the invitations merely stated "cocktails at 6," with the inevitable result. Long after midnight the party was still going strong.

Shortly after 1 the police arrived. Somebody in the neighborhood had complained, and the racket would have to stop. The host was outraged, said he couldn't imagine one of his neighbors making a complaint. But the sergeant was adamant. A complaint had been received.

That broke up the party. As the last guest filed out, the hostess turned to her husband and murmured: "I wonder who called the police?"

Replied her weary husband: I did.

What Is C.G.I.T.?

By RUTH HOWARD

This is Christian Youth Week, (January 30 to February 6): so let us have a closer look at and clearer understanding of one of youth's great movements.

Canadian Girls in Training, familiarly known as C.G.I.T., is a Christian Education program for girls twelve to seventeen. Its concern is the development of Christian beliefs, character, attitude and better every-day living.

C.G.I.T. was started in 1915 by a group of women in the Protestant churches and the Y.W.C.A. It is now promoted and directed by a committee in the Department of Christian Education of the Canadian Council of Churches. Co-operating in the committee are the Churches of Christ (Disciples), Baptist, Presbyterian and United Church.

The life of Jesus gave inspiration to the C.G.I.T. movement; "Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man," (Luke 2.52). From this text, we have derived our purpose, which we repeat at meetings:

> As a Canadian Girl in Training under the leadership of Jesus, it is my purpose to—> Cherish Health,
> Seek Truth,
> Know God,
> Serve Others,
> And thus, with His help, become the girl God would have me be.

What better way could youth try to grow into responsible Christian citizens and church members?

ACTIVITIES

The activities for the year (September till June) include handcrafts, Mission Study, Bible Study, service to their own Church, at least two community projects and an affiliation Service with the Woman's Missionary Society. The community projects consist of such efforts as packing Christmas hampers for needy families, taking magazines, scrap books and candy to the Hastings County Home and presenting some gift to the local hospital, usually the Pediatrics Ward. The girls are well trained in business procedure and leading worship services.

One thing that gives meaning to an organization is a uniform, and the C.G.I.T. uniform marks one as a soldier in Christ's army. It consists of a plain navy skirt, a white middy with navy collar and cuffs, long black tie in a friendship knot at the waist, and the long loose bottom of the middy rolled up three times and fastened securely at the waist.

No jewellery can be worn and shoes are plain navy, black or brown. A C.G.I.T. insignia is worn on the left sleeve, just above the elbow. Above this is worn navy maple leaves if you are a leader or officer, plus a green one if you have been to camp. Below the insignia the chevrons or 'books' are worn if the year's work has been completed to the satisfaction of the Department of Christian Education and the group and leaders have come up to the standards required of them.

A girl hasn't enjoyed everything in C.G.I.T., until she has attended the ten-day summer camp. In the Quinte district, it is held at the Quin-Mo-Lac on Moira Lake, and last year it was my pleasure to attend as a camp counsellor. The days and evenings are filled with educational activities, singing, swimming instruction, campcraft, Vespers and camp-fires. From the morning flag-raising till the last prayers at bed-time, there is no time for anyone to be idle or homesick. Everyone makes new friends and leaders join in the fun and fellowship as heartily as the girls.

All the groups in the city join in one church for a Candlelight Service at Christmas and a Mother and Daughter banquet during Youth Week. This year's banquet is being held at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Wednesday evening.

At the close of a regular meeting, a day in camp, a Candlelight service or a banquet, the group joins crossed hands and sings "Taps":

Day is done,
Gone the sun,
From the hills, from the lake,
from the sky;
All is well,
Safely rest,
God is nigh!
"Thanks for the evening, comrade!"

Louise Dumais Only Woman To Run Marionette Theatre

Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—Louise Dumais gave private geography lessons in Europe and lived in old French castles to learn all about puppets.

Miss Dumais, a teacher at the Latav University institute of pedagogy, is perhaps the only Canadian woman to run a marionette theatre. Periodically, she and five assists—all Laval students — pile into a station wagon and take their 100 puppets on tour.

They've played in schools and parish halls in Quebec City, the Gaspe peninsula and the Lake St. John area and are planning tours of the Maritimes and western Quebec.

LEARNED IN EUROPE

So far Miss Dumais has been concentrating on children's shows —dramatizations of French-Canadian folklore and popular fairy tales. But she's considering offers to stage shows for adults and go on a night club tour, she says.

Miss Dumais, who holds a master of arts in social science from New York's Columba University, learned her unusual art in Europe. In 1950, she went to study popular arts in Paris under a one-year Quebec government scholarship.

Miss Dumais was taken on as a teacher in the French national education department's travelling courses.

The French government, she says, has bought many old castles in the provinces and uses them as schoolhouses where bands of travelling teachers give 10-week to two-week courses in nearly every conceivable subject. Priests, social workers, teachers and students attend.

"Only one was really luxurious. That was the Chateau de Boivre, near Poitiers. They told me it was supposed to be haunted but I never heard any clanking of chains at night."

She stayed in Europe for a year after her scholarship was over, borrowing money, doing odd jobs and translation work.

MARIONETTES EVERYWHERE

Miss Dumais had no working permit, so she gave private lessons —mainly in geography—to fill out her income.

Miss Dumais came back to Canada in 1952 and staged her first show—Cinderella—in the windows of a Quebec department store during the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

The fame of her troupe apparently has spread. Recently she got an invitation to play in the parish hall at Saulnierville, N.S., a village on the Bay of Fundy.

"I will get there as soon as I can organize a tour of the Maritimes," Miss Dumais says.

Coffee Houses In London Are Reviving

By DAVE MASON

LONDON (AP) — The coffee houses of Samuel Johnson's 18th-century London are reviving, but with plate glass and neon-lit facades.

A Londoner can buy a cup of coffee almost as readily as a cup of tea. About 150 coffee shops mushroomed in London during the last year and they're popping up now at the rate of two a week. Brightly incongruous among ancient soot-blackened business fronts, they flash exotic names like Moka, El Cubano, Chiquito, Sirocco and Mocamba.

BAR AND STOOLS

The typical shop has a tavern-like bar with high stools and a little cluster of knee-high plastic top tables with well upholstered chairs. Walls are painted or papered in splashy patterns broken with bright pin-up lamps.

Centre piece is the espresso coffee-making machine—an Italian or Swiss device with a forbidding battery of controls.

Arising from the business side of the machine is a row of half a dozen handles made like miniature baseball bats. The operator, many times a slick, black-haired Italian, pulls on a handle to force water just below the boiling point through finely ground coffee placed over a fine filter.

The product is a heavy, black liquid, too strong or bitter for many to drink straight. For the tender-tongued, there is "cappuccino"—coffee with milk heated and whipped to a froth by bubbling steam through it.

MORE COSTLY

Londoners are buying espresso at several times the cost of tea. Coffee houses get sixpence to one shilling sixpence a cup.

Tea can be had for twopence or threepence. Most coffee shops also have a full line of sandwiches and pastries.

Britons got coffee fever during the Second World War, according to one big London coffee importer. Tea was rationed then, but coffee wasn't.

But until the last two years most coffee was sold as an incidental part of other restaurant and cafe fare.

The coffee craze has at least one London pub operator worried, and he's fighting back. He converted one of his bars into a coffee bar and it swiftly became a paying proposition.

Lustre Shoes Shown By Shoemaker

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's shoemaker has presented a spring collection including lustre shoes with the gleam of mother of pearl and glinting shades like blue grotto colombine pink and absinthe yellow.

Smart women with nine or more guineas to spend can purchase colorful calf footwear in the latest lustre finish -a sheen like the polish on an opaque jewel. It's smart, too, to have a handbag to match.

The price covers high-heeled shell-cut pumps in honey kid, with pin-tucked vamp and wide-open toe, or a slim closed-in pump with toe and heel shaded in different colors. A shell pump with Louis heel and double-buckle decoration comes in poster red and grotto blue at 99s 6d.

PATENTS POPULAR

The most popular shoe is black patent, especially with gold nail-stud decorations on buckles and bows. A closed-in patent shoe has the under heel lined with red and other colors, matching the piping on the buckle front.

Newest phase is lustre calfskin imitating fabric. Cotton checks and candy stripes, white with pink and black lines, give shoes a colorful finish. They look like fabric, are smooth and washable calf and have the romantic name "Paris at Your Feet."

The trend this year is toward lighter shoes in colorful tones—absinthe yellow with heel and toe in pink or mauve, ivory teamed with jade, mountain ash with light sycamore and poster red with black.

The range covers styles with spiky heels, inch-high Louis heels similar to those that once tripped the French courts, and "tailored" square heels designed to give a town look to sporty shoes.

SMART SANDALS

The nudest numbers are rainbow-shaded sandals in lustre calf with narrow straps, all of different shades, held together by a colorless plastic panel.

Mules; shoes without back support of any kind, are smart and easy to wear. They have a built-in elastic arch arrangement that ensures the heel sticks with the wearer.

For evening there are jewelled numbers in gay shades of pink, yellow, red, jade and grotto blue and black with magnificent jewelled bows and straps. A black-and-gold or jade-and-gold cocktail shoe with halter back, jewelled all over, costs 25 guineas.

"Wow" is the name of the snappiest cocktail number of all, a lustre calf in pastel colors with huge bow of colored jewels set on an almost invisible panel of plastic.

FOUR MILLION RICHER

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Walter Kassell, 43, an aircraft industry employee, has sold his interest in a Utah uranium discovery for $4,000,000, he said Monday. Kassell said he was prospecting in a small plane last November when "that scintillator showed more than 15 times the normal reaction" for an area near Moab, Utah. When the offers got up to $4,000,000, he said "Okay."

Bridge Street Church W.A. Plans Activities

The Women's Auxiliary of Bridge Street United church held its opening meeting of the year in the S.S. rooms on Friday, with the usual January pot-luck luncheon and installation of new officers.

Mrs. Fairman and Mrs. Davis conducted the devotional service, reading from Revelations 3 and from St. John 10. Mrs. Fairman led in prayer.

The president spoke a few words of welcome to new and old members, and her appreciation of the fact that so many ladies had been able to come with the weather so unfavorable.

REPORTS GIVEN

All monthly and annual reports were given showing a most successful year. The members enjoyed Miss Helen Sulman's usual spritely annual report of the decorating committee. Mrs. Marsh announced that a meeting would be held Monday at 2.00 p.m., to organize an active Red Cross Society as the Red Cross was in need of a considerable amount of clothing and knitted wear.

Mrs. Marsh read the list of new officers and Mr. Davis conducted an installation service and gave a charge to all new officers and all members.

Rev. H. Davis in his short talk, expressed his amazement and admiration of pot-luck luncheons. He also spoke of the church's immediate problem of buying a new organ or renovating the old one, and the plan to have the leading expert in the country come and inspect and advise on what is best to do.

Mr. Davis congratulated officers and members for their splendid achievements of the past year and expressed his confidence in their work in the years to come.

Mrs. Fairman, in her reply, promised for herself and members to continue to help and serve and also thanked the ladies and officers for their assistance in the past year. She said, "All helped, none refused."

The ladies voted to help at the "Men's Tea" to be held in March. Dates were also set for the "Spring Tea" in May and the fall bazaar in November.

Hard Work and Sacrifice Helped Build Albert College

Editor's note: Following is a historical narrative as read by Miss Jessie Tuite, at Tabernacle United Church, last Sunday.

In 1855 the erection began of a substantial-looking, but architecturally undistinguished red brick building on College Hill, in the northern part of the City of Belleville, and was then known as Belleville Seminary.

In 1955, a beautifully proportioned stone building, set in spacious grounds, stands on Highway No. 2, at the western entrance of the city.

This is the present Albert College. This year she celebrates her 100th birthday, and it seems to be an appropriate time for looking back to the beginnings.

The source of a river is usually many miles from its widest part, and so the lie of Albert goes back to the time when a number of Christian men saw the necessity for an educational institution, which would enable their sons, and daughters, to go out into the world, fitted to be of service to their fellowmen.

NAME CHANGED

From Belleville Seminary, it became Albert University, then following the Union of Canadian Methodism, Albert College, a Secondary School, now in affiliation with Toronto University.

It is interesting to note that its charter stated, and I quote, "It was to be free from sectarian tenets, and religious tests, with no barriers against race or class, and students of both sexes to be admitted," so you see it was coeducational from the start.

I should like to read some extracts from the Christian Advocate of April 6, 1853. I quote, "Bro. Gardiner called attention to the committee appointed by the Bay of Quinte Conference in establishing an institution of learning, to be under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada," and in November, 1853 the Rev. J. H. Johnson was appointed general agent and his name appears in most of the excerpts.

We read of muddy roads, lack of transportation and inclement weather, retarding the collection of funds so optimistically begun.

Many interesting sidelights, on this fund collecting are found in the Chronicle, such as "The Rev. Father Tinalin, the R.C. Priest in Cobourg, "Came forward readily and entered his name for a respectable sum."

From the beginning, self-sacrifice is evident — Several of our brethren have become personally responsible to the builder for his pay. John Clubine of Newmarket, gave his meagre savings of 12 pounds, 10 shillings to the cause."

PROPERTY MORTGAGED

The largest subscriptions were obtained in Waterdown amounting to $700. A good farmer of Dumfries circuit subscribed $100 payable in the falls of 1855 and 56, but learning how the building is progressing and sympathizing with those noble brethren who composed the building committee, mortgaged personal property and paid the agent his whole subscription last week."

Not only was this spirit of sacrifice evident, in those who contributed to the fund, but in all the members of the committee who worked untiringly.".

Of the general agent we read, "He plows through mountains of snow, contends with prevailing rivers of mud and the ignorance of some of the people in order to gather the money. An example of one man was, "If a man had ten or twenty dollars and was not the least in debt, he might spare, as well as not, didn't know but that it would be well enough, to give something to the Seminary, as no doubt it was a good institution" (some people today have about the same idea.)

Mr. Johnson tells how they were often compelled to listen to the most violent tirades against "larnin," "edication," "pride creeping into the Church," "larned preachers", etc.

After much thought and debate Belleville was finally chosen as the site of the New Seminary and on July 12th, 1854 we read, "The contract for the erection of the principal building has been executed, and the work has now been several days in operation. The amount realized is about £6,200 and added to this £310 for the site and incidental expenses — seven thousand pounds must be realized before completion of the work.

"This may seem a very large sum of money, but as a great philosopher has said, "Objects are large or small, only by comparison. It is not a large sum for the magnitude and importance of the institution. The building is to be made of brick, four stories, with solid walls, the size 130x48 feet on the ground, with two wings extending 50 feet each on the rear of the building."

FOR 400 STUDENTS

The plan was to furnish accommodation for 400 students and of this 400 — 150 could be boarders and there were apartments for three families. The College functioned from 1856 to 1920 on College Hill when it moved to the new quarters.

On December 24th, 1856, the finance committee reports a slackening off in the matter of subscriptions, as large sums had been advanced by the committee and paid out of their own pockets.

An earnest appeal was made to have the subscription paid up. In response to this the Rev. Thos. Webster pledged himself to be one of the fifty to give £100 for this purpose.

In 1857, the Seminary was in full swing, and in February, 1858 —application was made to parliament to alter the Charter given the Seminary, so as to give it university powers to grant degrees. This was granted and it functioned as a university until the Union of Methodism, when as stated, it became a Secondary School.

From its beginning Albert has had outstanding men as Principals. The first was the Rev. Mr. Johnson, then Dr. Carmen, Dr. Jacques, Dr. Dyer, Dr. Baker, Dr. Bishop, Dr. Howard, and now Rev. Mr. McKenzie.

In the old College a lady principal presided over the girls, the first Miss Lovelace, then Miss Gardiner, who is still remembered and loved by a host of students. In the New Albert, the name was changed to Dean of Women, and I was privileged to be the first, and the post is now held by my successor Mrs. Gillis.

HALL DESTROYED

In April, 1917, a fire occurred which destroyed that part of the College known as Massey Hall, and most of the class rooms were in that section. The turning of the wind about one a.m. and the splendid work of the fire department made the saving of the main building possible. The fire occurred on a Friday night and the mayor of the city sent word to Dr. Baker that the Quinte Hotel had made reservations for the girl students, and many citizens came forward with offers, but fortunately this was not necessary as the sleeping quarters were not damaged. Dr. Baker, in order to have no break in the work of the College managed to have temporary class rooms ready, so work began, as usual, on Monday morning.

From this time on, the College had many difficulties. By the spring of 1917 most of the boys had gone overseas.

Even before the fire Dr. Baker had started to raise an endowment fund of $100,000, but after the fire it became evident the old building was inadequate and engineers examining it advised against trying to repair it.

Then the undaunted Dr. Baker began to dream of a new College in another part of the city. Two generous citizens, Mr. R. J. Graham and Mr. Harry Ackerman each contributed $50,000, and the College has named the Boys' residence after Mr. Graham, and the dining hall after Mr. Ackerman.

The new school opened as a boys' school, with a capacity registration, but in 1929 depression struck, and students were called home because of financial difficulties, until less than 20 remained, and some of them on work programs.

In order to enable the school to carry on the faculty took a 50% cut in salary, and even the remaining 50 was not forthcoming but not a single teacher left.

Dr. Bishop resigned and it was at that time the board secured Dr. Howard. He devoted his full time to preaching, advertising Albert, trying to think of ways of cutting expenses further.

DECIDED TO ADMIT GIRLS

Then it was decided to have girls again. This was a far sighted idea and a few years after the Manor House was bought. By his untiring labors, furniture was repaired, in dining room and class rooms, in the boys' residence rooms redecorated. No task was too hard or menial for him.

The wives of members of faculty did everything possible to help the school. Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. McMullen, Mrs. Franklin, worked early and late.

Now those days are over, and Albert has its largest registration. New buildings are required and this anniversary year seems a fitting time to lauch its campaign, and the objective will be met, for there is more to Albert College than stone, plaster, and playing fields. It is something intangible, perhaps for lack of more fitting word one may call it "soul".

Those now familiar words of Mr. Churchill apply to Albert for truly she was built by sacrifice, blood, sweat, and tears, (for she has never been wealthy) and no doubt her long struggle has helped develop this "something" that is peculiarly hers. The years have brought many changes but through them all the soul of Albert, and the spirit of self sacrifice have never waned.

MORE HONORS FOR "LADY OF THE LAKE"

At the Lakeshore swimming pool in Toronto, where she trained for her two great aquatic performances in 1954, Marilyn Bell received further recognition for her feats when she was presented with the Lou Marsh trophy as Canada's outstanding athlete of 1954. It was the second time in six years that the award was won by a Lakeshore swimmer. Cliff Lumsden captured it in 1949 for world's marathon championship at the CNE. Although Marilyn's historic conquest of Lake Ontario in September is still fresh in Canadians' minds, many have overlooked her victory over the world's best swimmers last summer when she led all women entrants in the Atlantic City marathon. Theatre Diary For February

(By ROBERT TANNER)

It looks as though February may prove to be a busy time for Belleville theatregoers, with many varied attractions competing for their interest and support.

First and foremost, of course, comes the Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival which brings a total of seven fine performances to the Belleville Collegiate auditorium on the nights of February 15, 16, 18, and 19, with a matinee on Saturday the 19th. Competing for the Calvert Regional trophy, the $100 cash award and the chance to go to Regina for the Dominion Finals, are four outstanding full-length plays, "Joan of Lorraine," entered by the Belleville Theatre Guild; "Noah," an interesting treatment of the old story by the Peterborough Little Theatre; "The Moon in the Yellow River," an Irish comedy-drama to be played by the Ottawa Little Theatre adn the French language entry, "Marlbrough S'en Va T'en Guerre, by Le Theatre du Pont Neuf from Hull.

TRANSLATION PROVIDED

(Those of us whose French is getting rather rusty are assured that a very full English synopsis will be issued to the audience.)

In addition, the Saturday Matinee will feature three award-winning short plays, "The Rehearsal" by the Ottawa Little Theatre Workshop, "L'Imbecile" (also in French) by Le Theatre du Pont Neuf and "Two Sides to a Tortoise" by our own Belleville group. All in all, it sounds like an exciting week, reaching a thrilling climax on Saturday night when the adjudicator, Andre Van Gyseghem from Britain, pronounces judgment.

Another event of considerable local interest is the presentation on February 3rd and 4th of "More Than Meets the Eye" by the B.C.I.V.S. Drama Club, under the direction of Clare Kelso. Described as a rollicking comedy of mistaken identity and masquerade this should provide a merry evening of escape from the cares and worries of this world. As always, we look forward to some expert acting on the part of our young students.

Further afield, but still in the amateur sphere, is the performance of "Tom Jones", a sparkling operetta by Edward German, by the Eaton Operatic Society. This show is scheduled for the nights of February 8th to 12th, inclusive, in the Eaton Auditorium, Toronto.

INTERESTING PLANS

Turning now to the professional theatre, we find the Crest with very interesting plans for the spring season. For the next two weeks, "The Biggest Thief in Town" gives George McCowan another leading role, this time under the direction of Henry Kaplan, one of the CBC's most successful TV directors.

On February 15, the Crest presents the North American premiere of "Marching Song," by one of Britain's most outstanding young playwrights, John Whiting. This production will be notable for one of Budd Knapp's rare stage appearances; Basil Coleman will direct.

The list of plays announced for the remainder of the season includes Ostrovky's "Diary of a Scoundrel"; "Meeting at Night", the North American Premiere of a new James Bridie comedy; a Canadian play, "Gift of a Serpent" by Stanley Mann; "The Prisoner" by Bridget Boland; Anita Loos' evergreen "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and an adaptation of "The Black Arrow" by Robert Louis Stevenson.

NATIONAL BALLET

At the Royal Alexandra, the National Ballet of Canada is presenting a two weeks' season which will include, among such firm favorites as Coppelia and a full length version of Swan Lake, a new ballet by Anthony Tudor, Offenbach in the Underworld.

This is a musical month at the Royal Alex., since February 14, sees a very welcome return visit of that successful Canadian show, "Sunshine Town", Mavor Moore's tuneful setting of Stephen Leacock's famous book. Those of you who missed this happy show last month are being given another chance; take the advice of one who has seen it and don't miss it this time!

THIRD FESTIVAL

The month of February will see a decided acceleration in the pace of preparations for the third Stratford Festival, which runs this year from June 27 to August 27 and will present "Julius Caesar," "The Merchant of Venice" and a revival of "Oedipus Rex." An innovation this year is the season of music from July 9, to August 6, presenting concerts by the Hart House orchestra under the direction of Dr. Boyd Neel, with such famous soloists as Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, Isaac Stern, Lois Marshall, Alexander Schneider and Glenn Gould.

Women's Institute

CARMEL W.I.

The January meeting of the Carmel W.I. met at the home of Mrs. Percy Reynolds, with the president, Mrs. Lattone, presiding.

There were 15 members, four visitors and four children present.

The standing committees gave their reports and communications and letters were read and discussed.

Mrs. Moorman in a letter, thanked everyone who had sent flowers and cards, during her recent stay in the hospital.

Mrs. Lattone voiced appreciation for those taking her place at the December meeting when there was a death in her family.

The secretary read an interesting report from Mrs. MacPhatter and Mrs. Allan Gowthorpe gave current events.

Mrs. Demechenzie thanked the W.I. for the Christmas box.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE

It was decided a nominating committee be appointed to handle the slate of officers for the annual meeting in March. Mrs. Allan Gowthorpe, Mrs. Bill Rodberg and Mrs. A. Whitmore were chosen.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Earl Dafoe, convener, who had as her topic "Health". She opened with a sing-song and chose as a topic "How to Postpone Old Age". "Old age is something that comes to each and everyone; but we should learn to be happy; do not be the rocking chair type and waste your lives when you could be doing something useful; keep busy; engage in various activities; be self confident; enjoy music and painting. Forcible retirement is unwise."

Mrs. Wayne Demille gave a reading "The Morning," and Miss Mildred Jones another "The New Year". A contest "Naming Domestic Animals Useful to Man," was held with Mrs. Allan Gowthorpe and Mrs. Demechenzie as winners.

Mrs. A. Whitmore moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Reynolds for her hospitality.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

Loss of Sight, Sound Hold No Terror for Helen Keller

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

EASTON, Conn. (AP)—For most of us, aging is a process associated with dimming vision, fading hearing, greying hair, maybe ultimately a wheelchair.

But ordinary rules don't apply to Helen Keller, blind and deaf since she was 19 months old. Loss of sight and sound hold no terrors for her. Even her well coiffed hair must give her pleasant thoughts, for in her special world where fingers replace eyes the color grey is "a soft shawl around the shoulders."

As for a wheelchair, an airplane seat would be more appropriate. For next week, nearing 75, a serene, happy and still vigorous Helen Keller sets off on a five-month flying tour which will take her once more around the world.

The 40,000-mile trip — on which she will be accompanied by Polly Thomson, her Scottish companion of 40 years — is part of Miss Keller's job as consultant to the American Foundation for Overseas Blind.

ALWAYS GETS ACTION

"Helen's contribution is mostly inspiration," says Eric Boulter, field director of the overseas foundation and himself sightless. "Just by being in a country, she gets a whole nation steamed up about the condition of its handicapped."

The first miracle of Helen Keller was that through patient training and her own fierce determination, her mind burst the walls of darkness and silence and her tongue, once dumb, was trained to speak. Once those who were thus doubly afflicted were considered little better than idiots and forgotten. Helen Keller gave them new life and hope.

Helen Keller was born normal, but her voice and sight were locked in darkness by a babyhood illness. The liberation of her keen mind did not begin until she was 7, when Anne Sullivan Macy came to the Keller home in Tuscumbia, Ala., as her teacher.

Mrs. Macy found a little savage who tyrannized her family, writhing on the floor when crossed. With infinite patience, Mrs. Macy won the affection and confidence of the little creature. Then she taught Helen a sort of game — spelling out in the manual alphabet in one of the child's hands the name of objects the other hand held.

One memorable day the teacher pumped cold spring water over one hand, spelling "water" in the other. Like an explosion, Helen suddenly knew there was a connection. Before nightfall she had learned the name of 30 things around her.

Three years later Helen was determined to learn to speak. After 11 lessons with a special teacher came the day when she was to say, slowly and in a strained voice, "now I am not dumb." She had forced her entrance into a new world and she never left it.

Her world of touch and smell is unique. She can tell much about a person from his handshake. "Hands I meet are dumbly eloquent to me," she once wrote. "The touch of hands is an impertinence."

Friendly, gay, healthy and hard working, Helen Keller has crammed more exciting experiences into her lifetime than most people ever do. Visiting their home, Arcan Ridge, a few days ago, I found Miss Keller and Miss Thomson flying around in the ordinary dither of list making, packing and winding up odds and ends in connection with their trip.

The handsome white clapboard, green-shuttered colonial house, sitting high above a country road, is the second built on the site. In 1947 when Helen and Polly were in Greece studying post-war conditions among Europe's blind, their home burned. With it went furnishings, her priceless braille library and the manuscript of a biography of Anne Sullivan Macy, her brilliant and patient childhood teacher.

Helen reacted with dismay to the destruction of the gifts and treasures from all over the world and, of course, the library. But about the manuscript over which she had worked for years, she shrugged.

"I'll just write it again," she said. "It was probably too sentimental anyway."

She has, too, and it's scheduled for fall publication.

"LISTENS" TO MUSIC

She attends musical events regularly and, from vibrations in the wooden floor, follows the score. She "listens" to radio by placing her hands on a balsa sounding board and can usually identify stations by the staccato vibrations of the announcers' voices.

Her sense of smell is as keen as her fingers are sensitive. She can pin down a perfume, by name and maker, instantly, and Van Wyck Brooks, a writing neighbor, was amazed to find she could tell, by odor and texture, the difference between white and purple lilacs.

Religion, based on an unshakeable belief in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, plays an important part in her life. She knows her way around the Bible as well as she knows her way around her own home.

WHAT WOMAN GUEST WEARS TO FORMAL DAY-TIME WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please advise me? I've been to quite a few weddings, mostly of the semi-formal type, some informal ones. But now I've just received a formal invitation to a church ceremony and to the reception following. The bride-to-be is the daughter of the president of my husband's company, and I know it's to be a very large, very large, very formal wedding. It's to be a daytime wedding. What type of dress should I wear? Street-length or floor-length? Hat? And would it be correct for me to wear a black dress: (Black is most becoming to me, and I usually wear a black dress or suit.) — Wedding Guest

To this large, formal, daytime wedding, you would correctly wear a street-length dress or suit or ensemble. Definitely not floor-length. To a church wedding a woman guest should wear a hat, or at least a small headress that would be suitable for wearing in a church. Since you are not a close relative of the bride-to-be, you may, if you wish, wear a black dress or suit . . but of course you should "lighten" the black by wearing, say a hat with color, perhaps a flower hat, and perhaps gloves of a pale shade.

WHY TWO ENVELOPES FOR WEDDING INVITATIONS?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Last evening the question came up in our group (three of us are to be married next June) why formal engraved wedding invitations are enclosed in two envelopes. We'd never thought of the "why," but now we're wondering, and we decided to ask you.
— "The Seven"

I believe that this custom of enclosing formal wedding invitations in two envelopes originated with the idea that the inner envelope, having no stamping, or marking could be kept as a memento of the occasion. And incidentally this is even more important with the formal marriage announcement . . . year also, a reminder of future anniversaries.

CALLS OF CONDOLENCE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister, who lived with us, died recently, and several of my neighbors called to express their condolence. I was too devastated to receive them, and my husband explained this to them. I am sure they understood, but I am wondering if I am expected to return these calls. We have lived in this medium-size New England town only three years, and I know the people here are on the formal side.
— Edith C.

A visit of condolence is not returned . . . and a return-visit is not expected. However, if you have any feeling that you should make some gesture of appreciation to these neighbors for their kindness, it would be particularly gracious for you to write a brief note of thanks to each one. A note of thanks is always a perfect gesture.

SHOULD MENTION MOTHER'S NEW NAME

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My father died three years ago, and two months ago my mother remarried. The other day, when I was walking with a teacher in my school, we met mother and, when I introduced them, I did mention my mother's new name. Afterward I wondered if I should not only have said, "my mother" but should also have added her new name. I didn't want to ask my mother about this, for I had a feeling she didn't want to criticize me on on this special point. Please advise me so I'll do the right thing next time.
— Reader

Since your mother has re-married so recently, it would be wise for you to add her name to the introduction . . . "my mother, Mrs. Anderson." This is necessary information, so that the person being introduced can acknowledge the introduction with "How do you do, Mrs. Anderson," and will be able to use your mother's name during any conversation following the introduction.

HOSTESS RISES FIRST

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell us: Is it the hostess or the host or the guest of honor who is expected to rise first after a dinner given in a private house, to indicate that the meal is over and that the guests are to go to the living room for after-dinner coffee? And what is the proper procedure when the dinner is given in a restaurant? — Hostess

The hostess rises first . . . whether the dinner is given in a private house or in a restaurant.

The jacket and skirt are in charcoal grey flannel and the little pearl-buttoned jacket can be worn over Bermuda shorts or slacks as well. The skirt is straight with a kick pleat in front and the blouse is of pink pima cotton. Silky and lustrous. A nice travel trio.

KEEPING THE FAMILY GOOD GOOD LOOKING

Mother is not only a homemaker but family dietician, nurse, and good looks guardian.

You may fancy that the lady of the house need not be concerned with the habits of her husband. She has to be. What husband ever finds time to wash his comb and brush? When his tube of toothpaste is down to tinny flatness is he going to remember to bring home a new one? He will not. Watch him run to her when a hangnail is bothering him or a little ingrowing whisker needs tweezing.

Daughter demands a good deal of attention, too.

As her shampooing technique is doubtful, mother has a hairwashing job on her hands every Saturday, maybe even a wave-set. The wise mother will provide her daughter with her own toiletries, teach her how to use them properly. An attractive brush on her vanity table will inspire a girl to brush her hair. She should also have her own hand lotion and orangewood stick.

If she is in high school, a girl feels she is entitled to wear lipstick. It should be a soft, natural shade, applied smoothly and neatly.

And brother! Maybe you think he doesn't come under mother's watchful eye. In the early teens, his complexion may be undergoing changes. To insure against acne, must be made to wash his face thoroughly at bedtime.

Mother can't side-step her own beauty obligations. She can't afford to. Pop and the kids must be proud of her svelte and slender figure, her prettily arranged hairdo, her youthful complexion.

You can't go 'ALL-OUT' If you Feel 'ALL-IN'

These days most people work under pressure, worry more, sleep less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living, lowered resistance, overwork, worry—any of these may affect normal kidney action. When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and wastes remain in the system. Then backache, disturbed rest, that "tired-out" heavy-headed feeling often follow. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHOULD SHE ASK WHY HE BROKE OFF WITH HER?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I entered high school last fall, I started off making new friends right away. I was elected class president and was very popular.

After awhile, I learned that a certain boy liked me, so I just ignored him to see if he really did. He started coming over to my lunch table and riding home on the train with, and then he came over to my house and asked me to a dance his school was having.

I went with him for over three months, and then he suddenly broke off with me for no reason, without even telling me why.

Should I try to ask him why he did this, or just ignored him altogether? Since he broke off with me, I'm not as popular as I used to be. If I should ignore him, what should I do to get another boy to like me? I would feel better if a boy liked me, and it would also make the other boy jealous.—J.S.

Dear J.S.:

Don't make a point of "ignoring" this boy, but simply go your own way, being perfectly friendly to him any time you happen to meet. It would be silly to act as though he owed you an explanation, and you would have a much better chance of eventually getting one if you don't give him the impression that you feel he is under obligation to give you one. Moreover, I would certainly never advise doing anything with a deliberate idea of making a boy jealous. It seldom works, and it only makes you appear in a poor light.

I doubt if you're any less popular since this incident than you were before, as nothing you say suggests there could be any reason for a change in the way your schoolmates think about you. You're probably just sensitive about what happened with this boy, and imagine it has affected the attitude of others toward you.

Any girl who is elected president of her class must have a lot of good qualities and social assets, and my advice to you is to do all the things you can think of that a good class president ought to do, making friends with everybody and trying to see that they all take part in class and school activities. That way, you can't help being well liked and popular.

HE STOOD HER UP—WHAT SHOULD SHE DO?

Dear Miss Fairfax.

What should a woman do when a man stands her up?

Some people say to get in touch with him by telephone or letter and ask hom how come, so he will know you care. Other people say, act as though you don't care, and then he will get worried and come around to find you out.

It worries me to be stood up, and I keep wondering about it, so I would like to know what you think I should do. — Alice T.

Dear Alice:

If a man stands you up without explanation or apology, it seems to me pretty obvious that he is not specially interested in you or he wouldn't treat you is such an offhand fashion. That being the case, isn't it rather undignified to check up on him and try to force an explanation out of him? To do such a thing, I think, would almost certainly result either in your getting an answer you wouldn't like, or having him make up something that might spare your feelings but wouldn't be the real reason.

My advice is to take no action in such a case, but simply to go about your business in a natural way, not putting on an act to try and show this man that you don't care, but simply behaving normally and keeping up all your other friendships. If he wants to come back, he'll do so. If he doesn't there's nothing you can do about it and you'll be wiser not to try. Anyhow, I shouldn't think you'd want a chap with such bad manners.

Three Treasures for Beefeaters

By Mary Moore

"All she had to start with was a package of hamburger but she made that meal glow."

The mother of a girl friend of a young homemaker said that to me. I had asked her how little Judy was getting along with her housekeeping since she was married last Fall. "She's a whiz. She cooks like a veteran," she said, and then described the hamburg meal Judy had prepared: broccoli, baked potatoes and meat balls with creamy smooth sauce. Here is the recipe for

JUDY'S MEAT BALLS

One 10-oz. tin condensed mushroom soup, 1 lb. ground beef, 3-4 cup fine dry breadcrumbs, 1 1-2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, 1 egg, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 cup water, 1 1-2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce. Measure out 1-4 can of the mushroom cream soup and mix it with all of the ingredients except the water and Worcestershire sauce. (Save the remaining soup for sauce.) Form the mixture into 10 meat balls. Brown these meat balls in a minimum amount of hot shortening. Arrange in baking dish. Mix together the remaining soup, water and Worcestershire sauce and pour over meat balls. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes.

NOTE:

If you serve baked potatoes with this meat put them in the oven at 450 deg. Fahr. 30 minutes before putting in the pan of meat balls, then reduce heat to 375 deg. and they will both be done together.

If Judy can work meal magic with hamburg so can you.

By coincidence I served thirteen people at two different meals from one lot of ground beef weighing 2 1-2 lbs. I knew that Marianne and Pete would be home and some of their friends too, and because I wanted to try this trick of stretching ground beef this is what I did.

BASIC MEAT MIXTURE

In large bowl mix together 3 eggs, 1 1-2 cups liquid (this is tomato juice or milk—see below), 2 1-2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 2 1-2 teaspoons salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 2 1-2 cups soft breadcrumbs, 2 1-2 lbs. ground beef and 1-3 cup finely chopped onion (1-4 clove garlic ever so finely chopped is optional).

For Meat Loaf for 4 people take out 2-5 of this. What I did was leave out the liquid and to 2-5 of the mixture added 1-2 cup milk. To the remainder I added 3-4 cup tomato juice—but see below). I also added 1-2 teaspoon dry mustard. I shaped it into 4 individual meat loaves and placed them on oiled pan and baked them at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 30 or 35 minutes. The outside crust on each one was delicious. This could have been baked in 1 loaf or packed in small loaf pan but would be baked a little longer.

For Meat Ring for 8 or 9 people I left out the liquid in the basic mix and for this meal added 3-4 cup tomato juice for my liquid and instead of mustard I added 1-2 teaspoon dill seeds. I packed the mixture into greased 8-inch ring mold and baked at 350 deg. Fahr. for 50 minutes. I turned it out onto a pyrex pie plate, basted it with 1-2 cup catsup and placed it under the broiler which was very hot, for about 8 minutes or until catsup bubbled and browned. I filled centre of ring with hot creamed green peas and garnished around base with tomato wedges and parsley. The crowd liked it.

TEA COUNCIL OF CANADA

Canadian Press Opening Bureau At Washington

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Press is re-establishing an office in Washington.

George Kitchen, 40, bureau chief at Edmonton since 1953, returns to the United States capital this week as staff correspondent for the news co-operative, the position he held when the Washington office was discontinued five years ago.

He is succeeded in Edmonton by R. J. (Barney) Anderson, 45, for the last six years general night editor at Toronto.

Foster Barclay, 41, takes over the general night editor's desk after 10 years at Ottawa as news editor supervising the parliamentary report.

Barclay, an Ottawa native, has been with CP 26 years; Anderson, of Winnipeg, 24, and Kitchen, a Montrealer, 22.

CP obtains its basic world news through The Associated Press and Reuters, and supplements reports of these world - wide agencies through its own bureaus at London and New York. Reopening of the Washington office is an extension of this direct staff representation outside Canada.

HOUSE DEBATES

J. O. Gour (L—Russell) added another suggestion: Tax margarine and other butter substitutes 10 cents a pound and give the proceeds to butter producers as a subsidy. Thus the floor price could be cut to 48 cents and result in a retail price between 51 and 55 cents a pound.

The potato tariff proposal came from J. Angus MacLean (PC—Queens). But he suggested it as a second resort against U.S. competition and high U.S. tariffs.

Mr. MacLean, a Prince Edward Island potato grower, said the government first should try to persuade the U.S. to take as much duty-free Maritimes potatoes in its eastern markets as it sells to western Canada.

SHOULDN'T COMPLAIN

If the U.S. did not agree, then Canada should charge tariffs the year round on U.S. potatoes.

The duty would mean higher prices for western Canadians. But they should not complain any more than do Maritimers who pay more for manufactured articles due to tariff protection for Ontario and Quebec industries.

The debate's agricultural theme was continued by G. H. Castleden (CCF—Yorkton) who advocated a forward pricing policy to let farmers know in advance what their products will bring.

Farmers should be guaranteed a minimum floor price. Then they could plan production without risking a loss on their investment. The program would stabilize agriculture and create employment throughout the country.

James A. Byrne (L—Kootenay East) urged a federal subsidy to make up for Canadian railway losses on shipping export grain under the low, statutory Crow's Nest Pass rates. The depressed rates forced railways to increase tariffs on other shipments and placed them in a difficult position in dealing with employee wage demands.

OPENS NEW LIFE

Marjorie Golinsky of Alberta Born Deaf, Dumb and Blind

By GERALD FREEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HALIFAX (CP)—In a crowded building where 160 children live in silence a devoted woman spends her days trying to bring meaning into the cramped world of a little girl who lives in darkness as well.

Twelve-year-old Marjorie Golinsky was born deaf, dumb and blind.

She has never heard a sound and never will, though she has a hearing aid to catch the vibrations of the words she's slowly learning to form. Her eyes can detect the difference between strong light and shadow, but little more.

CAME FROM ALBERTA

Two years ago Marjorie lived in Alberta and authorities had all but decided to place her in a mental institution for life. There seemed no way to reach her mind. Psychologists say that without communication a person's intelligence remains like an infant's.

Then her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Golinsky of Glenevis, near Edmonton, heard of the work being done here by Louise Fearon.

Miss Fearon at the school for the deaf which serves the Atlantic provinces had then been teaching the deaf-blind successfully for 10 years. She had been teaching the merely deaf for 40 years.

Two older girls, since graduated, were being taught by warm, grey-haired Miss Fearon when Marjie arrived. Now the little girl has the teacher to herself.

Every day the smiling, patient teacher and the child sit opposite one another at a narrow table in a bright littleroom filled with toys Marjie loves, but has never seen.

FALTERING SENTENCES

She knows most of a sound alphabet now, only she's never heard the sounds. She can talk with her fingers and can even say a few sentences in the weird, faltering tone of children who cannot hear their own voices.

She can say "I want my doll," or "I want a cookie" but even the simplest words can come to her only after long, patient repetition.

Marjie can also say "I love you" to Miss Fearon. She gets her reward by crawling into her teacher's arms for a big hug.

And sometimes when she manages "I want to be carried" she gets herself a piggy-back ride.

"People don't realize it," says Miss Fearon, "but deafness is a much greater handicap than blindness. Practically everything an ordinary child learns first is from the speech of the parents.

"When a child is blind as well as deaf, well. . . ."

LEARNS BY ASSOCIATION

Miss Fearon teaches Marjie to associate things she knows, like her big Raggedy Ann doll, with sensations on her hands. It is like the hand alphabet of the deaf, only instead of seeing the gestures Marjie is made to feel them.

Then she is taught to associate the finger bendings and hand slappings with vibrations she feels when she touches her teacher's throat and lips.

Somehow the impossible happens and Marjie's throat and lips make the same sound.

She's also learning to read and write braille.

"She's such a cute little girl," Miss Fearon smiles fondly. "Now she's getting some fun out of life. When she first came her face was set rigidly in one expression."

CAN PLAY

Marjie can play a little with the other children too but she still has difficulty communicating with them.

Miss Fearon recalls that Marjie was wild, like a small frightened animal, when she first came to the school. She clawed and bit and scratched at the strangers around her, not understanding they were trying to help her.

And she earned herself a few spankings. One came when she flung Miss Fearon's glasses on the floor and shattered them.

"I don't suppose modern psychologists would approve," says the teacher, "but there was no other way of showing her she was being bad."

PAID BY GOVERNMENT

Marjorie's fees at the school, $1,800 a year, are twice those of an ordinary deaf child. They're paid by the Alberta government. The rest of the children are from the Atlantic provinces and usually their fees are split between their municipal and provincial governments.

After 10 years or so of instruction Marjie might be as well equipped to get along by herself as Roberta Wadman, another deaf-blind girl who graduated from the school last year.

Roberta still stays at the school, helping out here and there and reading to herself in braille.

She had an advantage over Marjie because she had learned to talk before polio robbed her of sight and hearing when she was six.

MARMORA

'United Nations' Address Given At C. of Commerce Dinner Meeting

MARMORA.—"The United Nations" was the subject chosen by Principal L. F. Reid, of Quinte Secondary School, Belleville, at the monthly dinner meeting of Marmora District Chamber of Commerce held in the Royal Hotel, on Friday evening.

He spoke under the sub titles of "What Is the United Nations?" "What About the Record of the United Nations?" "Is it Worth Maintaining?"

He reminded his hearers that the United Nations began in the United States in 1942 and officially took office in 1945 with 29 nations signing.

The General Assembly is made up of 60 members who elect members and secretary to the Security Council.

SECURITY COUNCIL POWERS

The Security Council consists of 11 members with five being permanent and six elected to two year periods. It has power to move armed forces, and make major decisions, but vote must be by seven members, including all five permanent members to be official.

The United Nations had been in force nine years and most major world problems had come before it. It had acted in ending war in Kashmir, Palestine, Pakistan, Italian Colonies, and Korea.

The Economic Social Security branch provided for malaria, tuberculosis and yaws in many countries.

With aid from the International Monetary Fund, India has reclaimed a million and a half acres of waste land.

HELPS IN EDUCATION

The United Nations is helping to educate people of the world. Half of the world's population are illiterate and poorly fed and clothed. Representatives are sent to educate people in farming and so forth. The United Nations has done a lot towards promoting advancement of free government in many new states.

The speaker believed that the United Nations will survive, but it was dependent on all countries and states, each doing its part.

He was introducted by D. P. Marett.

P. C. McGuire, president of Belleville Chamber of Commerce in his remarks also brought greetings. He knew of the fine record of the Marmora Chamber and commended the Chamber for it.

Principal Reid was tendered a vote of thanks by A. M. Jones.

Opening the meeting, the new president, Harold Olsen, gave a welcome to the large attendance of members. He was followed by past president, F. R. Loveless, with a resume of 1954 activities.

PROJECTS OUTLINED

Mr. Olsen then outlined the projects for the ensuing year which are, improved street lighting; planned parking; improved play and school grounds; aid for public library; water and sewerage; securing dams on Beaver Creek for conservation; civilian defence; general publicity campaign for 1955.

It was also announced that past president, A. F. Fraser was the new treasurer and A. M. Jones, the new secretary.

Carl McCoy retiring secretary was heartily thanked for his services in that capacity.

THE OLDTIMERS MEET

The Belleville Oldtimers' Hockey Association will re-line its forces and work towards an all-out organization that, it is hoped, will include every ex-puckist that wore the Belleville colors.

This was decided at a special meeting held over the week-end which was attended by some 20 of the "old sweats," who laid the foundation of what they hope will be a strong, permanent organization.

Since Bill Green, who was the guiding light of the body passed away, the job of holding together the "boys" fell to the lot of Hank Fenn, who has done yeoman service. On Sunday, Hank was appointed the head of a committee of seven who will assist him in re-organizing and getting the Association on a new footing before permanent officials are elected.

The committee is composed of Chairman Fenn, "Toots" Holway, Bill Cook, Bert Hibbard, Bob Scott, Benny Bowen, of Trenton and Harry Ingram of Stirling. The next meeting was called for February 13th, in Engineers' hall, Pine St.

There was some discussion regarding the merging of veterans of all sports in the city under the head of the "Oldtimers' Athletic Association, but it was decided to confine the association's activities to hockey players.

The association has already donated two Memorial trophies for minor puckists. These are the "Daw" Whalen and Pat Boland trophies. The Oldtimers will donate a Bill Green Memorial Trophy and much discussion centred on the obtaining of an "Oldtimers' Hockey Memorial Trophy" on which all the names of those passed on could be inscribed.

The most important business at hand, however, is the securing of names of players who performed for Belleville in the past and are now out of active participation. Anyone knowing these players are urgently requested to forward them to this department, so notices of meeting can be mailed them. Do it now. Time is short.

MAN-EATERS

Just when this department finished writing a piece about the "change of peace" that has come over the clubs in this leap-froggy senior "B" loop, up pops a guy with carnivorous intentions that tossed the dovey effort into the discard.

If this keeps up salt-and-pepper shakers will be standard equipment for hockey players of the future, with referees carrying little noggins of ketchup.

It happened during a recent Peterborough-Whitby game, so we read in the Whitby News. McMaster of the Petes and Bus Gagnon of the newly-dubbed Whitby Dunlops, are ancient feudists, it is gathered from the story. And a few body contacts during the game did not make for any peace meetings. In fact the pair clashed in what the Whitby writer called "the dandiest scrap of the year."

Here is what he wrote:

"It took the referees almost 10 minutes to break this one up and when it was over Gagnon drew a game misconduct penalty. McMaster drew a match penalty for deliberately trying to injure a player.

"It all happened after Gagnon had given McMaster quite a going over and McMaster, so incensed at his defeat, broke away from the referees and threw a headlock on Gagnon and deliberately bit Gagnon's ear.

"It took three stitches to close Gagnon's ear, while McMaster's face looked like raw meat.

"McMaster will now remain suspended until he goes before the O.H.A. committee for a hearing, while Gagnon will receive a $10 fine."

"Ear, Ear," quipped a wag in the crowd, "now the blighter can match Yukon Eric."

Young hockey players are often advised to "keep your head up." Perhaps they had better develop retractable ears and turtle necks that can be hidden from view whenever a man-eating foeman starts drooling and heading in their general direction.

But don't go away. Here's the Peterborough side of the Gagnon-McMaster tea party. It seems while McMaster was tid-bitting off the Gagnon ear tenderloin, the Whitby chappie was shooting craps with McMaster's eyeballs. The Petes' player must have been seeing spots in front of his eyes prior to the fighting because Gagnon was shooting a natural every other roll. Tsk, Tsk, sech goin's on.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

The Whitby "Wrens" are no more. The hustling "birds" from Oshawa who were sheltered by kindly Whitby folk early in the season, have changed their name. From here in they will be known as the "Whitby Dunlops", since the well-known tire corporation, it seems, has taken them under its wing. The Dunlops will wear the sponsor colors of gold, red and black.

However the new name won't affect the power of the Dunlops not by any stretch of their new inner tubes. It should make for some hit and heavy hockey when they meet the Kingston Goodyears in a battle of the retreads. And they will be just as tough to beat tomorrow night when the Memos tackle them in their own garage. The Dunlops edged our side 5-4 the last time the teams clashed in Whitby and they handed us a 12-5 shellacking the last time they played here. The Memos are revenge-bent and they'll go all out for that win Wednesday.

STILL CRITICAL

LONDON (CP)—Hospital authorities said Sunday night the condition of John F. Schwella, 40, of Van Nuys, Calif., has remained unchanged during the last few days—improved but still critical. Schwella suffered severe head cuts in the Jan. 15 plane crash near here in which Ontario Hydro chairman Robert Saunders was fatally injured.

Leads Procession With 55 Rocket, 'Boom-Boom' Next; Goalies' Feud Waxing Hotter

MONTREAL (CP)—The pickings were comparatively poor in the National Hockey League last week, not only for the circuit's leading sharpshooters but for the clubs themselves.

Only the Detroit Red Wings were undefeated. They had to settle for a couple of ties but they smote Montreal Canadiens 7-1 Sunday night and pulled to within one point of the league leaders.

Each club played three games, Canadiens, New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks emerging with a win, a loss and a tie apiece. Boston Bruins matched the Red Wings' performance by getting four of a possible six points but the Bruins did it the harder way. They scored two victories.

The third-place Toronto Maple Leafs found the going rough, salvaging only a tie in three starts, and the gap between them and the Bruins was narrowed to nine points. The Leafs trail the Wings by 10.

HOLDS LEAD

Montreal's fire-brigade scoring troupe picked up enough goals and assists to keep command of the top positions in the individual records. Maurice (Rocket) Richard bagged two goals and one assist to pull into a second-place tie with teammate Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion. Each has 51 points, compiled the same way—28 goals and 23 assists.

Big Jean Beliveau counted a goal and an assist and leads the procession with 55 points. The Boomer cashed in one goal, ending six-game scoring slump.

Ken Mosdell's two assists were enough to round out an all-Montreal foursome at the top. Mosdell nudged into fourth place, with 44 points, ahead of the Red Wings' Gordie Howe, whose output in three games was one goal.

SID AND BERT TIED

There were only a couple of other changes among the 10 leaders. Toronto's hustling Sid Smith bagged his 25th goal and added an assist to run his point total to 41. The two points put him in a sixth-place tie with Montreal's Bert Olmstead, who went pointless.

Red Sullivan of Black Hawks, with two goals and two assists, displaced Toronto's Ted Kennedy for eighth place and now has 39 points to captain Ted's 37.

The goal-tenders' private little feud became hotter. Harry Lumley of Toronto was beaten seven times in three games and his goals-against average rose to 1.88 from 1.83; Terry Sawchuk of Detroit allowed six goals, but the one goal difference cut Lumley's low-man margin to four. Sawchuk's 1.92 average is the same as it was a week ago.

Teeps, Canadiens Meet In Decisive Game

MONTREAL (CP) — Tonight's game at St. Catharines between the TeePees of the Ontario Junior Hockey Association and Montreal Canadiens of the Quebec Junior League will be a decisive one for both the Ontario and Quebec sections of the Sir Wilfrid Laurier Trophy competition.

Both teams have only two games left of the 10 scheduled for each team in the trophy play. Both need to win their remaining games to earn a tie with the first-place team in each section.

St. Catharines, with nine points, is four behind the leading Toronto Marlboros, who have played all their games. St. Catharines meets Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks, long eliminated from the playoffs, Feb. 4 in their final game. Montreal goes against the Quebec section leaders, Quebec Frontenacs, Feb. 9. The Canadiens have eight points, four less than Quebec.

No decision has yet been announced on the system or dates for playoffs, but it is believed a best-of-three series will be held between the sectional leaders for the newly-established trophy.

Lalande Tied For Third In Point Race

The St. Catharines TeePee forward has scored 45 goals and assisted on another 34 for a 79-point total, 17 better than his nearest rival, Bill McCreary of Guelph Biltmores.

McCreary moved into second place last week but he is only one point ahead of Barry Cullen of St. Catharines and Hec Lalande of Galt Black Hawks who each have 61 points.

US Government Moves Quickly To Put Boxing Club on Trial

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. justice department moved at top speed today to bring the International Boxing Club to trial as a monopoly that violates federal anti-trust laws.

The government received the green light to prosecute from the Supreme Court, which Monday refused to grant boxing exemption from anti-trust laws.

The government filed an anti-trust suit against the IBC, headed by Jim Norris and Arthur M. Wirtz, in March, 1952, but it was thrown out by federal Judge Gregory F. Noonan of New York, who based his decision on the baseball anti-trust case.

The Supreme Court decision was by a 6-2 vote with Chief Justice Earl Warren writing the majority opinion. He noted that baseball first was exempted from anti-trust laws in 1922 by the Supreme Court. In 1953 the court held that Congress, by not passing legislation specifically bringing baseball under the anti-trust laws, had indicated it wanted baseball exempted.

But no such situation prevailed for boxing, the opinion continued. If it is to be exempt "the issue is for Congress to resolve, not this court."

The minority opinion, written by Justice Felix Frankfurter, said it would "baffle the subtlest ingenuity to find a single differentiating factor between other sporting exhibitions, whether boxing, or football or tennis and baseball insofar as conduct of the sport is relevant to the question of anti-trust prosecution."

The government position is that Norris and Wirtz, along with the Madison Square Garden Corporation, have been conspiring since 1949 to monopolize the promotion, exhibition, broadcasting and televising of big-time fights.

International Bonspiel Geared High, Upsets Feature Monday's First Round

By GEORGE FRAJKOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—After the usual slow start to give out-of-town curlers a chance to get organized, the 42nd annual Quebec International bonspiel goes into high gear today with draws scheduled to be run off every two hours.

There will be curling at every one of Quebec City's six clubs from early today to late in the night.

The International section of the colorful bonspiel, with rinks from Ontario, the United States and the Maritimes competing, opened Monday when 60 games were played.

The field was divided into two main events, the Chateau Frontenac and Omega Trophy, and losers were entered in the Francois Jobin Trophy event, first round of which will be played today.

SOME UPSETS

Rinks reaching the quarter-finals in the three events qualify for playoffs for the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy and the grand aggregate, the bonspiel's top awards.

Upsets marked the first round Monday.

Olivier Samson, winner of last week's Quebec province curling championships—the bonspiel's first event—was soundly licked 13-2 by Dr. R. B. MacKenzie's Newcastle, N.B., team.

Gaston Amyot of Quebec Jacques Cartier, winner of the Francois Jobin Trophy last year, was edged 10-8 by C. R. MacDowell's Carleton Place, Ont., rink and Robert Morast, Quebec Winter Club, whipped Sam Wilson of Sudbury, 12-4. Wilson was runner-up in the Chateau Frontenac Trophy last year.

Harold Stapleton of Montreal West, taking over as skip of E.L. Gallagher's Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy winners, was beaten 11-3 by Dr. Earl Racher of Sarnia.

Justice D. P. J. Kelly, popular Toronto Granite skip who won the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy in 1953, got off to a good start by beating Rene Brodrigue of Quebec Winter Club 9-6.

Chicago Black Hawks ended a 21-game winless streak with a 5-victory over Boston four years ago tonight. That stretch, in which Chicago earned three ties, equalled the winless streak of New York Rangers in 1944 as the record for one season, but Rangers extended it to 25 straight games early in the new season of 1944-45.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

Andre Binette is a hockey goaler, though perhaps not a very good one. Also, he is just a little boy; a very little boy indeed, compared to the giants of major hockey. He weighs only 133 pounds. Yet little Andre Binette was written into the saga of hockey when he was called on in a sudden emergency by a National Hockey League team.

The night of November 11 Canadiens were drilling in the usual fashion before playing Chicago Black Hawks. Jacques Plante, the hawk-faced goaler was in the nets, casually batting away the shots his mates were tossing his way. The shots were easy for the swift-moving Plante to handle. Easy, that is, until one streaking drive took a sudden sharp curve and the frozen puck, travelling at bullet speed, crashed into his face. He fell head-foremost onto the ice. His cheek-bone was shattered by the impact.

Canadiens had two spare goalers. One was out of the city, with Royals' team. The other was down at Providence. So, suddenly, the League leaders found themselves with no goaler at all. Then someone recalled that little Andre Binette, spare netminder for a junior team, was in the house. Quickly, he was found. He was asked to play: "No, no" he protested at first, bewildered by it all. "It would not be fair to Canadiens. I am too small."

But in the end, he consented to fill the gap as best he could. He was hurried to the dressing-room, equipped with the big pads left behind by the 175-pound Plante, pads which hung almost ludicrously from the little fellow's skimpy frame. He shambled out on the ice, shaking with nervous tension, weighted down by the over-size gear — his own was in a sports shop, being cut down.

But his moment of glory had come and he rose to meet it. Hawks pelted him with shots. One got by because his leg pads struck his chest when he bent over and he couldn't reach down to stop the puck, sliding along the ice. Four shots beat him in all. Canadiens imagination caught fire. "We can't let the kid down" was their battle-cry, and they fired seven goals, equalling their highest total of the year, past Rollins in the Chicago twine.

So for little Andre Binette, as he lurched wearily down the ice, a dream had suddenly come true. He had his night of glory. Probably he will never play in the National Hockey League again. But he had his game, and won it, and his name will be inscribed in the all-time records as one of those hockey rarities — a goaler who batted 1,000 percent.

European Fighter Wing Hockey Club Perpetuates Memory of Dead Flyer

ZWEIBRUECKEN, Western Germany (CP)—The hockey team that young Pete Cunningham built is still going strong.

The Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers from No. 3 Fighter Wing, only Canadian hockey team on the European continent, were thinking about him a lot when they planned the 1954-55 season, the team's second.

Without a rink or much money, they bit into a tough schedule and have produced, so far, six victories nine losses and one draw.

"But the truth is," reported Wing Cmdr. John Gellner of Gunter Lake, Ont., "we all felt that to drop the Flyers would be betraying Pete's memory."

The stocky, bow-legged young flying officer from Ottawa was one of the brush-cut Canadians who brought the Sabre jet fighters to Zweibruecken when the fighter wing opened in April, 1953. He formed the team by hook and crook and he was killed last Aug. 1 in a flying accident.

FINANCE PROBLEMS

No. 3 Wing resolved to untangle a tough financial problem, make do with one practice a week at Mannheim 70 miles away and tackle a stiffer schedule. This season they played teams ranging from the Swiss national squad, which beat them twice, to the Swiss and German club champions, and the crack Milan, Italy, Internazionale, which included four of the best Canadian hockey players in Europe.

It was in the summer of 1953 that Cunningham bearded Gellner about a hockey team. He wanted $3,000, and the station couldn't help.

Cunningham tried fruitlessly to bring in other units of the four-wing 1st Canadian Air Division, and appealed unsuccessfully to a prominent Canadian hockey promoter.

Finally he stumbled across Dr. Friedrich Krantz, Munich Stadium owner, who agreed to back the team in return for match proceeds. The wing added a $2,500 reserve fund to Krantz's initial $1,000 and costs of equipment bought in Canada and Germany.

STIFF COMPETITION

The first game was played Dec. 31, 1953, and the Flyers added 14 more against German, Austrian, American, Swiss and Swedish teams, winning nine, losing four and drawing two.

"Wherever they played, the Flyers made friends for themselves, the RCAF and Canada," says Gellner: "They behaved like gentlemen. . ." Everybody asked them back.

Cunningham's death left a $1,000 bill outstanding and "a challenge to continue on the way he had shown us," says Gellner, who became general manager in the new setup. Krantz was released from his contract and his debt was paid off.

Flt. Lt. Chuck Keating of Silverton Station, Man., became captain, Flt. Sgt. Buzz Cunningham of Richmond, Que., served as coach, and LAC Bernie Biron of Granby, Que., was equipment manager. They got the Flyers registered with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, and thereby recognized by tht International Ice Hockey Federation, which made it easier to get games.

NO PROFESSIONALS

"We have no player with professional experience," says Gellner.

Only non-No. 3 Wing player is Sgt. Twit Leblanc from No. 4 Wing at Baden-Soellingen, not far away. LAC Yves Garand of Ottawa is the leading scorer with 22 goals and 19 assists. Cpl. Frank Oatway of Summerside, P.E.I., has 18 goals and 24 assists, FO. Johnny Johnson of Leroy, Sask., 18 and 15, Sgt. Leblanc 18 and 10, Cpl. Billy Reid of Halifax 15 and 10, and LAC Roger Dumais of Bonfield, Ont., 7 and 10.

"What good are hockey players on an air division?" asks Gellner.

"They are the best medium of public relations, bar none. And hockey is the one sport which is popular both in Europe and Canada."

Zweibruecken, and probably the other continental Canadian air stations, will be running personnel specials for the world championships Feb. 25-March 6 at Cologne, Krefeld, Dortmund and Duesseldorf.

Gellner, on what he has seen of European hockey, figures that Penticton, (B.C.- Vs certainly can win.

Raiders Break Adrian's String

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Assumption College Purple Raiders scored a 64-63 victory over Adrian (Mich.) College Bulldogs Monday night. The loss was Adrian's first in 14 games.

Dick MacKenzie, the Raiders' lanky forward from Niagara Falls, Ont., was the hero of the stunning victory. He stole the ball from Adrian's Jack Birchfield with five seconds left to play and clicked with a beautiful lay-up shot to tie the score at 63-63 just as the final buzzer sounded.

Then, MacKenzie strode to the foul line after referee Sam Madden called a foul on Birchfield and sank the winning point.

Clem Crowe Signs With BC Lions

VANCOUVER (CP)—Two men with a lot of football behind them are scheduled to sign contracts with British Columbia Lions today.

Clem Crowe, cut loose as coach of Ottawa Rough Riders of the Big Four after a bad season last year, is expected to aid coach Annis Stukus of the Western Interprovincial Football Union club with his line chores. Vic Lindskog, former coach with Philadelphia Eagles of the U.S. National Football League, will handle the backfield.

Both men will carry the title of assistant coach.

Crowe arrived by air from Buffalo at midnight and told how he came to join Lions.

"I met Stukus at the coaches meeting in New York earlier this month," he said. "We talked there and came to a tentative agreement."

V IS FOR VICTORY, VENGEANCE, SAY PENTICTON V'S, DETERMINED TO REGAIN HOCKEY CROWN

"V for Vengeance" is the battle cry of Penticton V's as they prepare to regain Canada's hockey reputation in the world amateur hockey championships, won by Russia last winter. The British Columbia team, 1954 Allan Cup winners, are considered a much stronger club than the East York Lyndhursts, who represented Canada last year. Ivan McLelland stars in the nets for the V's. (Central Press Canadian).

Doug Kilburn, left, Jack MacDonald and Ed. Kassian, right, make up a high-scoring forward line of the Canadian senior champions. The players have been warned by others who played in Europe that referees will allow no body-checking. The world hockey championships open in Germany, February 22. (Central Press Canadian).

These eighteen hockey stalwarts share one ambition—to wrest the world hockey crown from the powerful Moscow Dynamos. Intent on bringing glory to Canada and Penticton, the V's are, from left: George McAvoy, defence; Jack MacDonald, forward; Kevin Conway, defence; Bill Warwick, forward; Hal Taralla, forward; Mike Shabaga, centre; Doug Kilburn, forward; Ivan McLelland, goalie; trainer Harry Harris; D. Moog, spare goalie; Jim Fairburn, forward; Don Berry, forward; Jack McIntyre, forward; Dimo Mascotto, forward; Ernie Rucks, defence; Bernie Bathgate, forward; Ed. Kassian, forward, and Grant Warwick, playing coach. (Central Press Canadian.)

Another crack forward line for Penticton is composed of the three Warwick brothers. Grant Warwick, a former NHL star with the New York Rangers, is the playing coach. He is shown with his two brothers, Dick and Bill. Grant has instructed his players to avoid boarding and high-sticking in Germany, to conform with strict European rules. (Central Press Canadian.)

National League, Argo Brass Meet in New Try for 'Peace'

PHILADELPHIA (CP —Two executive members of the insurgent Toronto Argonauts and commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League seek common ground today in a new effort to produce a no-raiding agreement between the NFL and Canada's Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

At issue is the future of seven men who played for NFL clubs last season and have since signed contracts with the Argonauts. Bell wants them back. The Argos have shown no signs of willingness to let them go.

Like the other three IRFU clubs, the Argonauts are willing to go along with the NFL on an agreement to respect each other's contracts and option clauses. But the Toronto club alone opposes a provision making the agreement retroactive to June, 1954.

IDENTITY UNKNOWN

Bell agreed to meet with Argonaut president Bill Ross and team director Harry Sonshine to hear their side of the case, adding that he hoped he would be dealing with "someone with authority who can make an agreement."

The identity of four of the NFL players signed by the Argos is still unknown although the club has announced the signing of lineman Billy Shipp and Bill Allbright of New York Giants and Gil Mains of Detroit Lions.

Lion general manager Nick Kerbawy Monday night denied reports that Tom Dublinski, his second-string quarterback, was another of the seven. Kerbawy said Dublinski is considering a Lion contract offer and has told the club he has not signed with the Argos.

Cubs Defeat Biltmores 6-3

HAMILTON (CP) —Hamilton Cubs defeated the league-leading Guelph Biltmores 6-3 Monday night in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game which didn't affect the standings.

Billy McCreary with two goals and Bill Sweeney scored for the Bilts.

Guelph outshot Hamilton 37-22.

French Champ Knocks Out Paddy de Marco

PARIS (AP)—Seraphin Ferrer, undefeated, 24-year-old French lightweight champion, Monday night knocked out former world lightweight king Paddy de Marco of Brooklyn in 2:30 of the fifth round of a scheduled 10-rounder in the Palais des Sports.

The 12,000 fans roared as the young Frenchman, an underdog to the veteran, 27-year-old American, floored de Marco with a solid right to the chin.

Paddy staggered to his feet at the count of five and then grabbed the ropes. The referee continued the count to 10 as de Marco clutched the ropes, unable to continue.

It was the 16th straight victory for Ferrer, a pro only two years.

Don Ross Whips Forbes

TORONTO (CP)—Don Ross of Toronto won a split decision over Sonny Forbes of Toronto in the five-round main bout of the weekly amateur boxing show here Monday night. Both boys fought in the 150-pound class.

In the quick-moving, five-round semi-final Toronto's Jerry Durette was awarded a split decision over Jack Houle of Sudbury. Both fighters were exceptionally fast but Houle didn't connect with his punches as often as Durette in the 135-pound division bout.

Preliminary results included:

175 pounds—Tommy Ashley, Toronto, awarded five-round decision over Adelard Thibeault, Sudbury.

135 pounds—Andy Blair, Sudbury scored a technical knockout over Jimmy Leach, Toronto, at 1:19 of third round of a scheduled three-

Minor Softballers Feted at Banquet Peewees, Bantams Get Cups, Crests

Fire chief Gerald Vance, aided by Leo Culhane "Warpy" O'Brien and company, held their annual presentation banquet for the pee wee and bantam softball teams at the Moose Hall last night. Some 150 players along with members of the press and radio, coaches and special guests were present as hot dogs, cokes, sandwiches and ice cream were passed around amid the cheers and friendly catcalls of the players as the trophies were presented.

Six trophies were presented to the league champs in both divisions, the batting leaders, the City titleholders in the pee wee section and a special cup to the most valuable player in the Belleville Minor Softball Association.

Checker Taxi captured the league title in the bantam division and were awarded the Harry Knott Memorial trophy. Mr. Don Thomas, president of the Kinsmen Club, made the presentation to team captain Bob Russell. Terry Kellar of the Maund's Cleaners team was named batting championship with a .608 average and received the City and District Softball League trophy from Chief Vance.

TROPHIES PRESENTED

In the pee wee section, Booth TVs won the league championship for the third year out of four. Mr. Pat Halloran presented the Halloran trophy to team captain Jerry Ethier. The City title was won by Blaind's Sportsmen with captain Hubert Pointer accepting the Joey Walters Memorial trophy from Doctor Walters. Pointer also walked off with the pee wee batting crown and received the Coal Merchants' trophy for recreational director, Lloyd "Red" Doran.

A new cup, the Freddie Clark Memorial trophy, was presented to Jerry Ethier as the most valuable player in both leagues. Mr. Fred Clark made the presentation on behalf of himself and Mrs. Clark in memory of their late son.

Chief Vance acted as master of ceremonies. He told the boys, "I expect to see some of you boys playing on the fastest softball teams in Ontario in the near future and certainly hope that you will remember your fine coaching and the proper training you received here". He also asked the boys to show respect for the memorial trophies they received.

Short speeches were made by Homer Townsend, Jack Devine, Don Lee, Garry Alexander, Ted Henn, Jerry Mahoney, Leo Culhane and "Warpy" O'Brien, all congratulating the winners and wishing the losers better luck next year, while stressing good, clean sportsmanship. Culhane mentioned the fact that Jerry Ethier, most valuable player, was one of the really fine softball players in the association and predicted a bright future in the sport for the youngster.

Crests were presented to the title-holding teams.

Hall of Fame For Ray Schalk, Home-Run Baker

NEW YORK (AP) — Home-run Baker, who won his nickname by hitting homers off Rube Marquard and Christy Mathewson of New York Giants in the 1911 world series, and Ray Schalk, the little "iron man" of Chicago White Sox who caught 1,760 games in the majors, are the latest additions to baseball's Hall of Fame.

The two oldtimers, both inactive as players during the last 25 years, were selected by the special 11-man veterans' committee Sunday, but results were not announced until Monday night.

Joe DiMaggio, Ted Lyons, Dazzy Vance and Gabby Hartnett were elected to membership last week by the 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association, who were restricted to men active in the last 25 years but retired for at least five years.

The total membership now is 79. The latest additions will be indirected formally at Cooperstown, N.Y., ceremones July 25.

HAVING A SNOOZE

The news caught up with Schalk, 62, at his Chicago home, where he was taking an afternoon snooze—resting up for some league bowling competition.

Baker—whose real first name is Frank—heard the news at his farm in Trappe, Md., a small town with a population of about 300. He said he was "thrilled but not exactly surprised."

The 68-year-old former third baseman with Philadelphia Athletics and New York Yankees said:

"I heard a fellow say once he'd rather have a roebud when he was alive than a whole rose garden after he was gone. It looks like they've thrown the roses my way while I'm still here."

Anne Heggtveit Breaks Leg In Practice

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa's 16-year-old Anne Heggtveit, who despite her youth has skied in some of the toughest national and international competitions going, broke her leg Monday while practising.

The injury, her first serious one since she donned the hickories as a little girl, will keep her out of competition for the rest of the winter.

She caught the tip of her ski on a slalom pole, tumbled and broke her leg below the knee while practising at Mont Tremblant, in Quebec's Laurentian mountains.

Anne shot into skiing headlines last winter with her victory in the Holmenkollen giant slalom in Norway. She had planned to enter all the major tournaments this winter in a drive to make the Canadian Olympic team.

Council Approves Stadium Plan In Principle

TORONTO (CP) —City council Monday approved in principle enlarging Maple Leaf Stadium, home park of Toronto's International League baseball team, at an estimated cost of $1,750,000.

But before it approves the issue of debentures, council wants to look at plans, estimates and terms of the lease with the ball club.

It is planned to put 18,000 bleachers around the outfield to raise the seating capacity to 42,200.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Stop to consider if you have bridgitosis. Your best friend may never tell you about it. If you do not find it out by taking lessons or reading a book, your common sense could tell you.

Look again at this south hand:

♠A K 3
♥9 4 3 2
♦Q 7 6
♣K 9 4

You saw this hand here yesterday. As dealer with it you were given logical reasons why you should not open the bidding. Taking such advice you decide to pass and await developments.

Suppose now your west opponent also passes and your partner in north opens the bidding. If your east opponent passes, what do you do? It depends on the opening bid started by your partner.

If his opening is one in any suit you have support for it and should assist with one raise to a bid of two in his suit. If his is an opening of one no-trump, jump at once to three no-trump. Why?

Our opening partner expects to find two tricks in your hand. Since his one bid must take seven, he promises five tricks; suit tricks if his bid is in a suit; no-trump tricks if his bid is no-trump.

Our hand expects to make four tricks in suit or no-trump. Game in suit needs ten or more tricks. With his five and your four you do not see enough for game in suit. So, you simply show support.

If partner is unable to bid again, not enough tricks for game will be in your pair. So, you are willing to stop fast. If he is able to bid again you can show your fourth trick.

It is a different story if partner opens with one no-trump. The five no-trump tricks he shows with your four make nine. These total enough for a game in no-trump. Which is why you go there.

Maybe you have never learned any of the rules in a book or from a teacher. Maybe you have been confused by too much or wrong advices. If so, your common sense could figure out these answers.

TAKEN FROM SCHOOL

ATHERLEY (CP)—Parents of six pupils withdrew their children from this hamlet's school Monday in an effort to have the one-room school improved. The parents said while the department of education recommends 40 pupils to one teacher, the school here started the year last fall with an enrolment of 86.

Rosewall Is Aussie Hero

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP)—Boyish - looking Ken Rosewall emerged Monday as the strong man of Australian tennis when he overcame a long-time jinx to beat his Davis Cup teammate, Lew Hoad, for the Australian national championship.

Scores were 9-7, 6-4, 6-4 for the little, dark-haired Sydney stylist who had been smothered by Hoad's big game the last seven times the two met. Rosewall also won the national in 1953. Mervyn Rose was 1954 champion.

The United States' Davis Cup heroes got their only consolation in the doubles play, won by Vic Seixas and Tony Trabert, and a sweep of junior honors by youngsters Mike Green and Gerry Moss.

The four Americans leave today for home. Captain Bill Talbert and Hamilton Richardson, Jr., took off with the Davis Cup after the challenge round in Sydney.

Fifth Network Linked Only By Magnetic Tape

By WAYNE OLIVER

NEW YORK (AP) — There are four nationwide networks connected by wire circuits, but there is also a fifth linked only by magnetic tape that's starting its sixth year. It has no commercials and nothing to sell except education.

It's the 76-station network of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, members of which are noncommercial educational radio stations operated mostly by universities and local school boards.

The best programs of each are recorded on magnetic tape and distributed to all the others. The association also obtains a number of cultural programs from outside sources.

That's hardly the same as the simultaneous transmissions of programs by commercial networks to affiliated stations throughout the United States. Yet it's not too different since a great majority of commercial network programs are broadcast from magnetic tape or discuss records in advance.

The educational network distributes recordings to the stations individually, to broadcast when they like, instead of transmitting them to all simultaneously by wire hookup.

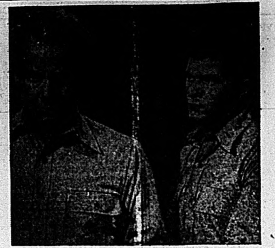
The association itself has been in existence since 1925 but it wasn't until 1949 that the network was organized at a meeting at the University of Illinois. Seymour Siegel, director of New York's noncommercial municipal station WNYC was elected the first president, and sparked the new network in its infant days.

Operations were started Jan. 23, 1950, with only a single tape for each program. The tape was relayed from one station to another until it had made the circuit, after which it was returned to WNYC so it could be erased and another program recorded on the reel.

With membership fees and grants from the W. K. Kellogg and Ford foundations and others, the fledling network grew quickly and was able to buy tape duplicators so several copies at a time could be made of programs.

It now has headquarters at the University of Illinois where an acceptance committee auditions programs from members and decides which merit network distribution.

The programs are by no means classroom stuff, but include such features as the 39 full length plays recorded in France by the Comedie Francaise, high fidelity recordings of 19th century Italian music recorded by Radio Italia, interview programs taped in Europe, and documentaries on various phases of American life.



AT THE BELLE — Van Johnson follows up his recent hit in "The Caine Mutiny" and "The Last Time I Saw Paris", with another exciting role in MGM's "Men of the Fighting Lady", showing today and Wednesday at the Belle Theatre. In the new film he enacts a U.S. Navy jet pilot who "talks down," a blinded fellow pilot into a perilous carrier-deck landing. Also starring in the exciting color offering are Walter Pidgeon, Louis Calhern, Dewey Martin, Keenan Wynn and Frank Lovejoy. A Tom & Jerry Cartoon, is an added attraction.

Many Incidents Happen in Mad Life of Actor David Niven

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—My favorite David Niven story concerns the switch of lunch boxes.

It seems Niven habitually takes his lunch to the studios in the familiar box used by school children. Being a Scot, he is inclined to favor a bit of a nip with his meal. So his cook often fills the vacuum bottle of the lunch box with a hot toddy or something else to cheer him through the long studio day.

One day Niven was munching on his lunch and poured out the drink. It was milk!

He realized promptly what had happened. The cook had switched his box with that of one of his sons. And the Niven boy? He was the happiest lad at his elementary school that day.

Such incidents are always happening in the mad life of David Niven. One of Hollywood's most delightful storytellers, his career reads like something out of P. G. Wodehouse. But when I visited on "The King's Thief" set, I inquired about Niven the actor. I learned he was playing his first real heavy in the swashbuckler.

RATHBONE FOR TIPS

"Oh, I'm a real so-and-so," he remarked. "I get hanged and everything. It's quite a new experience, being a heavy. I must call Basil Rathbone and ask him for some expressions to use when I'm hanged."

Niven, Dick Powell and Charles Boyer are partners in a TV movie series.

The three stars produce their own shows, selecting the stories and Niven confessed that Powell is the business mind of the trio. Niven and Boyer just sit back and listen in amazement.

"We're really a big operation," said tycoon Niven. "Why, do you realize that last year we made 104 films? That is the equivalent of 36 feature pictures, more than MGM made last year."

Although no great profit was made on the first run of the shows, the three stars now are in a fine position. They have about 150 half-hour films of top quality. The offers for outright purchase of the films are simply fabulous, Niven reported. As of now, they aren't of a mind to sell.

Most Women Want to Look 10 Yrs. Younger

TORONTO (CP) — Most Canadian women want to look 10 years younger, and men are to blame.

This is the opinion of Dr. Clarence Hincks, director of the Canadian Mental Health Association. Dr. Hincks, who has spent 45 years studying mental health of Canadians, told a meeting here that Canadians must learn to be their age and like it, and to change the attitude toward old age, if mental health standards are to improve, he said.

He warned against the common tensions of life which he called the greatest cripplers and killers of the day.

"Tensions frequently play a role in setting the stage for the onset of coronary thrombosis and other disabilities, both mental and physical."

TIMELY LESSON

BEAVERTON, Ont. (CP)—Town council was discussing the introduction of new firefighting equipment in this community on the eastern shore of Lake Simcoe Monday night when fire sirens dispersed the meeting. A fire broke out in the basement of Morrison's grocery store on the main street. Firemen battled the flames in a snowstorm and 20-degree temperatures, bringing the fire under control in about three hours. No one was injured. Damage was estimated at $10,000.

AT THE McCARTHY — Doris Day and Frank Sinatra are "Young at Heart" in Warner Bros.' romantic-drama with music which opens Wednesday at the McCarthy Theatre. Warner-Color film, with print by Technicolor, marks first time top song stars team in motion picture. Gig Young, Ethel Barrymore and Dorothy Malone also star in Arwin Production directed by Gordon Douglas.

Red-Top Goalie Is Soccer Star

By JEFF RYAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Bouncing Sam Bartram, a large red-headed soccer glutton who has tended goal for Charlton Athletic in spectacular fashion for 21 years, celebrated his 41st birthday Jan. 22 with a performance that scintillated—even for him.

The "cheerful Charltonian" was the man of the match as league champion Wolverhampton Wanderers took a slim 2-1 decision in what everybody agreed was Bartram's best game yet.

The ex-Durham miner, who was digging coal at 14 during the depression, caught on at Charlton in 1934 by converting himself from a forward. The story goes that Sam had written 11 different clubs, listing himself as a candidate for 11 different positions, but anyway Charlton topped the third division that year and were second in the first division two years later.

KNOTS AND DIVES

"Inclined to be a bit spectacular," said a rather dubious early appraisal of the flying young man. Bartram, who still winds up like a ballet dancer and contorts his big frame into knots at the drop of a soccer ball, concedes that he "dives about a bit."

He has played more than 500 league games plus another 200 exhibitions, which include a pre-war Canadian trip and tours of Australia and South Africa. But the Second World War chopped six years out of his career, robbing him of a chance to smash the all-time goalie record of 599 league matches.

Bartram is called the greatest goalkeeper never to wear an England cap. For some reason, he was never picked to represent his country.

But his fans have no reservations about the sport store proprietor, who makes a point of putting on a special warm-up show for the kids every Saturday. There was a big cake for his birthday match.

FATHERS JAILED

OSHAWA (CP) — Two Oshawa fathers, convicted of failing to support their children, were sentenced Monday to one month in jail each. They are James McNeil Hood, a father of five, and German Campbell, father of three.

Doris Day, Free of Contracts, Not Going to Rush Into Deals

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Free of her Warner Brothers contract after seven years and 17 pictures, Doris Day is not going to rush into a variety of deals.

The sunny singer from Cincinnati has ended her Warner connection on a friendly basis. Now she intends to sit back and take the likeliest film deals when they come along.

I found Doris on the set of MGM's "Love Me or Leave Me," the biography of songstress Ruth Etting. She was doing one of the final scenes. Between takes, she talked about her future plans.

"I'm not going to knock myself out," she said. "What for? You can't save any of the money you make. I'd like to do just two pictures a year, then just enjoy life for four months of the year."

LIVE AUDIENCES OUT

Her plans preclude accepting the fabulous offers that have come from Las Vegas, England, Australia and other places. She has said that she no longer wants to sing before live audiences.

She admitted her reluctance is curious in view of the fact that she spent years singing before vast crowds when she was a band singer with Les Brown and other outfits, personal appearances to swell her income.

Fortunately, she doesn't need income. The sales of her records like "My Secret Heart" and "If I Give My Heart to You" have been astronomical. She is one of the top five female draws in the movies. Her fee for "Love Me or Leave Me" is reported at $200,000.

Now that she is free of all movie contracts, Doris could jump into TV. I asked her about it.

"Yes, I'd like to do TV," she said. "But I don't know when. It all depends on working out a format. I don't want to do just a variety show. I want to do stories, with some singing added now and then. It seems to me Loretta Young has found the ideal format; it allows her to play all kinds of characters."

Carol Pachl Seeks World Skating Crown

OTTAWA (CP — Otto Gold, the man who trained Barbara Ann Scott, leaves this week for Europe with another pupil he hopes to see win the world figure skating championship.

Carole Jane Pachl of Montreal, 17-year-old Canadian women's senior champion, is his latest contender for international honors.

He aid Monday in an interview he thinks she "will make a good showing."

"But we must wait and see," he said. "We'll have to take a look at the competition first."

The veteran Minto Club skating coach and his pretty protege will leave Montreal by air Friday for the world meet at Vienna Feb. 14-18.

The week before the competition starts will be one of hard practice for Carole Jane, he said. She will spend six to seven hours a day on the ice.

MORE ATHLETIC

Carole Jane also faces unfamiliar outdoor skating conditions.

"We have to get used to the outdoor rink," he said. "The ice is artificial but there may be wind, snow or rain to contend with."

Mr. Gold, who has been coaching Carole Jane since early last ummer, says that she is "a bit more of an athletic type" than Barbara Ann, who won the world title in 1947 at the age of 18, the Olympic championship in 1948 and is now star of an ice show.

"Barbara Ann was always a dainty skater," he said. "This girl has more power behind her jumps."

Connie Smythe Retires As Leafian Boss

TORONTO (CP)—Conn Smythe, who made Toronto Maple Leafs the ultimate aim of many hockey-minded young Canadians, retired as managing director of his National Hockey League team today—his 60th birthday.

He was replaced by his longtime lieutenant, Clarence (Hap) Day, 53, who played for and coached Leafs before becoming assistant managing - director. Smythe remains as president and managing director of Maple Leaf Gardens, home of the Leafs.

Day, who gave up a career as a pharmacist for hockey, was associated with Smythe during each of the seven Stanley Cups won by Leafs. He was a defenceman and Smythe the manager when the club first won the Stanley Cup in 1932. That was the season the Gardens, "the house that Smythe built" opened.

Mayfield Wins Golf Tourney

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—The rich winter golf tour is over in California for 1955, with Shelley Mayfield the winner of the last tournament — a dramatic playoff victory in the $15,000 Thunderbird invitational.

The Chicopee, Mass., player defeated heavy-shouldered Mike Souchak and veteran Freddie Haas Monday in a duel that wasn't decided until the 20th hole.

Haas left the scene on the 18th green and Mayfield and Souchak fought it out for two more holes, with Mayfield picking up a cheque for $2,000, Souchak $1,000 and Haas last year's winner, $750.

Mayfield, 30, holed a slanting four-foot putt on the 20th; Souchak missed an even more difficult putt on a slope from about five feet, and Haas was the victim of a five-footer on the 18th.

WEDNES, FEBRUARY 2, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Neither rush nervously nor be lackadaisical, today's temptation. Keen attention to essentials necessary, also general consistency of effort, but worry, apprehension are tabu. You can attain.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Advice to Aries also helpful here now. You should be able to get along well with day's schedule and make grades anticipated, but don't expect nor strive for the unreasonable.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Because you often are restlessly active and usually like something new, different, we caution to go sensibly slowly today to better value the right issue. And tact.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Put your mind on urgent business or work tasks and don't worry or leave them for side issues. Day will respond generously to wise management and plans. Be hopeful.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Similar tendencies (and good possibilities) now to Gemini so sane caution but not apprehension are your watchwords. Your occupational duties and private interests are the most sponsored.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — Stimulating for mental agility, originality and creativeness so it should be agreeable day for you and your activities. Dare to try what you feel is soundly progressive, saleable.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Good indication for worthy and known matters. May have to urge self more to tackle some tasks but the effort will be repaid. Freshly favored are useful manufacturing, building, science.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Scientific, government, civic, economic interests and matters pertinent to their quicker success highly honored for study, execution. A day for sound action and attainment, no nonsense.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Same matters endorsed for Scorpio now on your encouraged list. Be mindful of urgent duties which strongly include domestic problems. Fine results for right kind of effort.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Perk up! You have advantages, fresh opportunities today that many do not have. Of course how you manage them and the quickness with which you work to achieve will determine progress.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Knit together firmly your initiative and all valuable assets, and put them to work on today's musts. Also keep in mind as you plan and work the likely possibilities and outcome.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — May be a teaser-sort period for you but you still should enjoy and prosper some if working with its good aspects. Show your innate originality, foresight and keen judgment.

YOU BORN TODAY: Two strongly different types of individuals are associated with this Sign of the Humanitarian — Aquarius. When rightly educated and your finer characteristics developed, you are a leader for great good and can succeed in profession, business, trade, religious calling, wherever you choose. Strengthen firmness of character, dependability and curb restlessness. Aquarians who forsake spiritual development and indulge in wrong companions or idleness, become careless, restless, unreliable, know thyself! Seek Divine guidance and you will be a credit to yourself, family, community. Birthdate: Fritz Kreisler, great violinist; Nell Gwyn, famed actress.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma came home from downtown, and I said, Mr. Satterlee the brush man was here, ma.

I'm glad I wasn't home, ma said. He keeps me standing at the door for hours listening to his long tails of his son in colledge and his wife in despair and I dont know what all, she said, and I said, He said to tell you he has a wonderful new dye that dies things any color you want and makes them look as if thty wereborn that way.

I dont need any dye, ma said. What I need is a magic formula that will put new clothes in my closit in the twinkling of a wish, she said, and I said, Anyways, ma, you're lucky not to have any of his dye. He left a little sample of red color to prove it, but it didn't prove a thing, because it makes stuff all streeky, I said.

Do you mean you tried it for land sakes? ma said, and I said, Dont worry, ma, I was careful not to try it on anything useful. I tried it on my old torn patched blue jeens that you said you were going to throw out, I said.

What? Where are they now? Dripping somewhere? ma said, and I said, No mam, I threw them out myself to save you the trubble. Even if you hadn't of wanted to throw them out before, you'd sure want to now, I said.

Where did you do this so called dying? ma said, and I said, Mam? In the bath tub.

Oh my goodness, such news to come home to, I'm afraid to look in the bathroom, ma said.

Which she quick ran upstairs and did anyways.

Being the beginning of the sad part.

Higher Wages But Fewer Jobs Forecast in U.S.

MIAMIA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Higher wages but fewer jobs was the forecast for 1955 received by leaders of the American Federation of Labor today as they opened high-level winter meetings.

The executive council, 17-member policy-making group of the big labor organization, studied a report prepared by AFL economists predicting that unions will win substantial wage boosts this year.

The report, at the same time, expressed fear that unemployment in the United States will average about 4,000,000 throughout the year, or 1,000,000 higher than the jobless average of 1954.

More Bursaries For Students Are Demanded

TORONTO (CP) —Donald C. MacDonald, Ontario CCF leader, said Monday night the provincial legislature at the session starting next week should take steps to make available more adequate bursaries for university students.

Mr. MacDonald spoke at a meeting of the York-Scarboro CCF Association.

Excerpts from his speech were released to the press before delivery.

He quoted figures which showed that in 1952 three per cent of the Canadian population between the ages of 15 and 24 attended university, compared with 15 per cent in the United States.

"One of the main reasons for this low percentage in Canada is the failure of governments to provide assistance to capable but financially needy students.

"And nowhere is that failure greater than in Ontario. There is a smaller proportion of Ontario's population attending university than in five other provinces—British Columbia, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island."

Request Refused Says Oliver

TORONTO (CP)—Farquhar Oliver, Ontario Liberal leader, said Monday night the Progressive Conservative government has refused to allow a report by the minority on the committee investigating highways irregularities although the party filed such reports when it was the opposition.

Mr. Oliver spoke over a CBC Ontario network in the free-time series "Provincial Affairs."

The three opposition members last week boycotted the last public hearings of the committee, set up during the last session of the legislature to investigate highways irregularities. It completed hearings last week and immediately started writing its report for presentation to the session which starts Feb. 8.

Mr. Oliver said he requested that several witnesses be subpoenaed but his request was refused.

"This dictum I recognized as a thinly veiled determination to frustrate the committee's work and to call no witnesses save and except those in which the government had confidence.

"Then, to add insult to injury, we are told by both the attorney-general and the committee chairman, that we, the opposition, have no right to file a minority report. . . ."

Liberal Member Against Change In Divorce Law

OTTAWA (CP)—J. O. Gour said Monday night he has such high regard for the way in which the Senate handles Quebec and Newfoundland divorce cases that he would be happy to let the Upper Chamber settle his divorce—if he ever considered one.

The Liberal member for the Ontario constituency of Russell said in the Commons throne speech debate he is against any change in the system whereby Parliament deals with divorce petitions from these provinces, mainly through a Senate committee. All other provinces have their own divorce courts.

Mr. Gour, a Roman Catholic married for 25 years, said he personally opposes divorce, adding:

"Marriage is not a trade of houses or cars."

Then he gave his opinion on the cause of many divorces.

"Above all, it's generally the men who are most often guilty."

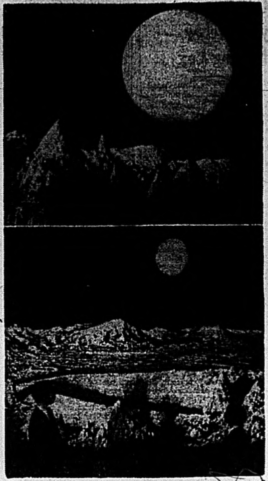
HEAVENS COME DOWN TO EARTH



Based in part on actual telescopic photographs, these are among the final "black light" flourescent murals unveiled at the American Museum—Hayden Planetarium in New York depicting astronomical wonders in our solar system. At top, the planet Jupiter is seen 260 thousand miles distant from the surface of Io, its second satellite. Atmospheric bands are clearly visible. At bottom, the mountains and craters of the airless moon are sharply etched in the sunlight reflected from the planet earth, some 240 thousand miles away. (Central Press Canadian).

Storer of the U.S. army medical corps is about to press the button of the new unit to X-ray the chest of Cpl. Coleman. (Central Press Canadian.)

Asbestos Country Has Own Brand Of 'Smog'

THETFORD MINES, Que. (CP) —The asbestos country has its own brand of "smog," and has waged a seven-year war against the menace.

All you have to do to get rid of smog is spend a few million dollars and be surrounded by wide open spaces, says Maurice Lachance, dust control engineer in the asbestos district.

The industry says Lachance has participated in the spending of millions of dollars and reduced the dust count by 50 per cent.

Asbestos companies currently are spending some $4,000,000 on the dust program and estimate that by next year asbestos dust should have "almost completely disappeared."

A spokesman said 90 per cent of the money is being spent on equipment, some of which had been designed by engineers in the asbestos mills of this area. The remainder was being spent on ventilation in the mills.

Long before smog made sensational headlines in such places as London and San Francisco, people were frightened by airborne dust in towns like Asbestos, Thetford Mines and Black Lake, said Mr. Lachance.

"Today, it is the big cities like Montreal and Toronto and hundreds of smaller industrial centres that are worried about air contamination," he added.

"Compared to most city-dwellers in Canada, the asbestonian breathes fresh, clean air.

"In all industrial centres, air contamination is a health hazard. In certain cities the gathering of poisonous gas fumes, smoke and dust particles is frightening. In the asbestos belt we are fortunate in having only dust to cope with. There are no smelters here, and wide open spaces we live in make the job that much easier.

"During the last seven years we have succeeded in decreasing the dust count by 50 per cent in these localized areas. During the next year or so, with all the new machinery, modern ventilation and scientific equipment being put into use, dust control should be even more effective."

Both Escape Injury

HALIFAX (CP) — A navy Avenger aircraft made an emergency landing on the ice of a lake near its Shearwater base Monday. Both men aboard escaped injury.

The navy said the anti-submarine aircraft's power failed while on a routine flight and the plane was forced down on De Said lake near the base, across the harbor from here.

The pilot was Lieut. G. J. McMillan of Trail, B.C, and the observer PO. R. E. M. Geale of Peterborough.

Further details were not released.

HOME BY 10:30 P. M.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A curfew on 'teen-agers went into effect Monday night in a move to curb juvenile delinquency. Those under 17 found on the streets by policemen after 10:30 p. m. were sent home, unless with parents, working in gainful employment, or on an errand at their parents' direction.

Toronto Council Accepts Offer Of Civic Centre

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto city council Monday night accepted the offer of E. P. Taylor and associates to build a $12,000,000 civic auditorium and instructed board of control to negotiate details. The offer was put forward last week.

The auditorium is to be built and operated by the O'Keefe Centre Foundation, a non-profit organization on which the city will be represented.

Ald. Jean Newman found no support for a motion to defer acceptance until the planning board could submit alternative recommendations for a city-sponsored centre.

Rival Unions Contesting For Right to Act

OTTAWA (CP)—Two rival unions are contesting for the right to act as bargaining agent for deck officers of the big inland fleet of Canada Steamship Lines Ltd.

The Canada labor relations board announced Monday it has ordered a representation vote of the officers to choose between the Canadian Navigators' and Engineers' Federation (Ind.) and the Canadian Merchant Service Guild (TLC).

The federation now holds certification for the fleet's approximately 160 deck officers below the rank of master. The vote was ordered after the guild applied for certification. It will be taken when the officers are employed for the 1955 shipping season.

Await Report From Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will not consider representations from Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. in connection with its proposed west-east natural gas line until it gets a report from Finance Minister Harris.

Acting Prime Minister Howe, replying Monday to a question in the Commons, gave no indication as to when the cabinet might reach a decision.

The company asked the government about a fortnight ago to guarantee the bonds for its $300,000,000 line from Alberta to eastern Canada to assist in the financing of its 2,200-mile line.

Hastings County Farm Forum

"Producer marketing" proved a good subject for discussion at last Monday's Brookdale meeting with 12 members, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Frost; Hazzards (26), met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Lewis, and River Valley met at home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Heasman with 14 present.

Some of the forums couldn't understand why all hogs had to be shipped to Toronto. Why couldn't the agency operate at other points? If everyone sold through the agency farmers would derive a benefit.

PRICE LEVEL NECESSARY

Orderly marketing should keep prices on a level. High and low prices are bad for producers and consumers alike. Farmers should be given assurance that they will receive cost of production for their product. Farmers should back up the United Livestock Sales, Ltd., as they have already broken ice and may lead to eventual success.

Hazzard's say this is the $64 question, but with a good job of public relations farmers would be more enthusiastic about marketing boards.

SPREADING CONFUSION

Packers and drovers are spreading confusion among farmers, whereas they should be behind any move farmers may make to improve their lot. Packers' and farmers' prosperity lie in the same direction — production of meat.

A co-operative packing plane was suggested as the answer but the price of such would be prohibitive.

If the United Livestock Sales Ltd., could work as efficiently as the vegetable marketing boards the Forum would have something.

Hastings County Farm Forum sponsored a bus trip today, leaving Foxboro at 7.15 a.m., arriving Oshawa 10 a.m., tour of General Motors new plant; tour of Parliament buildings, Toronto, at 2 p.m. and Ice Follies, at 8.30.

TRAINING CRUISE

OTTAWA (CP)—The destroyer escort HMCS Algonquin, fresh from an anti-submarine exercise in the Bermuda area, will leave Halifax Feb. 11 for a five-week training cruise to the West Indies and southern United States, naval headquarters said Monday. The Algonquin returned to Halifax Sunday from exercises with the frigate HMCS Penetang and the United States Navy submarine Requin.

ENJOYING REST

Progressive Conservative leader George Drew, convalescing at his home at Guelph, Ont., finds that detective and historical books help him to forget political problems. The 61-year-old opposition leader suffered an attack of meningitis last November and has been resting since he left hospital. He is expected to return to the House of Commons February 15th. THE FEEBLE ALLOWED TO RETURN

Too weak to walk, a German who spent ten years as a Russian prisoner of war is carried to an ambulance after arriving in Litchenfels, Germany. He was released from Soviet slave labor camp Potma, near Moscow, when his feet became so badly frostbitten that he was no longer able to carry on his work. (Central Press Canadian).

The British navy has developed this new device for improving means of rescue by helicopter. The apparatus, shown here during a demonstration, is a scoop net capable of lifting a person out of the sea as the 'copter hovers overhead at a "walking pace." The device was invented by commanding officer of the air-sea rescue unit, Lt.-Comdr. John Sproule, R.N. More than 100 successful practice rescue operations have been carried out. Newsmen Whip CJBQ 4-3

The Ontario Intelligencer Inkspots came from behind twice last night at Memorial Arena in a close-checking game to hand the CJBQ hockey team a narrow 4-3 defeat. The fixture was very clean with referee Bob McCann failing to dish out a single penalty.

Boyd Upper and Garry Alexander teamed up to sink the winning goal with about five minutes left to play and the score tied 3-3. Upper carried along the right boards and laid a pass across the goalmouth where Alexander banged it home amidst a wild scramble.

Paul Primeau stood out for the losers, scoring all three of their goals. His first of the night gave the radio crew a 1-0 lead early in the game, beating Morton on a close-in drive to the corner, but Upper got that one back with a short flip by Flagler. Primeau fired another but Fred Soule tipped in a corner shot from Culloden, and Skelly gave the press a 3-2 lead with O'Brien assisting at about the half way mark. Primeau's third tally came on a clean breakaway and set the stage for Alexander's winner goal.

Ted Snider picked up a pair of helpers for the "1230" sixtet, while Jack (Le Gros) Devine threw a few hefty bodychecks, broke his stick along the boards and decided to pick up the puck with his hands on one occasion.

Myles Morton for the winners, and Phil Flagler both came up with steady games between the pipes. The Inkspots are still undefeated with a tie and a win in two games but the radio crew should be ready for a return battle in a week or so and could pull an upset.

The teams:

Radio—Flagler, Devine, Snider, Primeau, Collins, Hookings, Buchanan, Stovin.

Press—Morton, Culloden, Haire, Alexander, Upper, Thompson, Skelly, Weeks, Soule, O'Brien, and Curly Munns.

Referee—Bob McCann.

Northern Electric Hockey League

The Barons took a one-game lead in the best-of-three Northern Electric Interdepartment hockey league finals over the week-end by handing the Indians a 6-1 setback. The second game will be played this coming week-end

Woodley paced the winners' attack with two goals and one assist while Hatfield scored twice and Jones had a trio of assists. MacDonald and Kirkconnell also hit the hemp with assists for Wetherall and Piperni. Wright netted the Indian marker, unassisted.

Five minor penalties were handed out, one each to J. Semark, Pucansik, Barcley, Woodley and Thrasher. The officials were J. Wardhaugh and B. Hurst.

PLAN UNVEILING

OTTAWA (CP)—A memorial will be unveiled at Saiwan bay cemetery in Hong Kong Feb. 20 on which are recorded the names of 228 Canadian soldiers with no known graves. Names of the Canadians, army headquarters said Monday, will be among those of more than 2,000 Commonwealth servicemen who died during the siege of Hong Kong just 13 years and a month ago. Their graves have never been located.

CLIMBS 10,000 FEET IN 83 SECONDS

A navy FJ-3 Fury jet fighter climbed to an altitude of 10,000 feet in 83 seconds at the Hiramar, Calif, naval air station. At top, Cmdr. John L. Butts (left) compares notes with Lt. Cmdr. R. H. Moore after the test flight. At bottom, Moore, executive officer of navy squadron 51, in the front plane, soars straight up ahead of another craft flown by Butts, who clocked him. It is reported that Lt. Cmdr. William J. Manby, Jr., of South Bend, Ind., bettered Moore's official record by piloting a navy FJ-9 Fury jet to 10,000 feet in 73.2 seconds at Norfolk, Va. Serge Rubinstein Despised In Lifetime as Few Men Are

By ARTHUR EVERETT

NEW YORK (AP)—Eight years ago a spectator cried out at a draft dodger on trial in federal court here:

"Somebody ought to kill you."

The draft dodger was Serge Rubinstein, unaware at the time that he was on his way to prison and within the decade to a cruel and lonely death.

In how many places and in how many tongues did the 46-year-old Rubinstein hear a similarly malevolent curse before somebody did kill him in the early hours of last Thursday morning?

MONEY AND WOMEN

For this son of a Russian banker was despised during his lifetime as few men are. Even in death there were few to say a good word for him.

Serge Rubinstein consecrated his life to the pursuit of two things—money and women. Neither eluded him.

Worth more than $10,000,000 when he died, he used money to buy everything money can buy—fine food, good wine, soft garments, a palatial home, unique furnishings, lavish amusements, power, a fleeting security and immunity from the greatest war mankind ever waged.

Rubinstein was found dead on the pale green wall-to-wall bedroom carpeting of his Fifth avenue mansion at 8:30 a.m. Thursday by a butler who came to awaken him. He had been strangled.

FAMILY FLED RUSSIA

Who was Serge Rubinstein? The riddle of his personality can never be completely solved. For much of his background depends on his own version of his past. And Serge Rubinstein was a most unreliable man and honesty to him could be construed as weakness. For what it is worth however, here is his story:

He was born in May, 1908, in St. Petersburg in the imperial Russia of the last czar. His father, Dmitri, was privy counsellor to the czar and financial adviser to the mad monk, Rasputin.

In 1917, when Serge was nine, his father lined a greatcoat with as much money as he could and fled Russia in advance of the Red revolution. A few months later, his wife and two children joined him in Sweden, Serge with pieces of his family's jewels hidden on him. The family travelled on forged papers.

Serge grew up in Stockholm and Vienna. He went to school at Cambridge in England, where he won honors in economics. Through later life he spoke English with an accent faintly Russian and British.

The shrewd, young student realized that much of old Russia's wealth was stored outside the country and that its owners had died in the revolution. He ferreted out one such dormant account in a Swiss bank, rounded up heirs to claim the fund and gained $17,000 in commissions for this chore.

His truly fabulous career began quietly enough with Serge holding down a modest job in a small Paris bank, the Banque Franco Asiatique. With his lifelong flair for complicated manipulation, he had acquired control of the bank at the age of 22.

EJECTED FROM FRANCE

In 1935, the fledgling financier was kicked out of France for speculating against the franc. Rubinstein blamed his ouster on Premier Pierre Laval's anti-semitism and also to the fact that both men had eyes for the same Parisian beauty. This eye for beautiful women was another lifelong Rubinstein trait.

Meanwhile he had won control of the Chosen Corp., a holding company for Korean gold mines, whose British promoter had gone to jail. Later, Rubinstein was accused of milking the company to the tune of $6,000,000. He was forced to repay $2,000,000 of this to minority stockholders in a 1946 settlement of a lawsuit.

Rubinstein obtained a passport in the Portuguese colony of Macao off the China coast by swearing he was the illegitimate product of an affair between his mother and a Portuguese nobleman.

With this passport, in 1938, Rubinstein entered the United States by way of Canada, under the name of Serge Manuel Rubinstein de Rovello. Portugal later repudiated the passport, leaving Rubinstein once again a stateless outcast.

Plunging into Wall street, he gained control of the old Postal Telegraph Co., and is reported to have dragged down a cool million when it merged with Western Union. He was credited with clearing another million by his manipulations during the unification of the New York subway system.

BRILLIANTLY RUTHLESS

Another of his brilliantly ruthless deals concerned a broken-down oil producer, the Panhandle Producing and Refining Co. By highly questionable means he built it into a holding company that provided him with $3,500,000 net profit.

Rubinstein controlled as many as 17 corporations at a time. He once told an interviewer:

"My technique in finance is to figure out how much the company is worth dead—not living. I don't pay much attention to figures on a company's earning power. I'm most interested in finding out if the liquidation price of a company's assets is more than the price of the stock."

Rubinstein was riding high when the United States began drafting its Second World War army. When bachelors only were being drafted in 1941, Serge married for the first and only time in his life. In his draft dodging, Rubinstein was accused of claiming all manner of relatives as dependents, falsely representing his income as meagre, buying his way into executive positions in defence plants so he would appear essential, and pulling strings up and down the line from here to Washington.

Rubinstein managed to get 15 different changes in his draft status over the years. He never was drafted. But in 1945 he was indicted as a draft dodger and eventually served a federal prison sentence of 2½ years.

When Rubinstein came out of prison in 1949 the U.S. government began deportation proceedings against him. Rubinstein fell back on his money to hire the best legal talent he could find. This method worked and to the day of his death his endless court appeals staved off his deportation.

Appeal Court Orders 75 P.C. Cut in Award

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario Appeal Court Monday ordered a 75 per cent cut in the expropriation award of $89,487 ruled by a county court judge to 12 Sarnia district property owners.

The award was reduced to $2,476.

Chief Justice J. W. Pickup in ordering the cut, said it was not proved that the land value had been lowered by the presence of a 5½-mile oil pipe line installed by the Interprovincial Pipe Line Co.

The company was ordered to pay costs of the appeal and interest on the reduced awards.

Minister Wants Indians As Full Citizens

TORONTO (CP) — Immigration Minister Pickersgill said Monday night he hopes the day will come soon when Indian schools are abolished in favor of a system where all children sit in the same classrooms.

He told the Young Men's Canadian Club of Toronto that Canada's Indian population will get a new deal.

"We intend to respect and safeguard not only their treaty rights, but our moral obligations to them" he said.

Mr. Pickersgill, whose department administers Indian affairs, said every constructive effort will be made to integrate the Indians into the Canadian community as full citizens.

Called "Twilight—Dufferin Terrace, Quebec," the painting was presented to Sir Winston by the Canadian Clubs of Canada on the prime minister's 80th birthday. The 104-pictures in the exhibit are attracting many Canadian and British visitors. (CP Photo.)

Steelworkers Planning Drive For Higher Pay

HAMILTON (CP) — A drive for higher wages to increase consumer purchasing power is planned by the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL).

In a report at the union's 11th The report, made public Monday national director C. H. Millard said the future of the Canadian economy depends on giving workers more money to buy the things which management produced.

"Fully-employed and highly-paid Canadian workers and prosperous farmers are the best customers management can find."

Mr. Millard said that while management is "trying to blame organized labor for everything that is going wrong with our economy" they are resisting every proposal for wage increases, reduction of hours and improved social security.

He added: "It is the job of the labor movement to insist upon more purchasing power and upon government action to stimulate and to press for the fullest measure of social security our economy can support."

DRIVE ON MINES

Mr. Millard also announced plans for a drive to shorten the work week in northern Ontario gold mines this year. He said union activity on the drive had been slow but declared that it had grown and would be put under way this year.

Mr. Millard said progress in the gold mines has been slow since the strike at several of the mines a year ago, but there has been a steady growth in union activity.

PLAN EXPANSION

SARNIA (CP)—A carbon monoxide steam generator, the first of its kind in Canada, will be built immediately at the Canadian Oil Companies Ltd. refinery, president W. Harold Rea announced Monday. The $400,000 installation is part of the company's $3,000,000, three-year expansion program now underway, he said. The generator will increase the plant's efficiency, recovering energy in steam form by burning of "cracker" regenerator gas.

TCA Accused By Thatcher Of Being Lax

OTTAWA (CP) — Trans-Canada Air Lines and officials of the transport department have been accused of being lax in taking elementary precautions to protect TCA passengers.

Ross Thatcher (CCF — Moose Jaw - Lake Centre) made the charge Monday in the Commons as he urged tighter regulations to increase the safety of Canadian air travel.

A resident of Moose Jaw, Sask., site of Canada's worst civil air disaster, Mr. Thatcher was commenting in the throne speech debate on the passing of a TCA North Star and an RCAF Harvard trainer on converging courses near Moose Jaw Jan. 6. The incident occurred nine months after the crash of a TCA North Star and an RCAF Harvard trainer over Moose Jaw's outskirts killed 37 persons.

On Jan. 10 Transport Minister Marler told the Commons that the passing was made at the prescribed altitude clearance and was not a near catastrophe. He said investigation showed newspaper and radio reports were "grossly exaggerated and misleading."

DIDN'T AGREE

Mr. Thatcher said Mr. Marler's statement intimated present air safety regulations are fairly satisfactory but the opposition member said he takes "exception to that view."

Referring to the Jan. 6 incident, Mr. Thatcher said:

"The view of newspaper editorials as well as the official view seems to be that the RCAF was largely responsible. The TCA people, particularly, seemed to take that view, including the captain of the ship which was involved.

"Perhaps the RCAF was partly to blame but I personally cannot help feeling that Trans-Canada Air Lines is not going to increase the safety of its passengers over the Moose Jaw area or over any other training area simply by blaming the RCAF. Certainly it cannot—at least until TCA itself has taken every possible precaution.

". . . In my opinion, Trans-Canada Air lines and the officials of the department of transport have been lax in taking certain elementary safety precautions."

CHICAGO COMMUNIST 'FAILS' SMITH TEST

Claude M. Lightfoot, 44, is shown after being convicted in Chicago in the first test of a section of the Smith act which holds that membership in the Communist party, while knowing its aims, is a crime. Lightfoot is executive secretary of the party in Illinois. The precedent-setting verdict of the jury was widely watched since it opens the door to possible indictment of other Communist members. Lightfoot remained free on $30,000 bond. A defence motion for a new trial was set for Feb. 15. — Central Press Canadian.

Review Board Will Be Set Up Says Premier

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost said Monday night a board of review to handle all disputed property settlements in connection with expropriation of land for the St. Lawrence power-seaway project will be set up Wednesday.

The premier said he will meet with a six-man committee from the eastern Ontario region and with the Ontario hydro electric power commission and its property acquisition officers.

Mr. Frost said the Wednesday meeting is aimed at clearing up the basis and method on which property settlements along the river will be made. Some 6,500 valley residents will be affected by flooding of the river.

Representatives from Osnabruck, Matilda, Williamsburg and Cornwall townships and the villages of Iroquois and Morrisburg had said Hydro employees were using pressure tactics in connection with land deals.

ST. MARYS (CP) —Motorists complained Monday about a man jumping in front of their automobiles. When police investigated the reports, the man leaped in front of the police cruiser. Asked what he was doing, the man said he was the official break tester. The man was sent to an Ontario hospital for observation.

TORONTO (CP)—An application for permission to hold Sunday amateur boxing shows in the downtown Casino theatre was sidetracked by city officials Monday after Casino manager Murray Little said the theatre is not available for such purposes. William Varley, who made the application, said he will keep on applying for permission.

RED GUNBOATS ATTACK EVACUATION SHIP

Tornadoes Leave 31 Dead, 100 Hurt In Three States

Undetermined Number Stripped of Their Homes

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Three mid-southern states surveyed extensive damage today in the wake of deadly storms that left 31 dead, about 100 hurt and an undetermined number stripped of their homes.

Tornadoes burst from dark, boiling clouds of a squall line Tuesday and struck in Arkansas, Alabama and Mississippi.

Twenty-three were killed near Commerce Landing, Miss., about 30 miles south of here. Three perished in another twister at Olive Branch, Miss., 18 miles south of Memphis.

Tornadoes also caused considerable damage near Marianna, Ark., and Huntsville, Ala., but no one was badly injured.

Many of the Mississippi dead and injured were children.

National guardsmen patrolled the Commerce Landing area today as survivors searched a plantation's splintered tenant houses for possible additional victims.

Most of the damage at Olive Branch centred at Wiggins Negro elementary school. Twenty-three students were at their desks when the twister struck. A teacher and two children were killed.

Ambulances from towns in the surrounding delta area moved the injured to hospitals in Memphis and Tunica, Miss.

The Commerce Landing tornado cut a swath 200 feet wide through the 8,000-acre Leatherman plantation, destroying a row of tenant houses, a Negro church, a school and a cotton gin.

W. V. France, an eyewitness, said the school was whipped away before his eyes, as if a giant had snatched it up and tossed both wreckage and bodies into the boiling clouds.

"Afterward men and women came to the spot," he said. "They would find a child and come crying up the road with it in their arms. It doesn't seem possible anybody got out, but they say two little boys did."

Churchill Says Reds Catching Up In A-Bomb Race

LONDON (CP) — Sir Winston Churchill today predicted Russia will catch up with the West's atomic superiority in a few years and only then might a lasting East-West understanding be reached.

The British prime minister made the prediction in a 40-minute address to the Commonwealth conference here.

Churchill said he believes that when East and West have equal nuclear strength to destroy each other, they will finally realize the necessity of a lasting agreement for the sake of their own preservation.

The prime minister told the conference, which began Monday, that he believes the West's nuclear superiority to date has prevented the Free World from being overrun.

At this point, he warned that Russia could be expected to catch up with the United States in a few years.

Prime Minister Nehru of India urged the conference to work for the complete abolition of nuclear weapons to save mankind from extinction.

Nehru argued that the hydrogen bomb made war obsolete as an instrument of policy. He called for a halt to the production and testing of nuclear bombs.

At Tuesday's session, which again were dominated by Prime Minister Churchill's imaginative vision of a world living in the shadow of the hydrogen bomb, the Canadian prime minister made two main contributions.

In the morning meeting he expressed Canada's support of the London and Paris accords on German rearmament, not so much from the military standpoint as for their value in restoring Western Germany to the community of free nations. He said Canada feels negotiations with Russia should begin only after the agreements come into force.

Canada has however joined Britain in re-emphasizing the importance of four-power negotiations after the agreements on German rearmament have come into force.

At a "regional defence" meeting in the afternoon the Canadian prime minister outlined his country's contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. He made plain that Canada will not be able appreciably to increase her peacetime defence commitments. He stressed Canada's increasing preoccupation with continental defence.

Hold Toronto Man For Possessing Smuggled Jewels

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Zamon, 52-year-old Toronto salesman, was arrested by RCMP officers Tuesday night at nearby Malton airport as he stepped off a plane from western Canada. Police said he has been charged with possession of $10,000 worth of smuggled jewelry.

He was described as a salesman of expensive jewelry items.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: The low pressure area, which originated over Oklahoma Tuesday morning, is moving rapidly eastward off the Atlantic coast today. Strong northeast winds circulating around the low brought cold air deep into southern Ontario during the night. Three to four inches of snow fell in the Niagara and Bruce peninsulas. Light snowflurries will continue today in regions where the winds are off-lake. Clear skies and cold weather over northern Ontario is forecast to persist.

Two Killed In Plane Crash

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rescuers were reported making slow progress in early-morning darkness today as they carried two bodies and five severely-injured persons from a plane crash in the remote Queen Charlotte islands.

Two of seven persons died in a de Havilland Beaver which crashed Tuesday in heavily-wooded country in the Queen Charlottes, which lie off the northern coast of British Columbia 500 miles north of Vancouver.

B. C. Air Lines Ltd. said the pilot of their Beaver was 27-year-old Bill Bellam of Alliford Bay, B. C. Bellam was married only six months ago.

Company officials early today still did not know the names of the six passengers, but assumed they were loggers.

Money Easily Burns Hole in Pocket But Banks Find It Hard to Destroy

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Money stinks.

Not all kinds of money, of course. Just old dirty, beat-up money—the kind a man would hesitate even to give to a relative.

This worn-out currency is accumulated by the Federal Reserve Bank before it is destroyed.

"One of our biggest problems recently was designing air-conditioning for two federal reserve vaults," said John Moster, executive vice-president of the 107-year-old Mosler Safe Company. "They had to have fresh air ducts to take away the money fumes.

"Most people like the smell of crisp new money. But the smell of stacked, old money will knock a horse over."

Getting rid of this repulsive fragnance is only one of the troubles with old money. It is also hard to get rid of the money itself. You may find money easily burns a hole in your own pocket, but the U.S. government has found it so difficult to destroy bundles of old bills that it now has a money shredder to chop it up before it is put to the torch.

Many people now have safes in their homes. One lady asked for a pink safe with a carved gold knob to fit the decor of her boudoir. A surprising number have real bank vaults built into their homes.

"Most of them are art or jewel collectors," Mosler said tactfully.

The price for putting one of these in your home starts at $12,000. A really big vault, 25 to ? tons, can cost up to a million dollars.

Of course, the big job has an added advantage. It not only will safeguard the family silverware—it makes a swell place for the kids to play in on a rainy day.

ROWE ADVANCES PC NATIONAL HEALTH PLAN

Would Not Interfere With Present Programs

OTTAWA (CP) — The national health insurance plan of the Progressive Conservative party would not interfere with present health- and hospital-insurance programs of private companies, the Commons has been told.

Nor would it be state medicine, Hon. Earl Rowe, acting opposition leader, said Tuesday night.

Mr. Rowe, in a speech championing free enterprise, enlarged on one section of his party's six-point non-confidence motion in the government which he moved at the start of the throne speech debate Jan. 10.

The proposal was for a contributory plan, in co-operation with the provinces, to ensure "adequate hospital and medical services" for every Canadian. It was the first time the proposal had been included in a Conservative non-confidence motion.

"It is not going to be state medicine or a socialistic plan," he added. It would not interfere with Blue Cross and other health insurance plans.

Mr. Rowe referred to the CCF as a splinter party whose only contribution to Canadian political life had been "to perpetuate the life of this rather dead government that is in power."

Most of his criticism, however, was of the Liberals, whom he described as "those old dusty free traders on the one wing and high protectionists on the other wing."

Mr. Rowe challenged cabinet ministers to state they stand for free trade.

Eisenhower Silent About Quemoy, Matsu

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower said today the United States has made it crystal clear it does not intend to let Formosa fall to international communism.

He told a press conference he believes the United States' declaration to defend Formosa, approved by Congress last week, ensures against any miscalculation by the Chinese Communists about American determination.

The president said there has been no commitment to use U. S. ground forces in defence of Formosa. But he declined to go into any details as to how the U. S. intends to protect that main Chinese Nationalist island and the Pescadores.

Eisenhower specifically refused to say whether the Nationalists' off-shore outpost islands of Quemoy and Matsu would be defended by the United States.

He said he was not going to provide any blueprint for the Reds.

U.S. Island Stronghold Might Be First Target if Formosa Hit

By ROBERT EUNSON

NAHA, Okinawa (AP)—If the Communists actually do make a grab for Formosa, it seems pretty clear they will attack Okinawa first.

This keystone in the U.S. Pacific defence plan is only 400 miles from the coast of Red China. This means U.S. atom bombers from Okinawa could be over Formosa strait in less than an hour, dropping flaming death on a Communist invasion force from the mainland bound for Formosa.

Okinawa's bombers could reduce Peiping to smoking ruins two hours after war was declared and polish off Shanghai in half that time.

Consequently Okinawa will be at war immediately if President Eisenhower has to use his congressional-granted prerogative and call upon U.S. forces to defend Formosa.

"We are the No. 1 Communist target in the Pacific," says Maj.-Gen. David A. D. Ogden, top U.S. commander for Okinawa and the Ryukyu islands.

Is Okinawa defensible against an emphibious attack?

"That all depends on the navy and the air force," Ogden says. "We learned when we were playing this game ourselves that once the navy and air force break through and you get the troops on the beaches it's only a matter of time."

The U.S. 7th Fleet is operating in the vicinity of Okinawa, so if the Communists want to land an invasion force here they have to get past the navy first.

Chinese bombers from the mainland would be met by Sabre-jets which constantly patrol these azure skies.

Whether the U.S. stock of bombs at hand includes the big ones is a security matter.

But the chances are the bomb is here and the only thing needed to put it aboard a plane parked on Okinawa is a message from Washington.

The general opinion around here seems to be that if the Communists want to find out, all they have to do is start a war. But no one around here actually believes the Communists will.

Big News Story from Russia Is Expansion in Industry

By TOM WHITNEY

NEW YORK (AP)—The biggest news story from Russia rarely gains in industry.

breaks into the headlines: It's the fact that the Soviet Union continues year after year to register big gains in industry.

Figures make dry reading, but they are much more likely to tell the final story of war or peace and who wins out in the race for world leadership than conflicts within the Kremlin.

Premier Malenkov may be scheming these days how to knife party boss Nikita Khrushchev—and vice versa. But Malenkov, Khrushchev and the other Kremlin leaders agree that the industrial building of the U.S.S.R. must be pushed.

Here's how the Soviet Union compared in 1954 with the United States in production of four major industrial commodities generally regarded as reflecting over-all economic strength: (First three items listed in million metric tons; power in billion kilowatt hours.)

Commodity	U.S.S.R.	U.S.
Steel	41	80
Steel	41	80
Coal	346	373
Petroleum	58	312
Electric power	148	544

Except for coal, U.S. production of these basic items is from two to five times that of the U.S.S.R., but the American margin used to be much higher in some items.

Coal is not only a basic fuel but also a raw material for the chemical and metallurgical industries. And because American coal production has dropped sharply during recent years, the U.S.S.R. is about to capture first place in the world unless there's a quick upswing in U.S. output.

The Soviet leadership has many serious economic problems, particularly in agriculture. But none was serious enough to prevent Russia from increasing steel output in 1954 by more than 3,000,000 tons, coal by 26,000,000, cement by 3,000,000, petroleum by 6,000,000 and electric power by 15,000,000,000 kilowatt hours.

During the same year American steel production fell off by about 2,000,000 tons, coal by about 60,000,000, and petroleum about 6,000,000.

In electric power, the U.S. output increased more than twice as much as that of the U.S.S.R.—by 31,000,000,000 kilowatt hours. This demonstrates that the U.S. is not by any means sliding backwards economically.

Nevertheless Russian output of most key products of heavy industry has been increasing at a considerably more rapid rate than that of the U.S., narrowing the still - considerable gap between American and Soviet heavy - industry potential.

Problem of Keeping Air Force Up to Date Besets Department

OTTAWA (CP)—The problem of keeping a small air force equipped with the most up-to-date planes is one that continually besets Canada's defence department.

The 41-squadron RCAF, including reserve units, has only about 20 fighter squadrons. So its needs for aircraft, in terms of quantity, are relatively small.

At the same time, the fighter squadrons need latest-type planes if they are to be at all effective in event of war.

Thus manufacturers can complete orders comparatively quickly but then have to wait until new types of planes have been designed, built and tested.

One informant said it may become necessary eventually for the government to buy planes the armed forces don't need to keep assembly lines in production and in readiness for any emergency.

Officials said it has been found cheaper — and, from a defence standpoint, safer—to keep assembly lines open by turning out unneeded planes than to have to shut them down and later open them up again.

In the case of the CF-100, the ideal situation would be for production of the interceptor to end just as its successor, the CF-105, started coming off assembly lines.

However, there was bound to be some overlapping.

One informant said the government would like to sell CF-100s to its European allies. But these countries wanted to take them through the mutual aid program, in which case Canada would have to foot the bill.

Accused Refused Leave to Appeal Murder Sentence

OTTAWA (CP) — Mr. Justice Robert Taschereau Tuesday dismissed the application of Jerry Simmons for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada his murder conviction and death sentence.

Simmons will be hanged March 2 unless granted clemency by the cabinet. He was scheduled to be hanged Feb. 2 but was granted a reprieve by the Ontario Supreme Court pending his motion for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Simmons of Syracuse, N.Y., and Joe Glen Lotharp, 23, of Detroit were convicted of murder in connection with the death of Bruce Beatty, 67, a year ago near Simcoe. Beatty and his wife were brutally beaten during a gas station robbery attempt. The woman died May 21.

Lotharp was granted an appeal earlier this month and a verdict of acquittal was directed. In his appeal, Lotharp's lawyer said there was agreement between the two to commit robbery but not murder. He said Lotharp was not in the room when violence took place.

CEILING FIGURE ON MORTGAGED NHA HOMES ENDS

Minister Believes Owner Will Get Better Value

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government's housing agency is looking to competition, rather than fixed price ceilings, to keep down the resale price of homes built under National Housing Act mortgages.

Works Minister Winters announced Tuesday immediate end of the policy by which Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation fixed top sales prices for houses erected by commercial builders under maximum NHA loans.

This means that merchant builders, for the first time in nine years, will be able to get maximum NHA mortgages and sell houses for whatever price they can get.

Mr. Winters informed the Commons that the move may result in a moderate, short-term tendency towards higher prices in some areas and for some types of houses. He said, however:

"New supplies of housing are such that competition itself can provide the price limitation. . . .

"The removal of control generally will stimulate competition in the house-building industry and the home owner will, I believe, in the long term get more value for his housing dollar."

HAD TO AGREE

The discarded CMHC policy provided that merchant builders could get maximum mortgages if they agreed not to sell the houses at a price higher than that set by CMHC.

Mr. Winters said the ceiling had been introduced to protect home buyers from unduly high prices. But present conditions were such "that continuation of this policy seems no longer to be warranted."

House building in 1954 reached a record 106,400 units and at Jan. 1 last 71,000 houses were under construction, a peak for that time of year.

In another announcement Tuesday, CMHC said preliminary figures for last year showed mortgage lending under the NHA was about 67 per cent above that of 1953 in dollar volume and 39 per cent higher in houses built. Loans reached a record $485,457,915, covering 53,515 homes, an increase of $195,141,813 in loans and 14,967 in terms of houses.

China Sends Secret Message To Premier Nehru

LONDON (AP)—Indian sources said today Communist China has delivered a secret message about a Formosa cease-fire to Prime Minister Nehru.

This development came as Red C [illegible] to be casting about for a face-saving way to go to the United Nations Security Council to discuss the Formosa situation.

The sources would not disclose contents of the message.

Trinidad in Gay Carnival Mood In Honor of Princess Margaret

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (Reuters) — Today was carnival day for Princess Margaret and the music-loving people of the Caribbean island who will greet her with their gayest tunes, dances and fireworks at a gala party tonight.

Though the visiting Princess continued to rest this morning after her long flight from London and exhausting welcome Tuesday, the day's festivities began in the streets at dawn.

The traditional "steel bands" of garbage can and oil drum virtuosos and calypso singers were all tuned up to show her their best.

After a typical English garden party late today in the grounds of Government House, the big show begins. It will be in the spirit of the pre-Lenten carnival, which is being produced in preview form especially for the Princess. She will see a display of authentic West Indian dancing during the carnival.

On Saturday she is leaving for the island of Tobago and then will board the royal yacht Britannia for her cruise to the Windward and Leeward islands, Jamaica and the Bahamas.

U.S. 7th Fleet Escorts Vessels Carrying Refugees

Bombs Rained on Tachens, 40 Children Die in Flames

TAIPEH, Formosa (Reuters) — Communist Chinese gunboats have attacked a Nationalist ship bringing civilian evacuees from Nan Chin Shan island eight miles south of the beleaguered Tachen group, Nationalist navy sources reported today.

The sources said the ship's arrival at the north Formosan port of Keesung, where she was due this afternoon, would be delayed. It was attacked by four Communist vessels.

A 3,000-ton Nationalist evacuation ship which arrived in Formosa this morning, was reported to have sighted four Communist gunboats about 100 miles from the Tachens during the night.

Earlier it had been reported that ships of the U. S. 7th Fleet were escorting Nationalist ships evacuating civilians from the Tachens.

Reuters news agency quoted usually reliable Nationalist sources as saying an American destroyer was cruising Tuesday night near Nationalist landing craft carrying civilians from the off-shore islands. The sources added that four Communist gunboats patrolling the east China sea did not interfere with the Nationalist ships because of the U. S. ship's presence.

AVOIDING CLASH

It appeared, they added, that the Communists were trying to avoid clashes with units of the 7th Fleet, which now is preparing to cover the expected evacuation of Nationalist troops from the Tachen group.

There was no confirmation of this report. The only word today from Vice-Admiral Alfred M. Pride, commander of the 7th Fleet, was a denial of Hong Kong rumors that one of his ships had been sunk.

Meanwhile, The Associated Press said both Nationalist and American observers are beginning to feel the evacuation of Chiang Kai-shek's troops may not get under way for weeks, if at all, because of the United Nations appeal to Red China for a cease-fire.

Some observers think that if Communist bombing of the Tachens slackens the evacuation idea might be dropped altogether.

Fire Damage At Penitentiary Was $340,000

KINGSTON (CP)—Fire damage in the Kingston penitentiary riot last August amounted to $340,000, fire chief Victor Brightman said Tuesday.

The information was contained in the chief's annual report submitted to city council.

The chief said there were two fires at the institution during the riot, one Aug. 13 and the second on Aug. 15. Both caused about equal damage.

The loss was not covered by insurance.

No Relief Seen From Cold Spell In Shivering East

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There was no relief from the cold spell in the east today but comparatively warm weather remained in the west.

Except for centres in the extreme north, temperatures in western cities will stay at about the same level as Tuesday when Vancouver, Victoria and Prince Rupert, B. C., were in the mid 40s.

But at Montreal and Charlottetown the high was one below zero. Most other cities in the east had sub-freezing highs.

The Lakehead district and northwestern Ontario won't get any warmer and temperatures are not expected to rise above 10 degrees. In other parts of Ontario the sunny cold weather is to continue, weathermen said. Snow, rain and freezing rain fell over the upper Ohio and Mississippi valleys Tuesday night, but are not expected to cross the lakes.

Most high temperatures in southern Ontario were forecast in the mid 20s.

Seek Park Areas In South Ontario

KENORA (CP) —The Northern Ontario Outfitters Association discusses resolutions and elects officers today at the windup of its three-day convention.

Tuesday night, Lands and Forests Minister Clare Mapledoram of Ontario told a dinner gathering an intensive survey is under way in the province to locate areas with park potentialities.

He said the survey was being made with particular reference to the south where the "present dearth of parks, picnic groves and overnight camping areas is being keenly felt."

ROBERT J. WRAY SLIGHTLY INJURED

Robert J. Wray, Belleville Club, suffered abrasions to the wrist and leg Tuesday evening when he walked into the rear fender of a passing car on Front Street. Harry Darling, 11 Cedar Street, was driving south on Front Street when just south of the Bridge Street intersection the pedestrian walked into the rear corner of the car.

In a second mishap, Harold Maynes, 375½ Front Street, fell downstairs lacerating and dislocating his thumb and causing head abrasions. Mr. Maynes was admitted to hospital for treatment.

Groundhog, Bear in Zero Air Took One Look--Back to Lair

If you are a legend believer, a superstition addict or both, leave the tropicals, tackle and tennis racquets in the mothballs.

There are six weeks more winter ahead, if the Candlemas Day legend holds good.

For there were more shadows around this morning than television antennae in Toronto.

There was nary a woodchuck nor bear in sight. And there were few humans around when Ole Sol shoved a brilliant snout over the eastern horizon. Not even a wisp of a cloud speckled the clear blue of the sky.

The air fairly crackled with frost. The snow crunched unrimmed eye and noted a downnewspaperman opened a frostrimmed eye an dnoted a downtown thermometer. It read ten below zero.

A white-whiskered black Thomas cat slunk along Bridge Street West probably returning from nocturnal prowling. It wandered into several store doorways probably seeking a vacated woodchuck hole.

As Mr. Gobel would say, "So there you are."

If you believe in the Candlemas Day legend and did not see a woodchuck or a bear perambulating around the countryside, don't destroy your faith in the myth. Any groundhog, bear or other animal would be plumb crazy to leave a warm bed to investigate the possibilities of spring in weather like this.

So Brer Groundhog and Gramp Bear go back to their cozy subterranean nests to dream of warm earth, green things, soft spring zephyrs and sunshine while we homo sapiens muddle through zero weather, coal, and oil bills, frozen car engines, woodpiles and snowbanks.

Mrs. Wm. Mack, Picton, Dies From Gas Fumes

PICTON (Special)—A 73-year-old woman died and her 78-year-old husband was removed to hospital in serious condition here Tuesday when they were overcome by coal gas escaping from a stove in the kitchen of their home.

Dead is Mrs. William Mack, 21 Washburn Street. Mr. Mack regained consciousness about four hours after his removal to Prince Edward County Hospital. Today his condition was reported as 'fair'.

The tragedy was discovered by Morley Ackerman, landlord of the Mack's home, at 11 a.m.

Mr. Ackerman called at the small three-roomed house to collect the rent and receiving no reply to his continued knocking sensed something was wrong.

Looking through a window he saw Mrs. Ackerman in night-attire, seated in a rocking chair near a coal stove in the room. He entered and was met by strong gas fumes as he opened the door. He examined Mrs. Mack and found her dead.

Hearing moaning from the bedroom he investigated and found Mr. Mack clad in his underwear lying across the bed overcome by gas. Mr. Ackerman immediately called assistance and Mr. Mack was rushed to hospital by ambulance.

Dr. G. C. Caughey, who attended Mr. Mack, reported his patient regained consciousness about three p.m. yesterday.

Later coroner Dr. Clifford Richmond stated no inquest would be held. He said the tragedy was accidental.

Council Approves $25,000 Grant To Albert College

City council at a special budget meeting held Tuesday evening approved of a $25,000 grant to the Albert College Centennial Campaign. A grant of $5,000 was voted for 1955 with a recommendation to future councils that a similar grant be made for the next four years.

Request for the grant was made to council Monday evening, by Albert College Principal A. E. MacKenzie and a delegation of several members of the board of governors. Albert is seeking to raise $300,000 to be used in an expansion program.

Decision on the grant request was unanimous on the part of council with very little discussion on the matter being heard before it was approved.

The budget of the executive and finance committee was gone through; the police commission budget was approved and various other grant requests were considered at the meeting.

Also attending the council meeting were representatives of both the public school board and the high school board. Budgets of both boards will be up this year with an extra half mill being required for high school purposes and an additional two and a half mills for public school purposes, or an over-all increase of three mills for school purposes.

Council will meet again Thursday evening to consider the budgets of other council committees.

Kiwanians Hear Canadian Army Staff Officer

A Canadian army staff officer here yesterday warned against "overnight" formation of West Germany's future army.

Major Richard Cummings, GSO2, Eastern Ontario Command, in an address to the Kiwanis club, held that recruiting for the new army, when ratified, should be a gradual process.

Reason for this is that many of those immediately available to the new army would be "old died-in-the-wool Nazis," he said.

By recruiting right away we will get in many of those types," he added.

"The German people claim that they should formulate the new army slowly . . . and I'm inclined to think they are quite right," he said.

Major Cummings recently spent two years with the Canadian forces in Germany as deputy-adjutant quarter master general. His remarks to the club were based on impressions culled from the "average" working class German, he said.

"As you talk to them you realize that, despite the fact they do not want an army, they feel that it is inevitable," he said.

They also are determined when the new army is formed it will be "subservient to the government as never before."

Major Cummings also touched on the danger of a reassertion of German militarism and said "The only hope is that now western dollars have put Germany back on its feet economically we can really educate its people against armies" and also to " . . . encourage their integration with the economy of the rest of Europe."

"What it really boils down to is the sick patient has got to be watched closely," he concluded.

Major Cummings was introduced by Jim Allen and thanked by Hugh Murray.

Should Subsidize National Drama Says Editor

MONTREAL (CP)—Arnold Edinborough, editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard, said today the government should grant subsidies to help develop national drama in Canada.

Mr. Edinborough told the Women's Art Society public support is also needed "but not in the sense of donations . . . but by having the public pay what a play is worth."

"You can't expect good theatre when you pay a dollar for your ticket," he said.

There has never yet been a great civilization or culture that hasn't had great drama, he said. Yet, there is a reluctance in Canada to pay artists. The public hopes the artist "will do it for you for the good of his soul."

"You need buildings, a production staff, actors and finally, playwrights," he said.

Canada has next to no theatrical buildings, Mr. Edinborough said. Those that exist are converted ice rinks."

"I think it's sad and tragic that a company as good as the Old Vic has to perform in an ice rink. And I don't see where we can have any great theatre when we have no place to put it."

Just Leave Foe If He Invades Remote Alaska

By ELTON FAY

ELMENDORF BASE, Alaska (AP)—An enemy attacking this northern stepping stone to North America would face a tough tussle for big military bases and cities, but he couldn't draw defending forces into struggles over remote areas.

This plan of defence of Alaska's tremendous territory was laid out in a press conference Tuesday by Lt.-Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, commander-in-chief, Alaskan defence command.

"People ask," Atkinson said, "what we would do if an enemy landed at some place like a little spot over on the coast."

In the first place "the enemy wouldn't be interested, and if he were we would just leave him there."

The military's mission was "not to defend all of Alaska" but to keep big installations and important centres out of enemy hands.

Big Alaskan installations mentioned were Elmendorf, Ladd and Fielson air force bases, with Anchorage and Fairbanks listed as "important centres."

Accidents Cost U.S. Ten Billion

CHICAGO (AP) — Accidents in the United States last year took a staggering toll, killing 91,000 persons and injuring 9,200,000. The estimated economic loss was nearly $10,000,000,000.

The No. 1 accident killer, as in the last several years, was the motor vehicle.

The National Safety Council, which today reported the various mishaps in 1954, said that of the total killed in all types of accidents, 36,300 lost their lives in traffic. That was a reduction of five per cent from the 38,300 motor fatalities in 1953 and the lowest total since 1950. It compared with the all-time record high of 39,969 in 1941.

In addition to the fatalities on the highways last year, traffic accidents caused about 1,250,000 non-fatal injuries.

Stratocruiser Lands Safely

GANDER, Nfld. (CP)—A BOAC Stratocruiser with 25 passengers bound from New York to London landed safely here today after one of its four engines quit 325 miles south of St. John's.

The pilot of the British Overseas Airways Corporation plane said he also had "other difficulties" and for a time planned to land at Torbay, near St. John's, but the situation had improved and he continued to Gander.

He did not elaborate.

Council Decides to Enforce Hawkers and Peddlars By-Law

TRENTON (Special) — Trenton council proposes to repeal the by-laws governing milk and bread truck licensing and enforce the hawkers' and peddlers' by-law calling for a $100 licence for each out-of-town truck doing business in Trenton. That was a decision arrived at by council last night after considerable discussion on the matter.

For years bread and milk trucks have been assessed a $1 yearly fee. Enforcement of the hawkers' and peddlers' by-law also affects fuel dealers from neighboring places.

Council considered the possibility that strict enforcement of the law licensing non-resident bread trucks might mean cessation of house-to-house delivery. Town solicitor Ramsay Park suggested that the bread distributors instead of fighting the by-law would establish an office in town and pay regular business tax. Resident merchants paying business tax are not subject to licensing under the peddlers' by-law.

Expressing his views on the enforcement of the by-law Councillor Gerald Weaver, chairman of finance, remarked: "A $100 a year fee amounts to 30 cents a day on the breakdown or a loaf and a half of bread."

Council decided against a house numbering proposal estimated to cost the town $5,000. Mayor Ross Burtt made the observation that the town has obligations enough this year with the installation of new sewers and roads.

Council agreed to release the covenant in the deeds covering two lots at the north end of Dufferin Avenue providing the owner, contractor James F. Day, agreed in writing to level the slope of the bank to the north of the lots and cover it with top soil.

SELL SET OF SCALES

Council figured it was good business to sell a set of scales owned by the municipality to R. E. Baldwin of Consecon for $200. Stipulation with the offer was for the buyer to fill in the pit the scales came out of. Four lots were offered to the Central Bridge Company at $75 each.

Out of talks about increasing the police force came a suggestion by councillor Gerald Weaver that additional traffic lights be placed on Dundas street at three points — Gilmour Hill, Gilbert Hotel intersection and the corners of Dundas street and Division street. While there was no decision made on Mr. Weaver's suggestion council decided to hire one new constable.

Mayor Burtt insisted that a resolution be drafted to the Police Commission requesting that all members of the Trenton force be responsible for checking parking meter violations. Town clerk O. W. Larry was called on to show records that Simcoe, Woodstock, Brockville and Belleville employed all policemen to check meters. Councillor Weaver noted that Chief Constable F. J. Taylor had already said he is not going to detail all of his men to meter duty. Mayor Burtt wondered why the same Police Commission was in accord with Belleville's entire police force checking violations.

FOUND METERS OUT

Councillor Joe Gould expressed belief that the police force was not in favor of operating the meters. He criticized meter servicing, claiming he found 10 out of 20 meters on one downtown street out of order recently. "If any of us ran our business like the meter business is run we'd all go broke," he remarked.

Council by a unanimous vote accepted with regret the resignations of five Parks' Board members. It was resolved that the vacancy on the Board of Health created by the resignation of F. J. Aziz be filled at the meeting March 1.

The sum of $2,500 was approved for the purpose of furnishing the mayor's office and the board room in the newly-renovated municipal offices.

Nursing Director Addresses Y's Menettes

The Y's Menettes club of Belleville held its regular meeting on Tuesday evening in the Y.M.C.A. with the president, Mrs. V. Weir, presiding.

A report was given on the cooking school. Plans were made concerning catering for the carrier boys' party.

There was also a discussion about a novelty table for the "Spring" tea. It was decided to hold a bowling party for the next meeting.

Guest speaker for the evening was Miss Pert, director of Nursing at the Belleville General Hospital, who gave an interesting and enlightening talk.

A pleasant evening closed with refreshments served by the hostesses of the evening, Mrs. G. H. Trill and Mrs. R. Johnson.

Baby Found in Snow

TORONTO (CP) — A new-born girl, wrapped in a towel, was found in a snowdrift behind a rooming house Tuesday. She survived exposure to freezing weather after a policeman hugged her to his chest and dashed through downtown traffic to hospital.

The baby was reported "doing well" Tuesday night.

Police have charged Thelma Dunbar, 18, with failing to provide the necessities of life and unlawfully abandoning or exposing a child under two years old.

Police said the infant was placed in the yard within a few hours of birth.

Clouds Hamper Air Search For Belleville Man

Search aircraft hampered by low-hanging clouds the last four days still have not found the jet trainer believed down in a mountainous area in Garibaldi Park, 90 miles north of Vancouver.

Missing with the jet are Flying Officer Paul K. Bradley, son of Mrs. Fred Bradley, Ann Street, Belleville, and Flying Officer J. L. Nelson, formerly of Ottawa.

Today RCAF crews were standing by ready to resume the search if the low clouds lift during the day.

The two-seater jet trainer which the pilots were flying to Vancouver vanished on Saturday afternoon after wandering far off course.

The aircraft is believed to have gone down in the mountains despite the fact it had two hours' fuel when last heard from.

U.S. 7TH FLEET

Nationalist bombers early today made a strike at Yikiangshan, the off-shore island recently lost to the Communists, as the refugees landing on Formosa told of the havoc wrought by the Communist raids on the Tachens.

"The bombs fell all over the island," one refugee from the Tachens said. "There's no place to get away from them. They were falling even when we left."

A transport today landed 538 civilians, many of them children, at the northern Formosan port of Keelung. They were only a trickle from the 15,000-man garrison and 15,000 civilians sweating out the Red bombings on the exposed Tachen outpost 200 miles north of Formosa.

Nationalist bombers flew through intense anti-aircraft fire in their strike at Yikiangshan, official reports said. The Nationalists said all returned.

Long lines of men, women and children streamed ashore at Keelung, were dusted with DDT powder and trucked to a refugee station. Of the 538, 247 were school children and 214 were dependents of soldiers who remained behind.

The official Formosan provincial newspaper, Hsin Sheng Pao, says 40 children slated for evacuation were killed Sunday when Communist bombers sprayed lower Tachen with fire bombs. The first Red incendiary raid of the Chinese civil war cost 140 casualties, the newspaper adds.

THE ESKIMO—SECOND CLASS CITIZEN

When is an Eskimo not an Eskimo?

The answer—when he works like a white man.

This definition, agreed on by the Northwest Territories Council at its eighth session in Ottawa, was made to distinguish Eskimos eligible to buy liquor.

For 13 years there has been a ban on the sale of liquor to Eskimos in the Northwest Territories. A motion to rescind the ban was turned down by the council.

A modification of the ban, approved by the council, permits the sale of liquor to Eskimos who have given up hunting and trapping to live in white settlements and to work at white man's jobs. These Eskimos, the north's new "men of distinction," must live by means other than hunting or trapping for 18 months before they can apply for a liquor permit. The issuance of the permit will be at the discretion of the commissioner of the Territories. Of the 7,000 Eskimos in the Territories approximately 100 will qualify for liquor permits when the new regulations come into effect in April.

Eskimos, like Indians, are Canadians.

They do not, however, enjoy all the rights and privileges of Canadian citizenship. They are officially designated "wards of the Crown"—an euphemism for "second class citizens" and a system of administration designed to keep them like children forever.

Regulations concerning the sale of liquor to Eskimos is just another manifestation of this corroding form of paternalism.

What preposterous nonsense it is that a Canadian must abandon his traditional way of life—hunting and fishing—and must move into a white man's settlement and work as a white man for 18 months before he can obtain a liquor permit!

A regulation such as this makes liquor a prize for abandoning one's way of life. It equates the purchase and consumption of liquor with the white man's way of life and makes liquor a symbol of full citizenship. It makes ownership of a liquor permit a receipt for 18 months of life and work in a white settlement.

This sort of irresponsible reasoning is the natural outcome of our unnatural approach to liquor and the liquor problem.

If the government must restrict the right of Canadians to buy and consume liquor let it concentrate on that large and tragic group of alcoholics that is the real liquor problem. It is about time it abandoned its little-child attitudes towards Indians and Eskimos.

FEBRUARY —BRIEF BUT BEASTLY

February with rue is laden.

In the north temperate zone, an ill-defined geographical area bounded in summer by heat haze and in winter by snow storms, February comes as the only month with constant conditions weatherwise. February is always bad.

If January is cold, February is colder. If March winds are gusty, February winds are gustier and laden with sleet and snow. February has brief thaws, biting cold, slush, ice, clear skies and leaden skies.

February snows melt to expose the soot and dirt accumulated during the winter before March and April rains can wash it away.

Even the groundhog cannot escape the seasonal distemper known as February. This hapless little rodent, hibernating in some dark, comfortable den, is supposed to rouse from its winter-long siesta to greet the dawn of February 2nd. If it sees its shadow the rest of us are doomed to six more weeks of winter—presumably as punishment for rousing the groundhog in the first place.

February is pivoted on the pointed heart of Valentine's Day in the hope that when all lesser diversions fail, thoughts of love will distract attention from the weather. When one wakes February 15th there is certain sustenance in the thought that the worst is past and no matter what transpires February can last only two more weeks.

It is a sad commentary on the perceptiveness of calendar reformers that not one has suggested a means of doing away with February.

February, of course, is not all bad. Its sole virtue is its brevity.

"FORMOSA IS CALM"

"Formosa is calm as tension rises," reads a headline in the New York Times.

Strange though it may seem, this calm outlook may be justified by the facts.

There is comparatively little danger of Formosa being quickly overrun by the Chinse Communists as long as it is guarded by the U.S. 7th Fleet.

The only way that the 7th Fleet could be eliminated would be by a massive air attack. It is extremely doubtful whether the Chinese are capable of delivering such a blow. The Russians are. But the first wave of the attack would certainly bring instant reprisals by the United States. It would, in fact, almost inevitably touch off the Third World War.

In the Third World War nobody is going to waste atomic bombs on Tapei or Amoy.

In the final analysis, Tapei may prove a safer place than New York or Moscow.

JUST FOLKS

WEATHER-WISE

No prophet I who dares to say
How long the winter's going to be.
But, if upon a certain day
The ground hog should his shadow see
My grandsire, wise in nature's lore,
Said: "You'll wear flannels six weeks more."

"How do you know six weeks remain
Before the winter ups and goes?"
I'd ask. And grandpa would explain:
"I don't, but any ground hog knows.
When back into his hole he's gone
You'd better keep your flannels on."

I read predictions, day by day,
But still I cannot trust them all.
Sometimes when "weather fair," they say,
The skies are gray and rain will fall.
But if the sun the ground hog views,
Don't throw away your overshoes.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

We put some new cedar fence posts along the foot of our city garden, and it is a crime what the grey squirrels have done to them. They have peeled the pretty rustic cedar bark off, leaving some of the posts bald and other partly bald, with a ghastly leprous appearance. The squirrels wanted the bark for nesting material, and were much obliged for it, no doubt.

The grey squirrel is a very pretty gentleman in the woods or the park. But when he decides there are enough good sized trees in a city residential area to justify his moving in, he becomes a nuisance and a problem. After he has used up all suitable nesting sites in the trees, he moves into buildings and presently into houses. There is nothing more fretting than an attic full of squirrels. Fortunately the grey squirrel has not yet conquered all of Canada. In the east, he spreads all across the continent from the Atlantic to the middle line of the States, and up to the level of the top of Lake Superior. On the Pacific coast, the larger western species has got within a hundred miles or so of the B.C., border. But the evidence seems to be that where man goes and makes parks, the grey squirrel will enthusiastically follow. They say he has other bad habits besides balding cedar fence posts and holding revel in attics. The Bell Telephone Comany says that wherever dogs bark at squirrels in gardens, the squirrels, in fury, chew the insulation off the telephone cables on which they delight to travel.

Their choice of cedar bark for nests is a glod one, and we may owe the squirrels a debt of gratitude in the name of our pioneer fathers. I got hold of a winter waistcoat of one of my ancestors. It was quilted nicely. The stuffing was beautifully shredded cedar bark. Indian mothers tell me that soft shredded cedar bark is the most beautiful lining for a baby's back-cradle. And a trapper friend of mine makes his cabin mattress of fluffed-up cedar bark which, he says, with its odor discourages vermin.

Nicknames For Senators

(Minneapolis Tribune)

Senator Dirksen (Rep., Ill.) has joined the select list of congressmen who have earned Capital Hill nicknames. In tribute to the syrupy nature of his oratory, Dirksen now is widely referred to as "wizard" short for "Wizard of Ooze".

Others on the current list are "Five o'Clock Shadow" Morse (Ind., Ore.), who won the title a few years ago by making a speech late every afternoon; "Molly" Malone (Rep., Nev.); Vice-President "Dickie Boy" Nixon; Senatorlelect "Veep" Barkley (Dem., Ky), and "Landslide" Johnson (Dem., Tex.).

Los Angeles Grows!

(By Charles Detoy, president Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, in the Los Angeles Times)

If the entire population of Pittsburgh and Baltimore—1,-[illegible]5,000—were transported westward and settled within the Los Angeles metropolitan area you would have a fair estimate of our population increase between Jan. 1, 1945, and Jan. 1, 1955.

The impact of this migration, averaging nearly 500 new residents a day for 10 years, makes even seasoned statisicians sit up and take notice.

While the city's population climbed from 1,725,000 in 1945 to its present estimated 2,150,000—a 24.6 per cent increase—Los Angeles County became the most populous county in the country, second in the world. The county jumped from 3,345,000 residents 10 years ago to 4,950,000 today, and hasn't stopped yet.

With a 50 per cent rate of increase for the metropolitan area chalked up during the past decade a population larger than that of Albany, capital of New York, has been added to this area each year. Certainly the problems inherent in this number of increased residents stagger the imagination and resources of any community.

• • •

Only five U.S. cities—New York Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia and Los Angeles—exceed the present 1,041,140 population of the San Gabriel Valley.

San Fernando Valley, starting with about 200,000 residents in 1945 now has more than 600,000 inhabitants, more than the population of Minneapolis of Buffalo.

Los Angeles, city, county and metropolitan area, has met the challenge of fantastic growth with a creativity and resourcefulness characteristic of the Southland.

• • •

Los Angeles manufacturing gathered momentum with more than $1,600,000,000 capital investment in new plants and equipment for the 10-year period. As a result, value added by manufacture was doubled in that short time from $2,052,000,000 to $4,623,000,000.

To house the burgeoning population, county builders added $7,900,000,000 worth of construction, including 700,000 new dwelling units—enough to house the entire population of the city of Philadelphia.

Although the mushrooming clusters of neat, trim California-styled homes which appear almost overnight in erstwhile orange groves, bean fields and cabbage patches, have become an occurrence of regularity in the lives of Angelenos, a glance at the comparative population figures of the decade dramatically highlights the story.

West Covina, a community of 1600 in 1945, experienced a 1346 per cent increase during 10 years it took to emerge as a city of 23,300 inhabitants.

• • •

The birth of one community contributed a tremendous population influx. Lakewood, with its present estimated 58,000 inhabitants, more than Lexington, Ky.; Jackson, Miss., or Orlando, Fla., became Los Angeles County's 46th incorporated city in April, 1954. In 1945 Lakewood was virtually uninhabited wasteland.

Encino skyrocketed from 2250 residents in 1945 to its present 16,900—a 651 per cent increase, almost duplicated by the 620 per cent increase recorded for Reseda, where the population grew from 7,550 to more than 54,000 today.

• • •

As night follows day, booming retail sales followed the terrific influx of people to the Southland. With employment in manufacturing rising from less than 400,000 in 1946 to 630,000 today, the expanded payroll made itself evident in annual retail sales dollar volume reports—$2,550,500,000 in 1945, more than $6,000,000,000 estimated for 1954.

If recent population predictions come true, and California has a population of 16,225,000 by 1965—a 3,500,000 increase over the current estimate—the Los Angeles metropolitan area will have nearly 8,000,000 people within its environs.

• • •

Despite the tremendous growth of industry in the area and the loss of farmland to the new crops of homes, Los Angeles County maintained its position as the leading agricultural county of the nation, producing from its fertile soils $2,200,000,000 worth of agricultural products during the fruitful decade.

From under its prolific soil came 915,000,000 barrels of crude oil, more "black gold" than the entire 1952 out-put of the oil-rich Middle East of Venezuela.

Steam Engines Possess 'It'

(The Times Of London)

A wealthy lady of Cambridge, Massachusetts, who heard that the local railway was going to sell a 150-ton steam engine, No. 3674, went along to see it. That is all she meant to do, but at the sight of the massive beauty her heart stood still; she fell in love at first sight and parted with $5,000 as the price of ownership. She gave as an excuse, if excuse for such amiable extravagance were needed, the fact that her purchase had "such a personality." Of course it had; all steam engines have, which is why elderly ad sober men collect their numbers and not even space ships can oust them from the imagination of properly constituted small boys. Canon Roger Lloyd has given it as his opinion that three broad types of adult railway lovers predominate—the clergy; then dons, schoolmasters and artists; and then organists and composers. Canon Lloyd further suggests that there is an "instinctive kinship between organs and railway engines," but these are deep waters and he has no concrete evidence to back his fascinating theory. As Mr. R. C. Robertson-Glasgow wrote, after making the categorical statement that house-painters make the best long stops, (outfielders in cricket) "This cannot be explained."

Learned persons some 30 years ago in their quest of a name for the quality which would best describe the attributes possessed by Miss Clara Bow eventually fell back, with a mingling of helpless surrender and triumphant shrewdness, upon the simple two-letter word. "It"—and the railway equivalent of "It" is precisely what most steam engines have. The disreputable tank-engine, the most outdated little puffer that chugs up and down and back to front along a stretch of branch line destined to extinction shares it with the aristocrats, the cracks, the pride of our lines, the Royal Scot, the Kings, the Duchesses. These certainly have a cachet of their own, but they are not more in demand for autographs, as it were, than the humblest of their brethen. They can give their signatures with a flourish, it is true, while the tank-engine can only manage a number, the equivalent of the poor man's mite of earlier centuries, but both are of equal value in the minds and records of true believers.

The Diesel and the electric engine are, however, shut out of this charmed, magic circle—and jet engines, if and when they invade the railway scene, will, too, find themselves on the outside. It is of no use for them to protest, after the manner of Shylock, that they do all that a steam engne does. If their levers are pulled, do they not start; if their brakes are applied, do they not stop; do they not run on the same lines and share the same platforms? The hard, brutal fact remains that in a competition of charm and personality the steam engine romps home past the distant signal and all the rest are left in the station. The lady from Massachusetts is wise and is to be congratulated on an excellent bargain.

Language Hazard

(Cleveland Press)

The hazards of a common language have been demonstrated again. Some congressional secretaries from Washington, on a co-operative vacation tour of England, were startled to find themselves described in a London newspaper as "homely."

Before all had written letters of protest to their congressmen, however, a thoughtful diplomat explained to the ladies that they had been paid a high compliment.

In England, "homely" doesn't mean ugly or unappealing. To say a woman seems homely is to describe her as the domestic type, as distinguished from the women who demand to be taken to night clubs. She's the sort an Englishman would like to marry.

Upon learning that, the secretaries concluded that the English are indeed a people of great discernment.

She Paid Serial Number

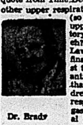
(St. Paul Pioneer Press)

The Berkeley, Calif., traffic court cashier was willing to admit the other day that he had at last seen everything. A woman sent the court an overtime parking ticket with her cheque for $22.56, along with a mildly worded protest against the steep amount she had been charged. The cashier sent her a refund cheque for $21.56 and explained that she had paid the serial number on her parking tag, instead of the customary $1 fine.

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

OH, MY, OH, MY, MIAMI



Dr. Brady

The question of colds and (I quote from Time Dec. 13, '54) and other upper respiratory infections (so "colds" are upper respiratory infections, eh?) brought Dr. Lawson to his final blast against the overuse of anti-biotics. More than 90% of children's fevers and respiratory and gastro-intestinal infections are caused by viruses, he declared, and antibiotics are of no use against viruses. Then the magazine quotes Dr. Lawson's comment, as follows:

"Yet many physicians cannot refrain from scattering antibiotics far and wide because (1) the family expects it, (2) it won't do any harm, (3) it might do some good or (4) you can't tell which infection is viral and which bacterial . . . The pressure to 'do something' is always there, but it is often the truer test of the physician to let nature take its course than to give treatment when treatment is not necessary."

For the sake of the people of Miami in particular and the people of America in general, I hope and pray that the trick specialists of Miami will not have Dr. Robert Barrett Lawson expelled from the faculty of the Medical School of the University of Miami for this honest acknowledgement of one of the evils of the business of medicine. Dr. Lawson was head of the pediatrics department of the medical school when he made the statement before the winter convention of the American Medical Association in Miami last month.

Having been, well, say expelled from many a paper in my hectic career for just such truth telling I can appreciate how much forthright courage it takes for a man in Dr. Lawson's position to commit himself so uncompromisingly. There's only one medical school in Miami, whereas in some cities when I'm kicked out of one paper very likely I'll bob up next week in another.

There's one thing that disturbs me, although I hate to mention it now. I don't know and I have been unable to learn how a doctor can tell whether a respiratory infection is due to germ or virus.

When I hear someone say he or she is coming down with or getting over "this virus that's going around," I think "The poor geek probably knows as much about it as the doctor does." The notion that every respiratory infection short of pneumonia, diphtheria or brain fever is "this virus" is as sensible as the notion that every fleeting ache or pain is "neuritis".

Then there's one other thing that I can't get off my mind: How in the — how can the doctors tell that one or more shots of antibiotic accounts for any improvement that occurs afterward? That is, who knows whether the patient would not have recovered as quickly without the "shots"?

The businessman of medicine comes a-running with his syringe ready to shoot penicillin into the patient because, as Dr. Lawson says, the family expects it. What family? As Brady says, the Knucklehead family.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

"AUTHORITIES"

Do you put great confidence in authorities? If so, forget it. All gods have clay feet. There is not a wise man in the whole history of the human race who did not make certain egregious and incredible mistakes.

Edison was certainly one of the greatest geniuses the race has produced. Yet Edison looked on the photograph as a toy and declared that it could never have any real and lasting value. Certain men in his day insisted that electricity might be used as power for street cars. He told them to forget the idea for it was not feasible. He lived, of course, to see electricity in this and in hundreds of other ways, but in the beginning, he had no faith in such procedure.

We are all at the mercy of specialists. When we fall ill, we have to put ourselves in the hands of physicians, and they probably make the same percentage of mistakes that everybody else does. In legal matters we have to trust lawyers who sometimes stumble and fall over the tiniest legal matters. We read the forecasts of business advisers, who get great sums of money for predictions which usually rate a low batting average.

Specialists are necessary, but let us never get the idea that they are infallible. We have to do our own thinking on every subject God gave us our brains with the expectation that we would use them.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

IDLERS

We think of one who is an idler as one who does nothing and thinks nothing. I have in mind the useful idlers—those who apparently do not seem to be doing anything, but whose minds, and even their bodies, are constantly attuned to something constructive and useful.

During Walt Whitman's life, many who noted him riding the Fifth Avenue buses in New York City, and tramping the fields of Long Island and about Camden, New Jersey, where he once lived, looked upon him as a queer, harmless fellow, not knowing that he was destined to be looked upon as one of America's and the world's greatest poets! No matter where he was he was composing himself into a great poem, later to become immortal as his "Leaves of Grass." I have a book in my library calling Whiteman "The Magnificent Idler."

Other useful people who were looked down upon as idlers were "Johnny Appleseed," who distributed seeds over miles of territory of the Middle West, and left his monument everywhere he went. Then there was Vachel Lindsay, who went about the country reciting and singing his poems, asking only for a meal as he travelled about, and giving in return a pamphlet of his poems. An idler, many would say, but I never could. Everywhere he went he inspired love and admiration, though many misunderstood him. Another idler was John Muir, who travelled by foot to many states and to ininhabited regions, sleeping under the stars, but forever making notes of all that he saw and then later putting it into print for all mankind.

Never look upon a person as an idler merely because he may be sitting up a park bench, alone or listening to someone else who may be devoting much time to idle talk. The significant idler is the one who is forever thinking, no matter where he may be. That fellow Newton, who discovered the valuable law of gravitation, as he idled under a tree, and was hit by an apple, is a striking example of a man who did some thinking as he took a nap!

Govt. and Railway Officials Complete New Freight Rates

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal officials and the railways are completing the initial stage of a new deal in freight rates which goes into effect March 1.

Almost six years since the launching of a monumental overhaul of the complex rate structure, this first part of a long-range plan will see a cross-country levelling of the basic tolls that carry about 15 per cent of Canada's $1,000,000,000-a-year freight traffic.

Up to now, these "class" (ceiling) rates have varied from region to region. The new system will equalize them between the Pacific coast and the Quebec-Maritimes border, with the Atlantic provinces partly excluded under a 1927 statute.

With the ups and downs of the class rates about to be smoothed out, the rate-regulating board of transport commissioners already has turned its attention to equalizing commodity rates, special charges accorded particular types of traffic according to circumstances. The equalization jobs is expected to take about two years.

In the last year the railways have had teams of rate experts on the job day and night preparing tens of thousands of new individual rates which take up about 3,000 pages for each of the two big lines.

While they represent major changes from long-standing rate levels, consumers probably won't detect variations.

One big reason is that the inauguration of the new rates will be accompanied by removal of a temporary equalization measure as between east and west which the board put into effect in 1954.

This transitional step consisted of an order to the railways to reduce rates in the west by five per cent and permission for them to increase Ontario-Quebec rates by 10 per cent. It was aimed at bringing the two sets of rates to about equality pending the March 1 change.

Under this revision, the historic difference in rate levels between the west and central Canada should disappear on class rates, the Ontario-Quebec rates going up moderately and the west's coming down to meet them.

Member Urges Housing Project Be Held Up

OTTAWA (CP)—Recent highway contract irregularities in Ontario tend to undermine public confidence in the judgment and honesty of the Ontario provincial government, a Liberal member of the Commons said Tuesday.

Henry Hosking, Wellington South made the charge in the throne speech debate as he urged that a proposed federal-provincial - municipal housing project for the Guelph area be held in abeyance.

He also said the government should take a second look at its house building activities "before we promote the building of so many houses that they will be a glut on the market."

Mr. Hosking said the proposed housing project for Guelph involved construction of 600 housing units on 165 acres of land, of which only 65 acres are within Guelph's city limits.

He said Works Minister Winters told him the Ontario government has recommended the project under a section of the National Housing Act.

PROJECT UNDERWAY

Guelph already had a project of this type known as Green Acres and only 73 houses had been built on a 273-lot area.

"The people of Ontario will expect us to look carefully into any recommendations by the provincial government after their experience with road scandals," he said. "You know, Mr. Speaker, the provincial government for Ontario has had unfortunate incidents occur which would tend to undermine the public's confidence in the judgment and honesty of their operations."

Mr. Hosking was commenting on recent disclosures of a series of alleged irregularities in Ontario government contracts for highway construction in the Fort William division of the trans-Canada highway.

On housing, he said he has supported government policy but there were some areas where "so many houses have been built that we are close to the saturation point."

There were at least 2,000 vacant lots within Guelph city limits which the city was prepared to service for housing.

The provincial government had recommended that the farm land for the new housing project be purchased at $650 an acre or a total of $107,000.

"I took the trouble to find in the registry office some information about this place," he said. "It has been bought and sold several times and the last sale price reported in the registry office was $17,500 in 1948."

The people of Guelph would not condone this "squandering" of money.

Mr. Hosking also requested construction of a new public building in Guelph. The city had doubled its area two years ago and federal offices now were housed in four separate buildings.

Each Fined $100

ORILLIA (CP) — Four youths charged with obtaining beer while under age were each fined $100 and costs Tuesday. They were Eddie Beers, 17; Allan Buckindale, 17; Gary Allinson, 17; and Cecil Vivian 18;

Police said the four persuaded an older man to buy them a stock of beer. Then accompanied by three girls aged 15 and 16 they went to a farmhouse and held a party until 4 a.m.

William Davis, said to have obtind the beer for the group, was fined $25 and costs for giving beer to minors.

Employee-Owned Paper Opens Fine New Plant

NORTH BAY (CP)—A $200,000 publishing plant for the North Bay Daily Nugget, Canada's only employee-owned newspaper, will be formally opened today.

The two-storey building, housing one of the most modern small city newspaper plants in Ontario, is of a striking design, fronted by picture windows which give full-street views of work on both floors.

Completion of the building is a major step in an expansion program started in 1948 when the employees bought the 49-year-old newspaper from the estate of the late W. E. Mason of Sudbury.

In the seven years of employee-ownership, the newspaper has doubled its staff, increased circulation to 12,500 from 8,100 and repaid the original purchase mortgage of $225,000.

Sees Islands China's Price For Cease-Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator John Sparkman says the United States will have to consider the possibility of yielding some small Nationalist-held islands to Red China if Washington follows through on United Nations efforts to work out a cease-fire in the Formosa area.

The Alabama Democrat, chairman of the Senate foreign relations Far Eastern sub-committee, said in an interview that he has no doubt that if the Chinese Communists accept a UN security council invitation to talk about a truce, "the least of their demands will be that the Chinese Nationalists give up Quemoy, Matsu and the Tachens."

SHOULD TELL WORLD

"The Communists have made it very clear that they will insist on getting these islands," he said.

"If the islands are necessary for the adequate defence of Formosa, then we ought to tell the world that we are going to fight for them. If they are not essential, I don't think we ought to spill American blood over them."

Some of those who attended a conference of Republican congressional leaders with Eisenhower Tuesday said they came away with the impression that any Red Chinese attack on the off-shore islands will be met with immediate American counter-moves.

In another Washington development Tuesday in connection with the Far East the Senate gave overwhelming approval to the South-east Asia defence treaty, in which eight countries are united to combat Communist aggression in that area.

No Work Available

OTTAWA (CP) — National Employment Service is notifying its regional offices to warn job applicants against seeking work on the St. Lawrence seaway at this time.

Persons hoping for seaway jobs are being advised to consult with NES officials before heading for points along the river where navigation-hydro construction is in progress.

Many already have arrived at such seaway area points as Cornwall, only to find that there is no work for them.

JAIL AGGRESSIVE MOTHERS

LONDON (Reuters)—Two young mothers were sent to prison here Tuesday for slugging a storekeeper with a heavy door handle in an attempt to rob his store. Mrs. Phyllis Brett, 24, was jailed for 30 months, and Mrs. Ethel Cooper, 19, for 24 months. Each has two children.

Chance Visit To Fish Hut Saves Angler

ORILLIA (CP) — The chance visit of a friend to a fish hut on Lake Simcoe Tuesday saved the life of Heatherington Curran, 29, overcome by coal gas fumes.

Curran had lighted a coal stove in his hut and fished all morning. When Bert Thomson came to visit he found him unconscious. Thomson loaded Curran on a toboggan and began pulling hi mto shore. Another man ran a half mile to get an ambulance.

Curran had begun to revive when he reached shore and was reported in good condition at the hospital.

Dismisses Charges

OSHAWA (CP)—On the strength of a Supreme Court of Canada ruling, magistrate K. M. Langdon Tuesday dismissed careless-driving charges against W. Percival of Thornhill, John Kouru of Oshawa, and Marvin Nanichivil of Brooklin, Ont.

The Supreme Court held last week that the Ontario Traffic Act charge actually describes two offences and that motorists should be charged with one or the other.

National Council of Women Prepares Advice to Govt.

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Council of Women will offer the government advice next week on subjects ranging from succession duties to the franking privilege of parliamentarians.

Council headquarters here announced today a five-woman delegation will call on Acting Prime Minister Howe next Tuesday to present resolutions passed at the council's annual meeting last June in Fredericton.

The council, representing 650,000 women, will urge that the free postage privileges of members of Parliament and senators "be used only when they are in the public interest."

It was making the recommendation in view of "unnecessary waste of the money, materials, labor and time of the people of Canada."

ASK BREAK FOR WIDOWS

The council will also ask the government to alter the Succession Duty Act so that half a husband's estate passing to his widow be exempt from death duties.

The resolution asks, too, that an exemption of $50,000 be allowed from all estates before calculation of duties. At present if the estate exceeds $50,000, the entire amount is taxable.

Another suggestion is that adopted children be regarded as natural children for succession duty purposes and not charged duties at the rate set for non-members of the family.

A federal law assuring women equal pay for equal work also will be sought.

Other recommendations include:

1. Appointment of women to immigrant selection boards in Europe and exercise of the "greatest care" in selection of immigrants.

2. Donation of part of Canada's wheat surplus to under-privileged countries as a gesture against communism.

3. Establishment of uniform size standards for children's clothing.

The delegation will consist of Mrs. Allan Turner Bone of Montreal, council president; Mrs. Milton F. Gregg of Ottawa, vice-president; Mrs. W. A. Graham of Smiths Falls, Ont.; Mrs. H. S. Morton of Montreal, and Mrs. L. H. Meng of Ottawa.

JUDGE WEAVING

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—The third annual exhibition of Canadian hand weaving will officially get under way this Friday with nearly 300 entries from across Canada. Judging begins Feb. 7 and the exhibition winds up March 6.

WELLINGTON

W.I. Holds Euchre Party

WELLINGTON — Despite the bad weather and snow filled roads and a hockey match at the arena, a nice crowd attended the euchre party in the town hall on Wednesday evening, sponsored by the Wellington Women's Institute.

Eleven tables were in play. When the games were finished the ladies in charge served delicious refreshments.

Prizes were given out to ladies, Mrs. Eckert Pearsall, Mrs. Carl Bryant, and Mrs. Gay. Men's high went to F. Morton, S. Down, and low to Norman Foster.

Mrs. A. Ogilvy held the lucky number for the door prize which was a nice basket of groceries. Three more numbers were called with prizes going to Mrs. Norman Foster, Mrs. Fred Morton, and Miss Pyne.

The euchre prizes were donated by some of the Picton Merchants, and two of the W.I. members for which the W.I. wishes to say thank you very much.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

WEDDING GUESTS WILL SURELY UNDERSTAND

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

For the past few months my father has been quite ill, and his illness has affected his walking. He is now better, can attend my wedding with my mother, but he feels that he just wouldn't be able to walk up the aisle with me. My only brother and I are particularly close, and Mother and I thought it would be all right for him to take Father's place and give me in marriage. But now we are upset because several of our relatives think this would put Father in the wrong light and so I should walk up the aisle alone, and have my mother give me in marriage. What is your advice about this situation? —Florence H.

My advice is that you have your brother escort you up the aisle, and then have your father give you in marriage, by either standing (or if necessary, sitting) in the front pew and replying "I do" very distinctly (so that all will hear) to the clergyman's question "Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?" All the guests, I am sure, will understand your making this plan to relieve your father of any walking anxiety and to give him the honor of giving you in marriage.

NO FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT OF MARRIAGE ANNULMENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I've recently been through a most distressing experience: my marriage having to be annulled. Fortunately for me, however, I had the offer of a good position here (quite a distance from my home) with the same company for which I've worked for several years. Now I'd like to send out some kind of announcement that my marriage was annulled, that it was not a divorce. Is this ever sent as a formal announcement, as I would like to do? I suppose I could write notes, but this would necessitate too much explaining. So what to do? —M.D.S.

Sending out formal announcements of an annulment would be entirely out-of-order . . . don't do this, please. My suggestion is that you write brief notes to relatives and friends whom you want to inform about this . . . just write the fact of the annulment, and absolutely no explanation. Since you also have important news about your new position, go on to this information, and this makes an easy transition from the other news.

PROBLEM OF SHOWER GIFTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

The engagement of a very dear friend of mine was announced by her mother and father at a small tea they gave. Then later our group of intimate friends of the engaged girl gave a lovely party to celebrate the engagement, and each one of us contributed to an expensive present for her. I thought this was to be the only party to be given for her, but now I've been told that I am to be invited to two showers for her. Must I give gifts to these also? — Grace

You must take a gift to a shower if you accept the invitation. But you can be very smart and imaginative by choosing a gift inexpensive but useful . . . for example, a useful kitchen gadget, or an item for buffet service, or even just a package of good-looking paper napkins, two sizes or all of one size.

TODAY USUALLY ALL ATTENDANTS DRESSED ALIKE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm going to have two honor attendants, my married sister as matron of honor and my other sister as maid of honor; and four bridesmaids. I am undecided as to whether to have them all dressed alike, or to have the two honor attendants wear dresses of different style and different color from the dresses worn by the bridesmaids. What is your advice? — Alice S.

Today it's customary, considered best taste, to have all the bride's attendants dressed alike, same design of dresses, same color. Far more effective, in my judgment, because the one-design-and-one-color gives the uniform background for the bride's wedding dress, not the "busy" background of varying designs and varying colors.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DOES SHE REALLY LOVE HIM OR NOT?

People differ a lot in the way they show their feelings. Some are just naturally affectionate and demonstrative, and when they love someone, it comes bubbling out in everything they say and do, when they're with that person.

Others are much more reserved, and even though they may love a person just as much, it may be hard for them to show it, which is sometimes difficult for the demonstrative person to understand.

Perhaps the girl who is causing the writer of the following letter so much concern is one of this reserved type.

The letter, signed by "John," says:

"I am a young man of 20, and the girl I have been going steady with for the last year is also 20. We have always got along fine except for one thing, and that is, that the only way she ever gives me any reason to think she likes me as much as I like her is when I ask her. Then she says "Yes."

"Because she never tells me of her own accord, and I have to ask her first, it gives me the idea that she is just stringing me along, and that she doesn't really care as much as I do. I wish she would tell me just how she feels about me so that I would know whether I should keep on going with her or find another girl."

Well, John, if this girl has been willing to "go steady" with you for nearly a year, it would seem to me you should be in no doubt that she cares about you, even though she does not put it into words without being prompted. Certainly no girl would be interested in giving up all her dating time to one young man if she didn't have a very special feeling for him.

If you are really in love with this girl, and want to marry her, why, for goodness sake, don't you propose to her? That would be the quickest way I can think of to find out whether she loves you or not.

If she says "Yes" to the $64 question, but still holds back a little in responding as lovingly to you as you would like, make a big effort to be patient and understanding, while continuing to say loving things and do loving things for her. In time, she will undoubtedly respond as you wish she would.

If she doesn't, however, yet still appears to want to marry you, then you'll just have to decide whether or not you, on your side, love her enough to accept the fact that she is the type of person who finds it almost impossible to express herself emotionally. And you'd better take time enough to be sure how you feel; otherwise you may find yourself a very unhappy husband.

Bringing Up Baby

Hints Collected by Mrs. Dan Gerber (Mother of 5)

Most babies react enthusiastically to the taste of meat, but occasionally a determined little individualist puts up a real "no, no" front at first. If baby balks a bit at the trial run with strained meat, try mixing a spoonful or two with a regular portion of strained fruit. Doesn't sound like a gourmet's dream for grown-ups, but it's usually quite successful with beginners.

• • •

Lip-smacking story. Coos of approval are usually the case when you serve your baby Gerber's Strained Meats. Made of savory, selected juicy cuts, they have the naturally good, true-meat flavors particularly inviting to delicate palates. Of course, they're specially processed for low fat and fiber, so even the tiniest babies can digest them as easily as milk. All 100% meat, with just enough broth to give a smooth, easy-to-swallow texture. Your choice of 6 for continued mealtime zeal—and every one is rich in the complete proteins that aid sturdy growth.

• • •

From another mother: "I keep baby's lotion in a small plastic bottle. When it's time for baby's daily splash, the little bottle goes right into the bath with him. Warms the lotion (or oil) just enough to make it feel extra-pleasant."

• • •

Teether in the house? Here's blessed relief in a box . . . Gerber's Teething Biscuits. Made of wholesome ingredients, they're smooth-surfaced and extra-firm—give baby real biting satisfaction. Outer-box wrapped in aluminum foil to preserve freshness; biscuits individually wrapped in cellophane for easy, sanitary carrying. Gerber-Ogilvie Baby Foods Limited, Niagara Falls, Canada.

A Bit Of Fish

By Mary Moore

Shovelling the snow as an idea is dilly, but when you actually are in the middle of heaving it from the main sidewalk it loses its charm in direct proportion to your loss of pep.

Anyway I was weakening when my sister's car swerved up to the curb, spraying snow back on the sidewalk that I had just cleared, and called "Shall I get a bit o' fish for dinner tonight?" knowing very well that I never say "no" to anything to eat. That was just enough to bring my labors to an abrupt halt.

Next time I saw her was in her kitchen, fish in hand, which I immediately appropriated and prepared thus:

BROILED HALIBUT

Two centre cut slices were thick and weighed a shade over 2 lbs. and cost $1.25 in our bailiwick.

I spread them on both sides sparingly with store French Dressing and put them under a very hot broiler about 4 inches from the heat and left them about 15 minutes. When they were rimmed and flecked with dark gold I took the pan out and turned them over, and gave what was now the topside another going over lightly with French Dressing, and spread it very sparingly with rich orange cream cheese (you know the kind from the round brown carton) and a few sprinklings of lemon juice, salt and paprika, and returned it to that piping hot broiler. It was done to perfection in 1-2 hour.

Words fail me. Those delicious bites of moist snowy white luscious flesh were food for gods not mere mortals like me.

And that's not all.

I seemed to be on a French Dressing binge for I dressed up a lovely ripe avocado this way:

EMEM'S AVOCADO SPECIAL

I've never had it so good.—So until somebody disputes my name for it it stands.

You need a large avocado for this. Before peeling, with a very sharp pointed knife cut into thirds and remove pit. Carefully pare each 1-3 and put each piece on a small plate. You must have at least 1-3 of a large avocado for each person or 1-2 of a smaller size like the Calavo variety.

To fill the 3 or 4 cavities prepare 1 large orange and 1 medium grapefruit by paring with sharp knife right through to the cell section—that is pare away the white membrane as you pare away the yellow skin. Cut out each juicy section leaving only the inner skin partitions like the leaves of a book. (I suck this juicy morsel dry before throwing it out.) Dip the orange and grapefruit sections in French Dressing, drain them a little, and place them wedge edge down, alternately, in the avocado cavity—5 or 6 pieces to each cavity. I drizzled a little extra French Dressing over each filling. We served it as a combination salad and dessert with coffee and crackers and cheese.

I know what you are thinking—that I live to eat. Well?

Beauty

By HELEN JAMIESON

FOR QUEENS OF THE CAMPUS

If there is one thing the college girl hasn't much of, it is spare time. What with classes, study hours, social affairs, telephoning, chatting about this and that, keeping up with the best sellers and new movies, her schedule is crowded. Beauty routines must be crowded into spare moments. But how necessary they are if she is to be the belle of the campus!

To be dainty, she must be a demon bather. Nothing like a rousing scrubbing to give freshness to complexion and spirits. Fragrant bath toiletries are fun to use and will cut down on the perfume overhead.

If her hair is to be at its loveliest, it must have a weekly shampoo and set. A coiffure does not qualify unless the strands glisten. A brushing at bedtime is essential for scalp health.

With time at a minimum, she may not find the opportunity to have professional treatment for fingernails. To do a good job herself, she must have the proper tools and cosmetics—nail file, needlepoint scissors, emery boards, orangewood sticks, cuticle cream, white pencil and polish remover.

At this season of the year, hands need special care. A daily application of soothing lotion should be supplemented by an occasional creamy massage.

Then, there is the matter of exercise. Practically every young woman is interested in some outdoor sport. It doesn't matter what it is so long as it gives the musculature a workout now and then. It is also of cosmetic value. Fresh air brings loveliness to the complexion, sparkle to the eyes.

There are other small tasks for a collegiate to remember, too, such as keeping the border lines of the eyebrows free of strays, using cream on the lashes so they will be lustrous and abundant, having a pedicure now and then.

SEEK JOBS

OAKVILLE (CP) — Job-seekers outside the Ford of Canada assembly plant Monday created a traffic jam. Some came in automobiles, others by hitchhiking, after it was reported jobs were available as a result of the reopening of the plant after the strike.

DESERONTO

Hobby Club Headed By Mrs. R. Jackson

DESERONTO.— The Deseronto Hobby club held its first meeting of the year on Tuesday evening, when the members met for dinner at Jackson's restaurant.

This departure from the usual pot-luck suppers, proved most enjoyable to all, who, while doing full justice to the dinner, recalled with many a laugh, the highlights of the past year's activities, climaxed by their Hobby Fair and their New Year's eve party.

The business meeting of the evening was held at the home of Mrs. J. D. Dawson with the president, Mrs. D. F. Weber, presiding.

The secretary's report and the yearly financial report were presented and approved.

Mrs. Weber expressed her appreciation to the executive officers and all the members for the loyal support given her during her two years as president and regretfully declined a third term in office.

OFFICERS RETURNED

Mrs. T. L. McCullough was appointed chairman for the election of officers. Mrs. R. K. Jackson was unanimously elected as president.

The remaining executive was returned to office. These are, 1st vice-president, Mrs. T. L. McCullough; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Harold Transue; and secretary-treasurer Mrs. Harry Bender.

The members decided to present a cheque for $50 to the Deseronto Lions club and one for $10 to the local association of Girl Guides.

The Hobby club has made many contributions to various community projects and hope to be able to continue to give their support in the future.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Harry Bender and anyone interested in joining the Hobby club is cordially invited to attend.

The program will be in charge of Mrs. D. F. Weber and Mrs. Sid Brown.

Miss May Hunt of Marysville, si visiting Mrs. Gregory Gordon and Gary.

Master Tommie Carter of Kingston, was the week-end guest of his grandmother, Mrs. Charles Beyette.

Miss Mary Rendall and James Beyette spent Sunday in Campbellford the guests of the latter's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott and family.

The following from out-of-town attended the funeral of the late Daniel Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Howell, Mrs. Jack Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Howell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Broadwick and family, all of Toronto; also Sister Jovita of Prescott, and Sister Mary Florence of Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Rendall visited on Sunday with the latter's mother, Mrs. Gagnor, at Fenelon Falls.

WELLINGTON

Wellington C.S. Students Hold Assembly

WELLINGTON—On Friday the students of Wellington Continuation School held the first assembly of the new year, with Ron Snider, president of the Students' Council, presiding. The Assembly opened with the school song followed by the Scripture reading, read by Wanda McIntyre. This was followed by the business part of the meeting. The assembly was introduced to all the students in Grade IX by Sally East, and a telling verse was read about each student. This was followed by a square dance competition, between the grades, an innovation to the program. It was won by a combined force from Grade XII and XIII doing the Virginia Reel with Carley Cleave at the piano. The judges were the teachers.

A quick comedy enacted by Sally East, Wanda Down, and Kathryn Ferguson was enjoyed. A sing song of old favorites was led by Keitha Trumpour with Carley again at the piano.

As has been done in previous years, W.C.S. is again holding a play competition among the grades. Grade XI presented its play for competition, "Brothers in Arms", with Shirley Cunningham, Ken Wright, Bill Pettingill and Ron Snider.

ROWE ADVANCES

When Agriculture Ministen Gardiner interjected to say there is no tariff on farm implements, Mr. Rowe replied there is a 35-per-cent tax on dairy farm equipment. Yet the government was permitting importation of 2,225,000 pounds of New Zealand cheese at a tariff of a half-cent a pound.

The government was charging tariffs ranging from 40 to 90 per cent on consumer articles. Yet it allowed importation of things Canadians were trying to sell.

URGES REVIEW

Robert W. Mitchell (PC—London) produced a pair of white ankle socks as an example of two difficulties he wanted corrected in tariff and importing laws.

Tariffs on imports competitive to Canada's "depressed" textile industry should be reviewed.

Proper marking of imports also should be required. He had bought the cotton socks under the impression they were Canadian-made. Yet they came from the United States. Their markings—"combed cotton" and "nylon"—were misleading. The only nylon was in the reinforced toe and heel.

Two Progressive Conservative members, L. Elston Cardiff (Huron) and James McBain (Elgin) criticized the government for permitting importation of 2,225,000 pounds of New Zealand cheese. Mr. Cardiff said the company importing the cheese stands to make a profit of $11,250,000 from turning it into process cheese.

Sybil Bennett (PC—Halton), referring to the Ford of Canada strike, said the 15-per-cent "luxury tax" on cars should be removed to help the auto industry get back on its feet. She also urged leniency for Ford workers at Oakville, who have fallen behind in payments on Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation loans.

LONG RESEARCH RESULTS IN AMAZING DISCOVERY

If you suffer from rheumatic or arthritic pains try Rhumatisine . . . a sensational new way to help yourself to relief. World-wide research facilities were utilized in extensive and exhaustive tests to find the solution to this problem which causes such wide-spread suffering. RHUMATISINE helps build a barrier against RHEUMATIC and ARTHRITIC PAINS

Rhumatisine is compounded from remedies long known for their anti-rheumatic, pain-killing and anti-fever action. The main active ingredient in Rhumatisine is Salicylimide which works through the blood plasma to help set up a "pain barrier" to help avoid future attacks of rheumatic or arthritic pain. Rhumatisine also contains Phenacitin which acts to help relieve pain quickly. Rhumatisine is thus formulated to help bring relief where other remedies may have failed. Here is two-way action . . . to help relieve present discomfort and to help avoid future rheumatic pain as long as treatment continues.

Beat the Effects of "Rheumatism Weather" Now . . . Chill, blustery days are Rheumatism Weather . . . so start helping yourself to protection now by letting Rhumatisine help build a barrier against pain. See your druggist right away.

Has Rheumatic or Arthritic Pain Limited Your Activity?

Pain in the joints discourages normal activity and as rheumatic and arthritic sufferers know only too well it means too much discomfort to carry on with usual work or hobbies. Rhumatisine may help you to live a full life once more. Rhumatisine also acts effectively to help relieve articular and muscular pains, certain types of sciatica, lumbago pain, intercostal neuralgia, stiffness and wry neck. Rhumatisine comes in convenient tablet form and there is no unpleasant taste. A few tablets taken daily may help you to face a future where rheumatic or arthritic pains may no longer make life miserable.

The Anti-Pain Effects of RHUMATISINE Are Carried to Every Part of the Body!

Since Salicylamide . . . a major active ingredient of Rhumatisine . . . works through blood plasma every part of the body experiences its soothing effects. This ingredient helps promote prolonged relief, while Phenactin acts to ease the immediate suffering. Rheumatic and arthritic pains are fought at the source by this amazing new preparation. WHAT DO YOU THINK?

Pros and cons of the Penticions are cropping up all over the country. Men who are supposed to know hockey share different views on the ability of the "V's" to bring back the world hockey flitch. Listen to these:

"Milt Halliday, who had years of experience in the N.H.L., writes from his home in Ottawa about the Penticton V's:

"Just returned this a.m. from the West Coast. I attended the game on Saturday night between the Penticton V's and the Vernon, B.C., team. Honestly, it was not even a Senior B game. What made me feel so bad was that I was looking at the team that's to represent Canada in the world championship tournament. If the V's played even the weakest Quebec or Ontario senior team, I'd hate to think of the score.

"I'd say they only have two players on the team that could make a good Senior B Eastern team. They have no defence and at least six players are over the hill and the rest of them can't skate. It's a shame to think that Canada, the granddad of hockey, is to be represented by such a poor team.

"I played 16 years and six of them, off and on, in the NHL. As I travelled across Canada, people kept saying what's wrong? Why can't Canada send a good team over there?

"So Dick Irvin comes up with the real thing. Let's get behind his idea and get those NHL boys over there to meet the Russias. And by all means, send Richard."

Joe Gorman, of Montreal, who flew back from the Pacific coast the other day, is one who doesn't share any qualms that Penticton won't afford Canada strong representation in the forthcoming International Hockey Tournament. Joe didn't see Penticton play but he visited the town, watched Canada's representatives practice and talked with players and officials.

"I think they'll give a good account of themselves," said Joe. "They certainly are very serious about it and there is no doubt about them concentrating on the style of hockey they must play over there and Grant Warwick tells me some of the changes made from last year are for the better.

"Naturally they aren't the equals of NHL talent that some people have been talking about as replacements. But I think they would give a good account of themselves against some Quebec League teams. They've had some people scouting the opposition in Europe. They're big enough and seem to be fair enough skaters for this kind of tournament."

CLASS WILL TELL!

The Ontario Intelligencer "Inkspots" and the CJBQ "Tonsils" played a hockey game the other night in the arena. Zwick's Island scouts who were present said later they were not interested. "Father" Devine, who was not offered even a "C" form, rebounded off the south side of his lap after being hit by "Hurricane" Skelly and bounced all the way down ice warbling "If you're going to play sport." That's as far as he got before he was given reverse English and sent skidding on the return journey. He pulled up three feet outside the south door of the police station.

Both sides called time out frequently and on one occasion when twelve tongues were hanging out over perspiring chests, a doctor in the audience forgot where he was and yelled "Say Ah."

"Teeder" Alexander, of the Inkspots, was one of the stars, making quarterback sneaks between the legs of lanky "Tonsils." Missing at one time, Referee Bob McCann pulled the puck out of the net to find the "Teeder" crouched behind it. Bill "The Rocket" Stovin left his fuses at home and his "round the bay" tours of the ice were spectacles in themselves. Phil "Battleship" Flager had too many barnacles on his keel and ran aground several times when the Inkspots barged into his harber.

Myles "Sawchuck" Morton at the other end was sensational, spearing Tonsil pucks like a hungry hobo at a free wiener roast. Primeau, Joe says he is no relation after last night's show, scalped all three Tonsil operations, and will enter the Gall of Fame. The Inkspots "Teeder" Alexander was the hero sneaking in the winning goal in a push shot with his chin on the puck. The Inkspots won 4-3.

QUESTION

Wes Santee, the Kansas Kockerel, who set a world record for the indoor mile, is sounding off again—as are a lot of American track coaches. The Kockerel, who has laid numerous eggs in his attempts to run the outdoor mile in four, strongly intimates he will set the indoor four minute record in the near future. He has worked out a timing theory of 58 for the first quarter, 60 and 61 and "then let my legs carry me in."

Which brings to mind the disdainful remark of one who calls himself the "dean of American track coaches who said: "Santee can break the four-minute mark any time he feels like it. (This was after Jolly Roge Bannister had turned the trick.) And it also brings to mind the quote of one, Uncle Dannul (New York Mirror) Parker who said, "If Santee thinks he can break the four-minute mark, why does he not get out there and do it instead of talking so much about it."

Which brings up another thought: Had Santee broken the four-minute mark instead of Bannister and Landy last year, would the American sports experts have voted Willie Mays the "Athlete of the Year."

The Trenton RCAF-Belleville Juniors will occupy the spotlight at the arena tonight since the Point Anne-Picton game has been called off, according to reports from Ox Point and Memorial Arena.

The Flyboys are a strong, fast-skating squad and the tussle with the Gault Juniors should be a good one. Game starts at eight o'clock.

Fate May Be Known Saturday When Big Four Moguls Meet; Told to Get 'House in Order'

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four Union can't seem to find an official friend to support their signings of American imports from the National Football League for 1955.

Argos have appealed to the Big Four executive, the league's board of governors and NFL commissioner Bert Bell. As yet they have found no sympathy. Some indication of their fate may be revealed when the Big Four reconvenes its annual meeting in Montreal Saturday.

A Big Four board of governors meeting in Toronto Tuesday endorsed the league's proposed no-raiding pact with the NFL.

In Philadelphia, meanwhile, two Argo officials who spoke with Bell to "get advice and information and to give their side of the picture" were told by the NFL commissioner to "get their own house in order and then come back."

Montreal Alouettes, Ottawa Rough Riders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats agreed that no Big Four team would be permitted to sign any player under 1955 contract or option to NFL teams. Argos indicated they would go along with the move if the no-raiding treaty was not retroactive.

Argonauts said at the time they had already signed or were negotiating with eight NFL players and therefore argued the pact would be unfair if it made them give up the players. The other three teams were for a retroactive clause.

Argonauts appealed to the board of governors, which could only make recommendations.

Big Four secretary Wes Brown, who received the governors' decision in Ottawa Tuesday, said the league "is pleased to know that the governors have upheld the action taken at the annual meeting" but added he couldn't predict what action might be taken.

Argonauts were represented at Tuesday's Philadelphia meeting, which Bell termed a "friendly discussion", by president Bill Ross and business manager Harry Sonshine.

Sonshine, returning to Toronto Tuesday night, said he "explained to Mr. Bell our position on all these matters and after he listened he said we hadn't done anything that the other clubs in our league hadn't done before."

Sonshine said he gathered the impression from Bell that a peace pact was unlikely before 1956.

Eddie Arcaro Gets Suspension

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Jockey Eddie Arcaro was suspended Tuesday for 10 days for failure to keep Miz Clementine, Calumet farm filly, on a straight course last Saturday in the $163,000 Santa Anita Maturity.

Apparent victor by a neck over Determine, 1954 Kentucky Derby winner, Miz Clementine was disqualified by the stewards and Determine was declared the winner.

Teepees Slam Canadiens 5-2

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — St. Catharines TePees ran up a 4-1 first-period lead and went ahead to defeat Montreal Canadiens 5-2 in a Laurier Trophy game here Tuesday night.

The win clipped two points from Toronto Marlboros' lead in the Ontario section and if TeePees beat Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks in the final game of the series Friday they will be tied with Marlboros for the Ontario lead.

Irish Break Big Slump; Trim Bilts 3-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto St. Michael's Majors appear to have broken out of their worst slump of the season.

Majors, who once led the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League by a comfortable margin and then fell into a long winless streak, have won two of their last three games. The other one was a tie.

The Toronto club defeated the league-leading Guelph Biltmores Tuesday night 3-2 before 2,400 Guelph fans.

St. Michael's goaltender Gerry McNamara kicked out 40 shots. Majors got only 24 shots at netminder Glen Ramsay.

The line of Dick Duff, Pat Hannigan and Mike Elik provided the St. Michael's goals. Each tallied once. Bill McCreary and Bill Graham scored for Guelph.

In another league game, Galt Black Hawks racked up their first victory over Hamilton in two years by defeating the Tiger-Cubs 4-3 at Galt.

Gus Ronson, Floyd Smith, Dick Cherry and Jim Marshal tallied for Galt while Brian Kilrea, Bob Robinson and Bill Pirie scored for Hamilton.

On tonight's schedule Marlboros face off at Barrie and Galt meets Kitchener on Canuck ice.

Leafs Annex More Penalties Than Any Club in League; 'Much Too Many' Says Clancy

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs didn't build their reputation with namby-pamby hockey players; it is only natural that they accept many penalties as an occupational hazard.

This season, for instance, Leafs have been given more penalties than any other club in the National Hockey League. But they have been the stingiest on giving up goals — allowing only 95 in 51 games.

All of which fails to make King Clancy a happy coach. Although Leafs are in third place, Clancy says:

"We're still getting too many penalties. Mind you, we're not getting many of the stupid type, but we're getting too many."

Thus far in the 1954-55 campaign, Toronto has picked up 710 minutes in penalties. That's 63 minutes more than the league - leading Montreal Canadiens and 95 higher than the second-spot Detroit Red Wings. The Wings have allowed 98 goals; Canadiens 111.

Clancy said the Leafs are fortunate to have good penalty-killing combinations, particularly Rudy Migay and Ron Stewart, and the goaltending of Harry Lumley to watch things during penalties.

"All teams are getting more penalties since the referees cracked down," he said. "But that's no excuse for getting the silly ones."

Leafs meet Canadiens at Montreal Thursday. In the only game tonight, the fourth-place Boston Bruins take on the last-place Black Hawks at Chicago.

Lyons, Schalk Will Work In Opener

CHICAGO (AP)—The feared Chicago White Sox battery of yesteryear — pitcher Ted Lyons and catcher Ray Schalk—will be back in action again at the start of the 1955 baseball season.

The two former stars, named recently to the Hall of Fame, have been listed by the Sox as their battery in the opening season game April 14 against Kansas City Athletics in Comiskey Park.

Of course, after one pitch—comparable to throwing out the first ball—Lyons and Schalk will retire to the stands.

Aces, Chicoutimi Win in Quebec

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec Aces moved into second place in the Quebec Hockey League and Chicoutimi Sagueneens broke a fourth-place deadlock as a result of games played Tuesday.

The Aces downed Montreal 3-1 to break their tie with the Royals and Chicoutimi tripped Shawinigan Falls Cataracts 5-4 to move two points ahead of the idle, last-place Valleyfield Braves.

Shawinigan Falls leads the five-team loop with 53 points. Quebec has 48 and the Royals 46. Chicoutimi and Valleyfield trail with 37 and 35 points respectively.

Eskimos Mad, Plan Action Against Stamps

EDMONTON (CP)—The Edmonprovincial Football Union said Tues provincial Football Union said Tuesday they plan to take action against Calgary Stampeders for signing Bernie Faloney who quarterbacked Edmonton to Grey Cup victory last fall.

Eskimos accused the Calgary club of "tampering" under article 19 of the Canadian Rugby Union constitution and executive secretary manager Al Anderson has written the CRU to take action against the Calgary club. Under the constitution the fine for "tampering" is not to exceed $1,000.

Faloney announced his retirement from active competition shortly after last season ended. He was hired by Calgary only as a coach.

Joe Legault Rolls a 435

Joe Legault who is as much at home with a brassie or niblick as an alley bowl, established something of a record for Tom Pappas' Recreation Alleys last night. Joe hit the maples for a score of 435, said to be the highest aggregate racked up this year in the Recreation.

Joe "spared" the first frame, then putted perfectly for eleven strikes, while bowling for Seiberling Tires in a league match.

Russia, USA Given Four World Records

LONDON (AP)—Miler Wes Santee, shot putter Parry O'Brien and two relay teams gave the United States four new world-record holders in track and field Tuesday in the list of recognized marks issued by the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

Only Russia, also with four representaives, matched the American achievement while single top performances went to athletes from Denmark, Germany, Norway and Hungary.

O'Brien, Southern California muscle man, shattered the world shot-put mark three times at Los Angeles last year.

Russian runner Vladimir Kuc had three three-mile records accepted.

He also is recognized as the world 5,000-metre record holder.

Chris Chataway of Britain was listed for his 13:51.6 in the 5,000.

Santee was listed for his record 1,500 metres in 3:42.8 while running a 4:00.6 mile.

Santee's rival on the present U.S. indoor circuit, Gunnar Nielsen of Denmark, received recognition fo his 1:48.6 mark in the 880-yard run set at Copenhagen Sept. 30 and tieing the record set by America's Mal Whitfield.

Other U.S. record breakers were the University of Texas' 440-yard relay team, which registered 40.5 seconds and Fordham's two-mile relay team which did 7:27.3.

Other records accepted:

Hammer — Mikhail Krivonosov, Russia, 207 feet 9¾ inches.

100 metres—Hans Futterer, Germany, 10.2 seconds (equals record held by five others).

1,000 metres—Audun Boysen, Norway, 2:19.5.

440-yard hurdles—Yuriy Lituyev, Russia, 51.3 seconds.

6,000 metre relay — Hungary's Budapesti Honved Sport Egyesulet, 15:21.2.

All Dodgers 'On the Line'

BROOKLYN (AP) —Brooklyn Dodgers announced Tuesday that all their regular players and starting pitchers have been brought under contract with the singing of pitter Russ Meyer.

Terms of Meyer's contract were not revealed. The righthander won 11 games and lost six for the Dodgers last year and has a 26-11 mark since he came to Brooklyn in a deal with Philadelphia Phillies two years ago.

The Dodgers said only 10 players now are unsigned, mostly youngsters now playing winter ball in the Caribbean.

England Retains Mythical 'Ashes' Defeats Australia in Cricket Test

ADELAIDE, Australia (Reuters) England beat Australia by five wickets today to clinch victory in the most exciting international Test series cricket has seen for many years.

Today's win gave England three games to Australia's one in the five-game series.

The victory, acted out in scenes of tight drama as Australia struggled to avoid downfall, means England retains for the second straight year what is probably the world's strangest sports trophy—the mythical Ashes. A waggish sports writer started it back in 1882 when he said "the ashes" should be scattered in Australia after the "death" of English cricket at the hands of an Australian team visiting England that year.

At the last encounter, in England in late 1953, the English team beat Australia 1-0 with four drawn games.

England was set to get 94 for victory today on a wearing pitch after dismissing Australia in their second innings for 111, and scored 97 for the loss of five wickets, Godfrey Evans making the winning hit with a four.

The Australians had scored 323 in their first innings, England replying with 341.

Fast-bowlers Frank Tyson and Brian Statham were again England's match winners. They bowled magnificently today, each taking three wickets to wreck Australia's second innings. Six wickets crashed for 32 runs before lunch. The innings was ended by Johnny Wardle soon after the interval and England began its bid for victory.

Comeback Trail Looks Awful Tough Gavilan to Try It; Robinson Ponders

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK (AP)—What a difference one fight makes! Ask Kid Gavilan and Sugar Ray Robinson. Their last ones cost them at least $50,000 apiece.

Gavilan's miserable showing in losing his title to Johnny Saxton and Robinson's sad performance against Ralph (Tiger) Jones ruined a third meeting of the two for Miami late this month. It was going to be a big outdoor promotion with a coast-to-coast telecast.

Now that's out and the big money too. It's going to be a long road back—if they make it—for two of the brightest names in boxing of the last decade.

Gavilan starts his comeback Friday night in Madison Square Garden against Ernie (The Rock) Durando, a hard-hitting but easy to hit opponent. Robinson is pondering whether to try again or call it quits for good. On losing to Jones he never resembled the Sugar Ray of old, even on a fleeting moment.

When you discuss the drab Saxton fight with him all that Gavilan recalls is that he was "robbed."

"I not washed up," said Gavilan at his Summit, N.J., training camp. "I show plenty people Friday, you see. I got new manager and I happy now."

Bulldogs Snap Maroons 6-4; Race Tightens

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The race for second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league got tighter Tuesday night when Windsor Bulldogs defeated Chatham Maroons 6-4 at Windsor.

Bulldogs closed to within one point of the second-place Owen Sound Mercurys, who dropped their game 5-1 to the top Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen at Owen Sound.

Dutchmen hold the lead with 54 points, four more than the Mercs. Stratford, who lost 5-3 to the bottom Niagara Falls Cataracts at Niagara Falls Tuesday night, remain in fourth spot with 44 points. Chatham has 31 and the Cataracts, 26.

Paul Oliver scored three for Chatham and Cliff McArthur counted the fourth. George Gee paced Bulldogs with two goals. Earl Keyes, Frank Bathgate, Jim Peters and Jack Armstrong added singles.

Dutchmen built a 2-1 first-period lead and then scored three late in the third. It was the second loss for Mercurys in 21 home games this season.

Don Bauer paced Kitchener with two goals. Ken Laufman, Charlie Brooker and Jim Logan counted the others. Ted Reid scored Owen Sound's only goal.

The Cataracts' victory was the third in the last four games.

Danny Nixon scored twice for the winners and Lorne Pirie, Harvey Jacklin and Jim Robertson added the others. Herve Dejordy, Mickey Roth and Art Hurst scored for Indians.

Denies Story Ted Williams Will Be Back

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Fred Corcoran business manager for Ted Williams, denied Tuesday telling anyone that the star Boston Red Sox outfielder would return to baseball next season.

The Boston Post had said Corcoran "after a long conference with the slugger at a hotel on Miami beach, announced to friends that Ted will be in action when the Sox arrive at Sarasota for spring training."

"I just got here last night," Corcoran said. "I haven't talked with Ted, the Boston Post or anybody else."

BOARDMAN DEFEATS KELLY

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Larry Boardman, 136½, Marlborough, Conn., scored a unanimous decision over Bryan Kelly, 139, Niagara Falls, Ont., at Miami Beach Auditorium Tuesday night before 2,624 spectators.

The 19-year-old Boardman received 100 points from the three scoring officials after he had knocked down Kelly in the first and third rounds and had him in trouble throughout the fight.

"After 10 years I'M FREE FROM IRREGULARITY"

Writes Mr. H. W. Farmer of Windsor, Ontario.

"After suffering for over 10 years I'm free from irregularity, thanks to Kellogg's All-Bran. I tried everything—costly foods and laxatives—only your inexpensive cereal did the trick."

Since 1916 folks like Mr. Farmer have been writing us letters like this about All-Bran. It is the most widely accepted and used of all bran cereals. Here's why:

Relief from Constipation

The greatest advantage of All-Bran is that it corrects the cause of irregularity due to insufficient bulk. Chemical or drug-type laxatives, on the other hand, are intended only for overnight relief of a temporary stoppage. All-Bran is made from the outer layers of the whole wheat kernel and supplies natural food bulk. Just eat daily a one-ounce serving for breakfast and drink plenty of water. It will improve your "Intestinal Tone" so necessary to comfortable regularity.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

All-Bran is a wholesome, good-tasting cereal that has helped millions. We'll prove to you that Kellogg's All-Bran will give gentle, effective relief from constipation within 10 days or return twice what you paid. But be sure you get Kellogg's, the one and only All-Bran. Kellogg's, London, Ontario.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Friction between bridge partners is mostly from wrong advices on the hands they usually get. This makes it important to know what to do with a common variety of hands that are most often abused.

Your partner in south opened with a bid of one heart and his west opponent passed. Decide your first reply with this north hand:

♠Q 10 8 6 3
♥6 3
♦10 7 4 2
♣J 6

You should pass. You lack what it takes for an immediate first responding bid to an opening of one. If you bid anything at all you will give your partner false confidence in your pair holdings.

Keep remembering that a pack contains 12 aces and kings and queens. A player may open the bidding with only four of them. If his partner has only one, opponents may have seven.

Therefore when you respond to an opening one bid, have not less than two of the big cards. In this way your pair is assured of at least as many high cards as opponents could hold.

Your north hand may produce three tricks in combination with what your partner has shown. Which is one trick more than he had assumed. But you lack the high card foundation he will expect.

You may like to keep the bidding alive for partner. Good idea. But it is not worth the danger. Nor the uncertainty it creates in future. Whereas, the warning may save so many big losses.

If next opponent bids, as he usually will after your pass, your partner gets the bidding chance you wanted to give him. If partner does not then bid, look at the shape you are in.

You can now back in with your spade bid. You do so after your pass has warned him that you lack something. It does not excite him into going any higher. All of which is good partnership stuff.

With a hand like yours there is little hope of going very far. Give your partner a break and tell him so.

Plays Tipsy Roles During Week But Mounts Pulpit on Sunday

By BO BTHOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—During the week, Donald Curtis portrays a tipsy lothario in "All That Heaven Allows." On Sunday, he mounts the pulpit of his Santa Barbara, Calif., church and preaches the gospel.

This is the double life of Donald Curtis. You've seen him in many pictures, often as a heel or heavy. Currently he's in "Phffft" as the actor who lures Judy Holliday to his apartment.

But his congregation of 500 knows him as Dr. Donald Curtis, pastor of the Church of Religious Science.

I talked with Curtis at U-I, where he is playing a country club wolf who forces his attentions on Jane Wyman. I asked how he, as a clergyman, could reconcile himself to such roles.

"Somebody asked me that on the set," he remarked. "Someone who was listening came up with the answer. He suggested that you could preach goodness by showing the bad example just as well as you can the other way.

"No, I'm not too concerned about being typed as a wolf or a heavy. My congregation doesn't seem concerned; they were quite amused by 'Phffft.' But my wife worries about it. She said she is going to apply some positive thinking."

Curtis is a big man, tall, broad-shouldered with a handsome face and trim moustache. I asked him how he managed to develop his two-fold career. Born in Spokane, Wash., he became a professor of speech at Northwestern and other universities, then took up acting full time. He landed a term contract at MGM, where he lasted six years. Then he became a free lancer.

WAR CHANGED LIFE

"Like many young actors, I led a pretty gay life," he said. "I guess the change came in 1941. Pearl Harbor happened on a Sunday, and the following week I was on location for a Universal western. On the set we stood around a radio and listened to the reports coming in from the Pacific.

"It made me stop and think. Here I was playing cowboys and Indians while history - making events were happening in the world. I decided I should try to do something more important with my life."

Curtis moved on to New York, playing in shows like "Goodbye, My Fancy" and on radio and TV. For four years he also took religious studies and graduated as a full-fledged minister. After his graduation, he took over a Philadelphia church, commuting daily to New York where he starred in a soap opera.

Then he had the opportunity to assume leadership of a church in Santa Barbara. He moved his family westward.

Recheck of Home Turns Up New Murder Clues

By JOHN BAUSMAN

NEW YORK (AP)—Police officials say new information has been turned up in the Serge Rubinstein murder case, New York's biggest murder mystery in years, but they are keeping the facts to themselves.

A four-hour inspection at the home of the slain millionaire playboy and draft dodger was made Tuesday by the two men in charge of the investigation, assistant district attorney Alexander Herman and deputy chief inspector Edward T. Feeley.

After leaving the luxurious house on Fifth avenue, they were asked if anything new had been learned.

"Yes," answered Herman. He declined to elaborate.

Herman said he and Feeley had inspected once again the third-floor bedroom where the 46-year-old Rubinstein was found gagged, bound and strangled last Thursday.

QUESTIONS MOTHER

However, Herman added, most of the time was spent questioning Rubinstein's elderly mother and aunt and the household servants—a butler, who discovered the body; a cook, parlor maid, the personal maid of Rubinstein's mother, and a secretary.

As a result of information gleaned, Herman said, "new and more witnesses are being sought." He said detectives have been sent out of the city, but declined to say where.

Herman said the day's questioning had discounted earlier reports about a mysterious "woman in brown" roaming about the house on the morning of the murder.

Both Rubinstein's mother, Mrs. Stella Rubinstein, 78, and her sister, Mrs. Genia Foresta, 82, had reported seeing such a woman.

Mrs. Rubinstein had said she saw the "woman in brown" on the stairway. Herman said this now appears to have been an ambulance attendant wearing a brown coat over his white uniform.

U. K. DOGS BETTER-CLASS

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's dog population now is 3,250,000—one for about every 15 persons—an official of the British Kennel Club said today. The number of dogs was the same as before the Second World War but included only half as many mongrels.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at his watch to see if it was time for him to go bowling, on account of this being Wensday, and ma said, I've got 2 letters to write this evening, William, and I'm not going to put them off another day. As P. Willis Hinkle said in his collum today, peeple would be much less lazy if they would only get into the habit of getting started, she said.

That's a thought for the week, pop said, and ma said, It's true just the same. I've always noticed that when I finally start something, I invarible finish it, even if it's a really dull book that I'm not even intristed in, she said.

Yee gods, that's what I call bending over backwards to spite your spine, pop said, and ma said, I'll prove it to you, William; I'll sit down at my desk this very moment, and my pen will start to fly, and that will be the beginning and the end.

I'll be glad to fill your fountain pen for you, pop said, and ma said, As P. Willis Hinkle says, it's simply a matter of getting up steem, and then you sail along on your own momentum.

I'll even put 2 stamps on 2 envelopes for you, pop said, and ma said, William, that gives me an idea, considering you're so willing to co-operate. The letters are your responsability as much as mine. One is to my sister Fanny thanking her for her good wishes on our anniverserry and the other is a bread and butter letter to Mrs. Carder telling her how much we enjoyed her dinner party. Really, William, I meen it, you can dash off a nice letter in half the time it takes me, she said.

I'm dashing off bodily, thanks, pop said.

Which he got his hat and did, and ma read P. Willis Hinkle's collum again and then she sighed a big sigh to herself and wrote her letters.

First Bank Amalgamation In Nearly 50 Yrs. Completed

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's first banking amalgamation in almost 50 years has been completed.

Two of the country's oldest financial institutions, the century-old Bank of Toronto and the 86-year-old Dominion Bank, were formally united Tuesday as the Toronto-Dominion.

The final step in amalgamation proceedings begun last fall was taken when Governor - General Massey signed an order-in-council shortly after cabinet approved it.

The move, historic in that it was only the third amalgamation in Canadian banking, got under way last Nov. 1 when Finance Minister Harris approved an amalgamation agreement going before the shareholders. The shareholders gave overwhelming approval.

The union trims the number of chartered banks to 10 from 11. The Toronto-Dominion, which will rank about fourth in size, opens its doors with combined assets of $1,132,000,000, some 450 branches and $45,000,000 in shareholders' equity.

The new bank plans to expand on the west and later in the Maritimes, opening additional branches. In Ontario, however, where most branch activities of Toronto and Dominion were concentrated, some branches may close, most likely where two now will be serving one area.

Authorized capital of the new bank will be $30,000,000 and issued capital $15,000,000. Dominion shareholders will get 700,000 of the 1,500,000,000 shares, Toronto shareholders 800,000. Par value of the shares is $10.

Dominion shareholders will receive one new share for each share held; Toronto shareholders four for each three.

Bank of Toronto president B. S. Vanstone becomes board chairman of Toronto-Dominion. Robert Rae, Dominion president, is vice-chairman.

Edward Johnson Proposed For Council Head

OTTAWA (CP)—A Liberal member of the Commons Tuesday suggested appointment of Opposition Leader George Drew's father-in-law as head of the proposed Canada council.

Henry Hosking, Wellington South, recommended that the job go to Edward Johnson, former general manager of the Metropolitan Opera Company. He said Mr. Johnson, a well-known tenor for many years, has an outstanding cultural and executive background.

Establishment of a Canada council to promote the country's cultural development was recommended by the royal commission on arts, letters and sciences. Prime Minister St. Laurent said last December the government was giving favorable consideration to the proposal.

Mr. Hosking, speaking in the throne speech debate, said Mr. Johnson has brought great honor to Canada in the cultural field. He was sure that Mr. Johnson would be willing to occupy any position which would benefit Canada's cultural growth.

SEES GOOD MARKET

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — N. Shields, executive-secretary of the Canadian Mink Breeders Association, predicted Tuesday the United States will buy $50,000,000 worth of mink from Canada this year. He said excellent markets have also been developed in Europe.

GETS PRIORITY

BRANTFORD (CP) — Department of highways officials said Tuesday priority will be given to replacing a near-collapsing bridge over railway tracks at Cainsville, seven miles east of here. Tenders will be called soon for a new $300,000 one-arched, cement structure.

Suggests Placing Lamb Imports In Cold Storage

OTTAWA (CP—A proposal that Canada's imports of New Zealand lamb be placed in cold storage until mid-April or May was made Monday in the Commons.

Hon. Earl Rowe, acting Opposition leader, asked Agriculture Minister Gardiner whether he is aware that New Zealand lamb is being shipped to Canada in considerable quantities.

Mr. Gardiner said there have been shipments for some considerable time but his department has received no complaints.

Mr. Rowe then asked whether the minister has received suggestions "that the importations be held in storage until say the middle of April or May so that they may not disrupt the market as much as many livestock men presume they will."

Mr. Gardiner replied that he will look into the question.

Latest bureau of statistics figures show that lamb imports from Commonwealth countries, excluding the United Kingdom, had a value of $1,348,000 during the first half of 1954. This was an increase of 178.5 per cent over the similar period in the previous year when imports were valued at $484,000.

U. K. WORKERS DO BETTER

LONDON (Reuters) — Over the last two years the rate of increase of Britain's productivity has been greater than that of the United States, Sir Ewart Smith, chairman of the British Productivity Council, claims. Writing in the council's current bulletin he says that in 1953 and 1954 Britain's rate rose by about 4.3 per cent each year but the U. S. showed little change.

LONELIEST CONVICT DEAD

CRANSTON, R. I. (AP)—Biennia Crovagreer, 75, who served 43 years as a convicted murderer without a single visitor or letter from outside world, died Tuesday. He spent the last 28 years in bed, hopelessly paralyzed. A Polish immigrant, he was sentenced to life imprisonment on Feb. 12, 1912, for shooting a man after a violent argument.

Oust Nationalists Is Chou's Price For Talks At UN

Declines Council Invitation While Chiang Holds Seat

LONDON (AP)—Premier Chou En-lai said today Communist China would attend a United Nations debate on the Formosa situation only if Nationalist China was ousted from the Security Council in her favor.

Chou rejected the UN invitation sent Jan. 31 asking his country to send a delegation to debate a New Zealand resolution calling for a cease-fire in the Formosa area.

A Peiping radio broadcast quoted Chou as saying:

("The government of the People's Republic of China holds that only for the purpose of discussing the resolution of the Soviet Union and only when the representatives of Chiang Kai-shek's clique has been driven out from the Security Council and the representative of the People's Republic of China attends in the name of China can the People's Republic of China agree to send a representative to take part in the discussions of the Security Council."

The Russian resolution before the council accuses the United States of aggression in Formosa strait.

Far East Crisis At a Glance

Commonwealth Leaders Warned About Inflation

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Commonwealth prime ministers turned today from international affairs to a review of economic and trade matters as their conference swung into its fourth day.

Prime Minister St. Laurent briefly reviewed Canada's position. The chief speakers were R. A. Butler, chancellor of the exchequer, and Peter Thorneycroft, president of the board of trade.

It was understood that Butler spoke warningly of a recent trend toward gentle inflation in some Commonwealth countries, and emphasized the need for sterling-area countries to keep a close eye on imports.

At Wednesday's session on atomic energy developments, Prime Minister Churchill dominated proceedings with another discourse—his third at the conference—on the implications of the hydrogen bomb on world strategy. A conference source described the 50-minute speech as a "wonderful blend of realism and imagination."

DISCUSS CHALK RIVER

The Canadian leader made a brief contribution, discussing the Canadian atomic plant at Chalk River, Ont. He also stressed the importance of doing everything possible to bring about a climate of world feeling favorable to disarmament talks.

Another important development was an impressive review by the Marquess of Salisbury of Britain's progress in the industrial use of atomic energy. Lord Salisbury, as lord president of the council, is in charge of peacetime atomic developments.

Meanwhile the Colombo powers, three of whom—India, Pakistan and Ceylon—are represented at the Commonwealth meeting, are being seen as possible intermediaries in Formosa if the United Nations security council fails in its peace moves.

AXE FINISHES BEAR

ORILLIA (CP) — The Speiren family went fox hunting Tuesday—and caught a bear. Their dog routed the 140-pound animal from beneath a fallen tree eight miles east of here and the Speirens shot it and finished it off with an axe.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) —Synopsis: Clear and extremely cold weather will continue in eastern Canada today but the centre of the frigid air will pass southeastward across Ontario Friday, moderating temperatures a little by Friday afternoon. Early this Thursday morning Armstrong was the coldest spot in Ontario with a temperature of 32 below. In Toronto, the temperature fell to 8 below zero—a record since February 1950, when the temperature fell to 12 below and three degrees colder than last winter's lowest temperatures of six below recorded on February 12.

Russia Boosts Defence Budget By 12 Per Cent

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government announced today a 1955 defence budget about 12 per cent higher than last year's.

The budget, presented to the Supreme Soviet (parliament), called for defence expenditures of 112,100,000,000 rubles. The increase was about 12,000,000,000 rubles.

The ruble is quoted officially at four to the dollar, meaning an increase in defence expenditures of about $3,000,000,000.

Hunt for Plane At Bowmanville Proves Fruitless

BOWMANVILLE (CP) — Police searched the countryside for two hours Wednesday night after a large plane was reported to have crashed. They found nothing.

Police in this town 20 miles east of Oshawa started the search after a member of the ground observer corps at nearby Oorono said a big plane, apparently a North Star, seemed to be in trouble and was flying low.

Trans-Canada Air Lines answered the reports by saying all its aircraft were accounted for. The RCAF at Trenton said none of its planes was missing.

HOUSE DEFEATS CCF MOTION OF NON-CONFIDENCE

Another Motion Advanced by S.C.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons has rejected a CCF motion of non-confidence in the government embodying a demand for economic planning to meet the country's problems.

It now faces a Social Credit non-confidence motion involving that party's theories of economic changes.

Only CCF members voted for their motion, defeated by a vote of 204 to 23 Wednesday. It said the government has "deliberately returned to the policy of uncontrolled and unplanned private enterprise" which caused the pre-war depression and unemployment. It charged the government with not undertaking "the economic planning necessary to cope with the serious problems now facing the Canadian people."

The Social Credit motion was put forward by George Hahn, New Westminster, immediately after the defeat of the CCF motion.

SOUND BASIS

It said the government has "failed to take or to recommend the necessary fundamental economic and financial measures to place Canadian producers and workers on a sound and prosperous basis, and to ensure our economy against recurring depressions."

The Social Credit motion is expected to extend the duration of the throne speech debate, which now has lasted 13 days.

Social Credit theories of "fundamental economic and financial measures" involve altering the supply of money to match the supply of goods and services in the country.

Two Progressive Conservative members in Wednesday's debate spoke on the dangers of bureaucracy and questioned the planned reduction in defence expenditures.

William Hamilton (PC—Montreal Notre-Dame-de-Grace) said the Commons may be losing its powers to the cabinet and to top civil servants.

He said Parliament should appoint an independent officer to make a continuing check on the use of powers delegated to the cabinet and the top level of the civil service.

Hon. Earl Rowe, acting opposition leader, said it is strange the government is planning to reduce defence spending while it is facing the most critical period ever known.

His reference was to government estimates for 1955-56, tabled in the Commons last Friday, showing plans for a cut of $133,000,000 from defence spending in the present fiscal year to $1,775,000,000.

"If conditions continue as serious as they are we must economize in our civil expenditures in order that we may have money to spend for our very survival," Mr. Rowe said.

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. Ida Zeratsky, 58, died in hospital Wednesday three hours after she was struck by a car while crossing a street. She suffered a fractured skull and other injuries.

Soviet Engineer Would Use A-Power To Move Mountains, Dam Oceans

By WARREN ROGERS JR.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians, rather coy about taking part in President Eisenhower's atoms-for-peace plan, are giving free rein to their imaginations about what it could mean.

For instance, a recent broadcast from Moscow monitored in Washington talked about moving mountains, reversing rivers, even melting the polar icecap.

The broadcast was based on an article by an engineer, Andrei Markin, who said Soviet scientists have taken steps in peaceful uses of atomic energy to "make it possible to rectify many defects of nature."

The article suggests that only the Communist approach will work in using atomic energy on an international scale. "Under capitalism they cannot be turned to practical account."

He said "plans exist"—without saying where—"to irrigate deserts such as the Sahara, to construct a huge hydro-electric power station in the straits of Gibraltar, and so forth."

Markin went on:

"An even bigger scheme would be the construction of a power dam in the Bering straits. There is also a plan to create a whole complex of projects with a view to directing the warm currents of the Pacific into the Arctic ocean in order to raise the temperature of the areas behind the Arctic circle."

Capt. H. E. Finnegan, chief of the tides and currents division of the United States coast guard and geodetic survey, was skeptical about melting the polar ice cap.

"What happens in the rebound when the icecap's pressure eases off?" he asked.

A weather bureau estimate is that if all the world's icecaps and glaciers melted the sea level would rise perhaps 150 feet. San Francisco and New York, as well as Sevastapol and Vladivostok—and all other ports everywhere—would get pretty wet.

Chiang's Forces Assume Initiative in Far East War

By SPENCER MOOSA

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — Nationalist bombers and outpost island artillery pounded Chinese Communist land targets and shipping Wednesday and Wednesday night along a 350-mile oceanic front from Formosa strait northward into the East China sea.

There were no reports of Communist action.

While Chiang Kai-shek's airmen and gunners carried on the furious civil war, the whole issue of a Nationalist withdrawal from the menaced Tachen islands 200 miles north of Formosa appeared to be hanging in the balance because of American reluctance to give clear-cut guarantees for the protection of the off-shore islands of Quemoy and Matsu.

The Nationalists now have taken the initiative in the erratic vest pocket war.

Official reports said Nationalist bombers damaged two vessels Wednesday night near Yikiangshan, fallen island eight miles north of the Tachens.

And the all-but-dormant Quemoy-Amoy area, across the strait from Formosa, stirred to life Wednesday with Nationalist shelling of Communist shipping and island targets on Amoy and Tateng.

There are indications that if the U.S. fails to guarantee Matsu and Quemoy, the Nationalists will press for reconsideration of the whole Tachens issue.

The Nationalists, according to sources who should know what is happening behind the scenes, would prefer to make a fight-or-die stand for the Tachens.

The same sources give the impression that Washington had agreed to assurances about Quemoy and Matsu but then had backed down.

An increasing number of people here are beginning to think that Washington is not bringing the situation to a head because of possible moves elsewhere to persuade the Chinese Reds to let a Tachens evacuation go unchallenged.

American and Indian Head Atoms-for-Peace Conference

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—An American and an Indian will be leaders at the first world scientific conference on atoms-for-peace in Geneva next August. The United Nations-sponsored parley will disclose scientists' estimates of the prospects for nuclear power in the next 25 to 50 years.

The American, Walter Gordon Whitman, 59, will be the secretary-general, in charge of arrangements. He is a pioneer researcher in aircraft propulsion for the United States Atomic Energy Commission, member of the AEC's general advisory committee and director of the defence department's research board.

Homi Jehangir Bhabha, 45, of Bombay, chairman of India's Atomic Energy Commission and secretary of its department of atomic energy, will be conference president, empowered to rule out political discussion.

Secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold of the UN announced their appointments Wednesday night in letters inviting 84 countries—10 of them Communist—to send five official delegates each to the congress.

The conference rules, formulated by a seven-country advisory committee of scientists which met here Jan. 17-28, specify that the conference is for exchange of information only. One provision reads: "No proposals requiring adoption by voting shall be submitted or entertained by the conference."

To guard against the propaganda exchanges which have impeded so many post-war international conferences, the rules also provide that reports will be "presented only from the scientific and technical points of view" and that the president "may call a speaker to order if his remarks are not relevant."

Weatherman Must Belong To Rail Union

DRIGGS, Idaho (AP)—Postal authorities are planning to switch mail deliveries from trains to highway vehicles on a route that passes through here. They were scheduled to tell Driggs residents Wednesday why the move means better service for them.

A crowd waited for several hours but the postal officials failed to show up. The roads, in the wake of a snowstorm, were too bad for travel.

NEAR MIRACLE NEEDED TO SAVE MENDES-FRANCE

North African Policy Is Under Stiff Fire

By HARVEY HUDSON

PARIS (AP) — Premier Pierre Mendes-France's government was in grave danger tonight.

Radical Socialist Rene Mayer told Mendes-France, a fellow party member, that he would vote against him in the present debate on the premier's North African policy.

Mayer's decision probably means the crumbling of Mendes-France's majority in the National Assembly and the downfall of his government.

Mayer spoke to a hushed assembly at the start of the second day of debate on the North African question. He was applauded frequently by what appeared to be more than half of the approximately 350 deputies present. Joining in the applause seemed to be many followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who also has supported Mendes-France in the past.

DRAMATIC CONCLUSION

Mayer, in the dramatic conclusion of his hour-long speech, addressed the premier directly and said, "in the past you have often asked for a renewal of confidence. In this case I cannot renew mine."

AFTER. . para 3-84

After the critics exhausted their ammunition, Mendes-France is to take the floor with his defence. His chances of surviving by a slim margin were not discounted, but the prevailing feeling was that government prospects were poor.

The premier was expected to call for a confidence vote sometime before midnight, requiring him to resign if he loses. Under French legislative procedure calling for the lapse of a full calendar day before the ballot, the vote should come early Saturday.

WOULD BE RESPONSIBLE

Former premier Rene Mayer was the biggest name among the deputies asking to speak against the government. Mayer, elected from the constituency of Algeria, is a member with Mendes-France of the Radical Socialist (conservative) party.

If Mendes-France is thrown out, the votes of Mayer and his friends probably will be responsible.

The government was accused both of going too far and not going far enough in offering greater self-government to the North Africans

Mendes-France has been hampered by the lack of any agreement with the Tunisians on terms for local autonomy in that protectorate. The negotiations, after dragging on for months, have been deadlocked on the division of police powers.

LOST BOY FOUND

SIMCOE (CP) — Four-year-old Larry Roe returned home Wednesday five hours after he was reported missing in weather only a few degrees above zero. A neighbor found him only a short distance from home.

Beats Quebec City, Official 'Champ,' By Nine Degrees

Is 16 Below in Belleville, Foxboro Is 20 and Stirling 24

What has Bancroft got that Quebec City cannot boast?

Plenty—but last night the northern Hastings village made the eastern city say "uncle".

Canadian Press despatches said Quebec City with a temperature of 25 below was the coldest place in Canada at that time.

The weather-checker apparently by-passed Bancroft for up there the villagers shivered in a frost-laden atmosphere that saw the mercury dip to 34 degrees.

That made Reeve Theodore Tryon's community the coolest spot in the Dominion. Furthermore, the reeve said via telephone, "That is not by any means, the coldest weather we have had". Brrrr.

The lowest temperature in Belleville was 16 below zero but this modified somewhat during the morning hours. At 8.30 a.m., the official thermometer stood at 13 below.

Reports from Foxboro stated that the mercury went to 20 below zero, while at Stirling it dipped to 24 degrees below.

A "lazy wind, one that would rather go through than around a body" as one half-frozen early-morning pedestrian put it, was apparent during the morning carrying with it a biting cold that speeded city workers on their way.

However the weather man says there is some slight relief in sight. Says he, today's sunshine will be replaced with some snow flurries this evening while the low tonight will be five degrees below zero and the high on Friday ten degrees above. There will be light winds but the cold weather will moderate somewhat.

New York State Village Reports 38 Below Reading

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP) — Clear, bitter-cold Arctic weather sent the mercury scurrying into the 30-below-zero regions again today in New York state.

The village of Beekmantown, near Plattsburgh in the far northeastern corner of the state, reported the lowest temperature for the second straight day—a rousing, but unofficial, 38 below.

The weather bureau said it was 21 below at Watertown early today, 20 below at Massena and -15 at Albany.

While northern sectors got little or no snow. New York city had its first real snowstorm of the winter Wednesday as 3.7 inches snarled traffic on streets and highways.

Jet-Powered Vertical Take-Off And Landing Aircraft Unveiled

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y. (AP)—The Bell Aircraft Corp, today unveiled a jet-powered vertical take-off and landing aircraft which its executive feels could revolutionize military aviation as well as some forms of the air transport industry.

Lawrence D. Bell, founder and president of the company, called the plane "the most significant single development in aircraft flight since the Wright brothers' first airplane."

The plane, long a subject of speculation in the aircraft industry, was designed and built by Bell engineers at a cost of more than $500,000. It is powered by two jet engines mounted on an axle at each side of the body. The engines can be turned from a vertical position for takeoffs and landings to a horizontal position for level flight.

In addition, the craft is equipped with a compressed air system that ejects air streams at the wing tips and tail, thus giving the pilot control of the plane during landings and takeoffs. Bell engineers said that as far as they know this is the first practical application of such "reaction controls."

During level flight, standard aircraft controls are used.

The plane, successfully flown more than 20 times by Bell test pilot David W. Howe, is a queer-looking contraption but an obvious top-wing monoplane. It has no wheels—it doesn't need them. It has a glider body with an open cockpit, is 21 feet long and has a wing span of 26 feet.

The jet engines have not actually been rotated in flight, but the test program calls for such tests in a matter of weeks. Howe has maneouvred the plane in the air by means of the compressed air control system. He has used the jet engines to take off and land and to keep the plane in the air.

The obvious military value is that a plane can operate in the field without runways like a helicopter. But unlike a helicopter, its speed is not limited to less than 200 miles an hour.

The principle, according to Bell engineers, can be applied to a combat jet fighter that exceeds the speed of sound.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The cold weather east of Alberta has come to stay for a few days, the weatherman says.

Maximum temperatures Wednesday were generally below 10 degrees in southern Ontario and near or below zero across northern Ontario and Quebec. No immediate relief is in sight.

Residents of the Toronto area shivered through temperatures ranging from zero to 9 below early today. The high today is expected to be no higher than 10. The 9 below was the coldest in Toronto since 1950.

Quebec will be the coldest province in Canada today, forecasters say. Quebec City had the lowest temperature in the country Wednesday—25 below—and its high was zero.

More light snow was forecast for southern Ontario and temperatures will be freezing throughout the province.

CITY HALL FLAG AT HALF-STAFF

The flag on the tower of the city hall is flying at half-staff in token of respect for ex-alderman Urias "Sandy" Lummiss, who died suddenly in Marmora on Wednesday.

Urias 'Sandy' Lummiss, PUC Chairman, Dies Suddenly

Urias "Sandy" Lummiss who died suddenly in Marmora on Wednesday.

Urias "Sandy" Lummiss, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission and former alderman of this city, died suddenly of a heart attack in his bake shop at Marmora on Wednesday afternoon. He had suffered from heart trouble for the past two years and only recently had been confined to hospital, but his death was unexpected and came as a shock to a wide circle of friends.

In the death of Mr. Lummiss, the city has lost one who took a keen interest in the civic, community and sporting life of this city. He was ever ready to assist in any project that was for the good of his adopted city. Probably his most active and best loved project was the District Fish and Game Club. He was a charter member of the organization, was always a director of the organization and was never happier than being on some trout stream or lake or chasing the elusive buck through the northern woods of his native county.

He took a keen interest in Civic, Provincial and Federal politics. A member and director of local Progressive Conservative Association for years and served as Returning Officer at the last Provincial election for the riding of West Hastings. In the civic arena he served the unexpired term of Dr. R. T. Potter, who resigned to run for mayor in 1949 and then was elected alderman for the years of 1950-51. He retired from the municipal field but was elected a Public Utilities Commissioner in 1954 and this year was named chairman of the Commission. The late Mr. Lummiss was also a member of the Kiwanis Club and took a very active interest in their service work. He was also interested in the Moira River Conservation Authority.

OPERATED BAKE SHOP

After coming to the city from Millbridge, he was actively engaged in the baking business for many years. He operated the Harris Bread Company for some years and after disposing of the business intended to settle down to attend to his other interests, but his love of being busy brought him back into the business life, when he started a bake shop at Marmora. He formerly operated a shop at Napanee, his son being the manager. For twenty years Mr. Lummiss had been the district representative of the Copeland Milling Company at Midland and for the same time representative for Pendrith Baker's Equipment.

In all his activities, whether it was work or play, "Sandy" Lummiss took an optimistic look on life. He enjoyed and made many friends in all walks of life and his ready smile and dry humor were the life of many gatherings. He was always happy when watching a ball game, a hockey match or a horse race, but his first love was hunting and fishing, and he was proficient at both.

His death will bring sincere regret to a wide circle of friends, not only in this district, but over a wide section of Eastern and Central Ontario.

The late Mr. Lummiss was born in Millbridge, 59 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Lummiss and he had resided in this city for the past 35 years. He was an active member of Christ Church, and fraternally was identified with Moira Lodge, A.F. and A.M., No. 11.

Surviving are his wife, the former Margaret Jane Wright; two son, Harry, of this city; Gordon, deputy clerk of Toronto township in Peel County; two daughters, Mrs. Stephen (Vera) Ostap of Arvida, Quebec; Mrs. James (Gladys) Barton of Kingston, and four grandchildren, David Barton, and Bonnie, Cheryl and Jacqueline Lummiss.

Resting at the Grant Funeral Home, North Front Street. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

Naturalists Hear Address On Conservation

The Quinte Field Naturalists met at the Queen Elizabeth School on Monday night to hear Mr. Don Bell speak on conservation in the Moira River Valley. Mr. Bell is field officer with the Moira River Conservation Authority. His address, illustrated by some excellent pictures of the area, was very interesting and informative.

The denuding of forests, causing an increase in floods on the Moira River was the reason for a committee of interested people being set up to see what could be done. They found that 85 per cent of the streams in existence in Southern Ontario in 1850 are dried up or nearly so. They found great need for conservation of the remaining forests and wood lots and of good farming practices to conserve soil.

In 1946 the Conservation Authority Act was passed. By this act two or three communities can get together to form a conservation authority.

The work of this committee has progressed each year.

By means of excellent pictures Mr. Bell pointed out many of the beauty spots of the Moira valley: sunset on Stoco Lake, a beaver dam and lodge near O'Hara's Mill, the rare but brilliant cardinal flower, a pond of water lilies and many others.

HILLS OF CONTRAST

Then the contrast—trees struggling to grow on bare limestone rocks, fields of grain with bare or very poor patches due to inadequate drainage, hillsides with bare patches, the soil blown away by the wind or carried away by rain, large sand areas, pollution, causing streams to dry up as at Sulphide and Deloro, to say nothing of our own city, and the harm done to woodlots by allowing cattle to graze in them.

What is being done by the Moira River Conservation Authority?

Thousands of trees, mostly pines, have been planted in areas needing re-forestation, parks are being planned—the Moira Gorge Park, and one at Deloro, where an 18-foot dam has been built. Farmers have been persuaded to make farm ponds and to try contour ploughing. Plans have been made for the building of a dam at College Street to prevent flooding in Belleville.

Dr. Morris Smith thanked the speaker for his informative address.

Reports showed that the Stewart Thompson lecture was a success both in interest and financially.

Miss Nichols reported that the Willow Beach Field Naturalists of Cobourg and Port Hope had seen harlequin ducks which are very rare in this part of Ontario.

Miss Daisy Young told of seeing a flock of evening grosbeaks on Forin St.

Miss Minnie Moorcroft saw a pileated woodpecker.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Henning's assistants.

Five Minor Alarms Answered

Five minor alarms, two of them being mere smoke investigations, were answered by Belleville firemen Wednesday and early today.

Yesterday the reels were called to a Harriett street address for an overheated stove while last night they were called to a Pinnacle street address where an attempt was being made to thaw out frozen water pipes with the use of a gasoline torch. Yep, the woodwork caught afire but firemen reported no damage.

This morning firemen were called to Albert street for a smoke investigation while an overheated furnace motor on Gordon street, also brought out the reels. Again no damage was reported.

Quinte Secondary School Accepted From Contractors

Members of the Bay of Quinte High School Board officially accepted the new Quinte Secondary School from the contractors at a special meeting Tuesday evening. Prior to the meeting the new school on College St. had been gone over by school board members, the architect and the contractor.

Official acceptance of the school by the board will allow the contractor to be paid in full for the building. A board official stated the contractor will be expected to remedy any defects in materials or workmanship now noted or which occur within a specified time.

The new high school will be officially opened on February 16—a special program being planned for the occasion.

The only other item of business conducted at the meeting was the naming of A. O. Drysdale to the teacher-trustee council in place of Alderman Enos David, who resigned from the board to run for council at the last municipal election.

IN MEMORIAM

DOYLE. — In loving memory of my dear husband, Leo Patrick Doyle, who passed away February 2nd, 1951.

I have only your memory, dear husband
To remember my whole life through.
But the sweetness will linger forever
As I treasure the image of you.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by wife Mabel. F3

DOYLE. — In loving memory of our dear father, Leo Patrick Doyle, who passed away February 2nd, 1951.

God called him home, it was His will,
But in our hearts we love him still.
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.
We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone.
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by sons Clifford, Jerald and daughters Marie and Margaret. F3

DOYLE. — In loving memory of my dear father, Leo Patrick Doyle, who passed away February 2nd, 1951.

His smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall.
He had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
Some day I hope to meet him,
Some day, I know not when
To clasp his hand in the better land
Never to part again.

—Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter Joan. F3

BCI Drama Club To Present Play In Auditorium

The Belleville Collegiate Drama Club's major production for this year, "More Than Meets the Eye", opens a two-night run in the collegiate auditorium tonight at 8.15.

The three-act comedy is an hilarious mixup in which the hero, a young author of children's stories, tries to masquerade as a loveable old grandmother because he thinks writing children's stories will damage his reputation as a "serious" writer. When royalties, fame, and fortune hunters descend on "grandma" the fun goes into high gear.

Principals in the play are Jack MacDonald as the author; Earla Wilson as his wife; Robert Ireland, the author's publisher; and Paula Freeman as an imperturbable maid.

Sets have been designed and built by the Art Club under the direction of E. Tindale. Graham Beeby is stage manager. Clair Kelso is director.

The play, in rehearsal for more than two months, has a running time of 2½ hours.

Manslaughter Charges Against Three Dismissed

CALGARY (CP) — Charges of manslaughter against Mrs. Agnes McCann, George Clark and W. R. Holmes and a charge of being an accessory to an indictable offence were dismissed Wednesday by magistrate R. V. Read, who ruled at a preliminary hearing that there was insufficient evidence to commit the three for trial.

They were charged in connection with the death last Nov. 15 of Mrs. Margaret Thompson. An autopsy at Kingston disclosed she died as a result of an illegal operation.

Abbey Dawn Poet Honored At Ceremony

Close on the heels of his first Toronto recital Wednesday, Wallace Havelock Robb, poet of Abbey Dawn, near Kingston, was honored at a special gowning ceremony Friday during a recital to the St. Catharines Women's Literary Club.

The gown was a gift to be worn by Mr. Robb during his recitals. The presentation took place prior to the recital to allow members of the club to see him use it for the first time.

The gown is colored after the rare red trillium of Canada, and is faced with blue, representative of the bluebird of happiness.

On the left sleeve is an Indian sun symbol, to indicate Mr. Robb's brotherhood with the Mohawks of the Kente. The right sleeve bears the laurel of poetic achievement.

In accepting the gown, Mr. Robb told the club, the oldest of its kind in Ontario, that it was received as a tribute to indigenous poetry from the people.

Laure Nixon Hayes, poetress and president of the club, made the presentation. Mr. Robb was robed by Dr. Louis Blake Duff, Welland, and Carl Madsen, poet of Morrisburg, Ont.

Two days before, Mr. Robb had given his first Toronto recital at the Royal Ontario Museum Theatre.

He read parts of his nearly completed epic, Tecumseh, on which he has worked for over 25 years.

The Wounded King, a tale of wild life at Abbey Dawn, was also presented, Gloriosus, a poem on medieval magic, was included.

One Toronto critic called the recital a "unique evening." "From the first, he cast a spell on listeners by his sincerity," she said.

Mr. Robb is widely known in Belleville.

Four Small Boys Carried Safely From Their Home

TORONTO (CP) — Four small boys were carried to safety from their smoke-filled home Wednesday night after a man employed in their father's television repair business spotted the flames.

Frankie, 4, Timmy, 3, Billy, 8 and Johnny, 6, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Simms, were hustled outside the house by Peter Popowich, 22, who was making a phone call from the kitchen under the boys' bedroom.

Police said the father was working and the mother was at a bingo when the fire started.

Special Debate On Formosa Is Ruled Out

Twenty Inches Of Clear Ice Say Dealers

With electric refrigerators having taken over where the old fashioned ice box left off, the business of ice cutting on the Bay of Quinte has dwindled almost to the vanishing point, Belleville's two dealers in natural ice reported today.

And this is true in a season when the absence of thaws has resulted in the highest quality of ice seen on the Bay in many years.

At the present time there is approximately 20 inches of clear ice on the bay. "It's the best quality of ice in years," stated Mr. Harry Smith.

But neither the Harry Smith Coal and Ice Company, nor Callaghan's are yet putting in ice for storage.

Smith's did start to cut a week ago but with the continued stretch of zero weather a halt was called and all employees were required for delivery of fuel oil and coal.

"We expect to get back at cutting ice just as soon as this cold spell is over, but ice cutting is a short job anymore", Mr. Smith said.

The same was true for Callaghan's, who said they would start cutting in about a week's time. Here again a few day's cutting will supply all ice needed for next summer's requirements.

Twenty inches of ice on the bay at the first of February is considerably thicker than that normally expected at this time of year, but usually cutting commences before the end of January.

Twenty-Four Student Nurses To Be 'Capped'

Twenty-four student nurses in first year at the Belleville General Hospital will be formally accepted into the School of Nursing at capping exercises Friday, February 11th.

The "capping" will officially mark completion of the preliminary period of first year instruction.

The ceremony will be held in the hospital's dining room at 8.00 p.m. and will include an invocation, a message from the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, a dedication by the student nurses. "Capping" will be done by the student's "big sister" in second or third year. The Nurses' Choir will sing.

Parents will be invited to the ceremony. Refreshments and a social hour will conclude the evening.

Health Dept. Had Busy Year Says Report

Expansion of almost all phases of activity of the City of Belleville Health Department took place in 1954 according to the year-end report submitted by Dr. A. M. Breuls, Medical Officer of Health.

New members added to the health department staff during the year were Miss Mary Vivian, Reg.N., and a qualified public health nurse and R. F. Westlake, sanitary inspector.

Dr. Breuls continued to divide his time between Belleville and Prince Edward County under special arrangement. The report, divided into five categories, gave in detail the work done under headings communicable disease, immunization, clinical services, nursing service, and school health services.

No poliomyelitis was reported in Belleville during 1954.

A total of 729 primary courses of immunization against diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough and smallpox were completed and 1,662 reinforcing doses were administered.

A total of 120 clinics were held during the year with a total attendance of 4,691 persons as compared with an attendance of 2,814 at 130 clinics in 1953.

Nursing services for health supervision, prenatal and postnatal maternity care and care of the sick all showed increases in 1954 over figures for 1953.

Nursing hours spent in schools totalled 1,770 compared with 1,630 in 1953.

Ancillary services included instruction at prenatal classes sponsored by the Y's Menettes club, a course of 15 lectures in communicable disease and preventive medicine to the senior nursing class at Belleville General Hospital and a public education program designed to promote the cause of early immunization for children.

Eight Planes Fail to Locate Belleville Man

VANCOUVER (CP)—The bodies of a pilot and a logger who perished Tuesday in a plane crash in the remote Queen Charlotte islands were flown to Vancouver early today.

The pilot was Bill Bellam, 27, of Alliford Bay, B. C. The dead logger has not yet been identified.

The five survivors of the crash 500 miles north of here were flown to hospital Wednesday. All were injured severely.

Meanwhile, the RCAF waited today for a change in weather allowing planes to resume the search for a T-33 jet which vanished Saturday with two men aboard.

Eight planes flew over Garibaldi park Wednesday, but searchers were hampered by low cloud around the mountain peaks for the fifth straight day.

Aboard the jet trainer, which was on a flight from Gimli, Man., to Vancouver were FO. K. Bradley, formerly of Belleville, Ont., and FO. J. L. Nelson, formerly of Ottawa.

The Garibaldi region is 90 miles north of here.

CANCER APPOINTMENTS

Hospitals and Charitable Institutions Are Eager to Buy 40-Cent Butter

OTTAWA (CP) — Government sales of cut-price butter to hospitals and charitable institutions out of its 70,000,000-pound stocks will start next week.

Federal officials announced this Wednesday and reported that hundreds of such institutions have said they will welcome butter at a price 21 cents a pound less than they normally pay.

Under the surplus-disposal program, some 1,500 institutions will get butter at about 40 cents a pound. They will buy from regular suppliers who will be reimbursed by the government for the price difference either in cash or in butter replacements from the surplus held by the agricultural prices support board.

The board's butter was bought at 58 cents a pound under the federal price-support program and normally sells at 61 cents wholesale during the winter months of low butter production. The three-cent spread covers storage and handling costs.

The loss through the 21-cent price cut will be charged against the federal treasury and Canadian taxpayer.

The price reduction admittedly is aimed at increasing butter consumption. The wholesale price of margarine varies, but one Toronto hospital has said it pays 21 cents a pound for the butter substitute.

Some speculated that Agriculture Minister Gardiner is using the present plan of sales to institutions as a platform on which to base a request for permission to export some of the surplus at reduced prices.

The Canadian Association of Consumers and Dairy Manufacturers have protested against any proposal to export butter at prices below the Canadian level. The world price ranges between 35 and 45 cents a pound.

ONE POINT ON WHICH WE SHOULD COPY REDS

Lord Bertrand Russell, the noted British philosopher, has on several occasions recently expressed his deep concern over the trend of world events. It is a concern which is shared by millions of his fellow-men, in all quarters of the globe, of almost every conceivable variety of political allegiance. Comparatively few of these millions, however, share Lord Russell's ability to voice their concern in thought-provoking and attention-compelling sentences.

One of the developments which alarms Lord Russell is the growth of fanaticism. There is today in the United States, he says, a growing belief that Communist fanaticism can only be defeated by a matching anti-Communist fanaticism.

Most of us will agree with Lord Russell that this is undesirable, that any endeavor to fight fire with fire is likely to spread the flames rather than to douse them.

There is, however, one Communist trait which it is essential that anti-Communists imitate if they are ever to find an effective answer to Communist propaganda.

In all the nations of the west, and in the east too, governments are concerned about the presence of native Communists. They know that the first allegiance of these people is to the Communist cause, not to their country.

This offends every instinct of the patriot. It would not worry Lord Russell for that reason, though, since he has no use for patriotism, at least in its narrower sense. Indeed, in one sense there is nothing new about men believing they have a higher allegiance than that to their country. For many centuries there have been such men, and only occasionally has their higher allegiance been regarded as a threat to the safety of their homelands. What is new is that, for the first time on a world-wide scale, there exists groups of men who give their allegiance not to a cause so much as to another country.

It is one of the paradoxes of recent history that so long as Communist rule was confined to Russia Communism was international in character. But, just as Communism expanded its territorial control, it contracted the scope of its outlook and there is no longer any question but that today world Communism is essentially nationalistic in character.

Some may quarrel with that statement, holding that it is refuted by the Communist regime in China or, even more emphatically, by Tito's regime in Yugoslavia. Yugoslavia, however, proves the point; it is the exception which emphasizes the rule. Tito broke with the Kremlin precisely because the policies of world Communism had become nationalistic, instead of international. China, too, will almost certainly follow the same path if the opportunity arises.

The Communists in democratic lands are thus groups of men who give allegiance to another country than their own. Even this is not entirely new. Most of those who have held in the past that they owe a higher allegiance than that to their country have given it to causes, generally of a religious nature, but there have been occasions when religions have become identified with states, when they have become nationalistic in much the same manner than Communism has been converted from an international creed to a national instrument of world politics.

Such groups have been in the past, are now and always will be a grave threat to national safety wherever they exist.

Yet, at the same time, this allegiance to something before one's country holds forth the only hope for mankind. It must be allegiance to a cause and the cause must be a good one. Not until the anti-Communists of the world abandon their narrow nationalisms and are prepared to offer their first allegiance to the brotherhood of man will they find themselves, at last, triumphantly embarked on a crusade which will finally eliminate the Communist menace.

HAS THE GOVERNMENT NO RESPONSIBILITY HERE?

The Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will launch a campaign to double the number of its bush camp inspectors. This campaign is designed to stamp out cruel treatment of horses in logging operations. It will be welcomed by all people who love horses—and indeed by all with humane instincts.

At Oakville Herbert Merry, vice-president of the Society, told of what he had seen during a 60-mile bush camp inspection tour along the Ottawa river. He described the cruelty to horses in some camps as "almost unbelievable." He said that camp bosses flaunt the society's authority because of the shortage of inspectors and added that magistrates are too lenient with persons convicted of cruelty.

The Society deserves praise for its efforts in the past and support in its endeavor to improve its work in the future.

One point, however, suggests itself. Has the government no responsibility in this matter? Why should the task of preventing inhumane treatment of animals be left to the Society? The government is responsible for the enforcement of the law. Does this responsibility for law enforcement not extend to the treatment of horses in bush camps? If magistrates are too lenient in their sentences, why does not the Crown appeal?

THE SHORT CUT

To good advice I'll lend an ear
And try to follow it I will.
The doctor's name I'll gladly hear
Who has a cure for every ill.
The flowers you like I'll try to grow.
I'll even fish your favorite lake,
But this I want you now to know:
Your short cut home I will not take.

I'll try whatever you suggest.
Your helpful hints at times I need.
I know you mean them for the best.
The book you've read I'll also read.
Your counsel usually is right,
But this mistake no more I'll make:
Henceforth, good friend, by day or night,
Your short cut home I will not take.

Though by a longer way I came,
Don't shake your wise, old head at me
Or tell me that it seems a shame
My journey had so long to be.
Don't tell me how I ought to go,
The roads I know I won't forsake.
Too often I've been lost; and so
Your short cut home I will not take.

TODAY'S TALK

HATS

I wonder who wore the first hat—and why? Perhaps it was first only a decoration, or a covering to protect the top story on the head. At any rate, hats have been worn for ages by both men and women. As for the latter, millions have been made out of catering to the wants and foibles of women as to their head-gear.

Hats have really played an important role in life. General MacArthur's familiar military cap with its 5 stars became a trade-mark of the man. Dr. George Washington Carver wore an old battered hat he loved because of its association and companionship. One day some of the students at Tuskeegee Institute tried to play a trick on Dr. Carver just before an important engagement, but he refused to budge until his old hat was returned. It was.

I read in my newspaper today of a man in Jacksonville, Illinois, who has been wearing a black beaver hat for 82 years and he remarked it was "as good as new." He bought it in 1872, thus it has been in the family for four generations. That speaks well for the makers of hats generations ago. I had a beaver hat a few years back that cost me more than any hat I ever owned—but some one stole it!

There is a strange intimancy about a hat. And it serves a good purpose later in life when upper protection is so welcomed. It took me a long time to fall for the habit of rarely wearing a hat, excepting in very cold weather, but I welcomed it largely because I was forever losing my hat.

At my Nova Scotia summer retreat I have a large assortment of hats. One, which many have insisted is disgraceful, I love most of all! It had seen better days, yet no day was unhappy with that intimate companion upon my head. We animate and personalize many material things. They keep us human and friendly. My hat's off to all hats, and may the wearer of each live long and prosper!

Space Travel Problems

(International Science Press Service)

Space travel is on the map. But a voyage in outer space might turn out ot be a journey to one's own funeral in an atom-powered hearse.

Medical researches, therefore, have been going on for quite a few years. The Space Medicine Association of America has been in existence for five years, and the British Interplanetary Society has undertaken a good deal of investigation. The assumption on which this work is based is that the human body has been evolved over countless thousands of years to suit in to an earthly environment.

The first difficulty would be to enable a space-traveller to leave the earth. A rocket ship would have to take-off from a standing start at a terrific speed to overcome the pull of gravity. Unprotected, the traveller's whole face would sag and fall in as the blood from his head coursed down to the lower parts of his body, which would become bloated and engorged. A black-out would follow, and then death. But a man with the soundest of constitutions could probably survive the take-off by wearing a pressure suit to counteract the movement of his blood, and by reclining on a rubber mattress.

Having reached outer space, the astronaut would immediately have to adjust himself to the opposite extreme and float about in a gravity-less void. He might be terrified at losing all sense of personal direction and balance, not knowing "up" from "down." It would be Alice's fall down the Wonderland well coming true.

There could be no rehearsal on earth to enable him to adjust himself to these weird circumstances, since there is no practical way of reproducing gravity-free conditions. But acrobatic training might improve the lack of confidence caused by falling about. Gyroscopic controls of some kind inside a space suit or rocket, and magnetized shoes that would cause the wearer to have a steel "basis" under his feet, might make it possible to receive the brain into a sense of proportionality and direction.

• •

Equally unpredictable in their effects on the human body would be cosmic rays. In outer space, these consist of streams of high energy particles moving at fantastic speeds. There is a risk that, like the radiations from atomic bombs, they affect human fertility. Further, meteors and dust particles charge about space at nightmarish velocities. If these penetrated a space ship, they would alter the air pressure inside and endanger all the passengers. Between two and six inches of steel are estimated to be necessary to give protection to the ship.

This is far too much for a rocket to carry. It would, therefore, be necessary to devise a space suit capable of shielding the traveller against the worst foreseeable eventualities. Such a suit would not look anything like the flimsy, almost fancy-dress creations of cheap science fiction. It would have to withstand an internal air-pressure of at least 15 pounds per square inch. The air enclosed within it would need to be made re-breatheable.

The suit would need to absorb the body moisture and to keep the wearer at an even temperature. The sun would be blazing down from one side at a temperature far higher than anything experienced on earth, while the traveller on the other sh freezing space would confront the traveller on the other side. It may be possible to safeguard against this risk by the inclusion of heat-dispelling fins, as suggested by Dr. Donald Menzel, of Harvard College Observatory.

Unless the traveller's destination has an atmosphere possibly capable of sustaining human life, he will have to use an oxygen apparatus all the time, except when he retires to eat or to sleep within a specially-sealed dome having an artificial atmosphere. It is doubtful whether he could use only ordinary compressed air, because of the wastage caused by its unbreatheable nitrogen content, which would represent unnecessary bulk in transit. Breathing pure oxygen for very long periods produces toxic effects, so that a person's stay on an atmosphere-less planet would probably be governed by the time it took for these symptoms to appear.

Many are the totally unknown and unpredictable hazards which will confront those who seek to travel in space. But there is little doubt that they will all be overcome eventually. A monkey who was shot up to a height of about 35 miles in a rocket was found to be unconcernedly eating a banana when he returned to earth by parachute. Man, of course, can match and excel this impish defiance.

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

It did me so much good to read of such an intelligent horse in Saturday's Ontario Intelligencer. (A milk delivery horse in Belleville refused to work in zero weather.)

If it didn't have a large warm blanket over its harness, it was certainly smarter than its master for it was certainly too cold to be standing every few steps on a street.

I hope it got a few extra oats for its good sense, and no unkind words.

A man of kindness to his beast is kind,
But brutal actions show a brutal mind;
Remember, He who made you, made the brute,
Who gave you speech and reason, formed him, mute—
He can't complain, but God's all-seeing eye beholds
Your cruelty. He hears his cry,
He was designed your helpmate not your drudge,
And know this—his Creator is your Judge.

"How are you going to get them to buy Fords?" Reuther replied.

When Camels Came to Canada

(Ottawa Journal)

In 1861 a Canadian contractor had bought 15 camels from the United States government and used them in the Cariboo country of British Columbia.

The Canadian memory of camels, handed down in legend from the BC pioneers, is that they might have been a success had they not smelled so badly. In the one season in which they were employed on the trail they caused numerous and serious accidents on the narow trails chipped into the rock. It was not even necessary for horses and mules to see thm. A whiff of this strange odor and they would go mad with fear; even oxen would panic. The camels could disrupt the whole traffic on the trail—some of it gold going south—and hard characters said they would shoot not only the camels but their drivers and owners.

The Canadian camels, too, soon were kicked out and left to fend for themselves. This they did fairly well and there is report that one survived until 1905, which would mean it had found the BC climate agreeable. One of the last survivors drifted near a community short of meat and the last grateful report of its activity said it tasted fine, fried.

Compensation For Thin Wall

A woman complained to a friend that the walls of her new apartment were so thin that the neighbors on either side could hear everything she said.

"Oh, I think you could eliminate that trouble," the other replied. "Just hang some tapestries over your walls."

The woman considered the suggestion briefly, then shook her head. "No that wouldn't do," she replied. "Then we couldn't hear what they say."

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

HEALTHY CHILDREN HAVE LARGE TONSILS

A reader sent me a clipping of what the reader said is from the editorial column of an unidentified "newspaper. The item stated that an unidentified physician who is interested in medical and health questions "blasts" Dr. William Brady's teachings about rabies, tonsillectomy and hernia, and says Brady is a menace, etc., etc.

Dr. Brady

Presumably the doctor who "blasts" me from his place of concealment expects that by the sheer weight of his authoritative position in the dinky towns where the paper is published his dicta will prevail and my "unaccepted" views and teachings will no longer endanger the public.

To be sure, my column may disappear from the unidentified community, but will that make any difference to people in a hundred other communities who will continue to be menaced by Ol' Doc Brady and his dangerous teachings?

Take tonsillectomy, for instance. Here is what the chief of the pediatrics department of the University of Miami's School of Medicine said about it, at the recent clinical meeting of the A.M.A. in Miami:

"A conscientious physician recognizes the need for an occasional tonsillectomy, but all too often it is done for no particular reason."

The periatrician said the size of the tonsils means next to nothing because they are normally enlarged in children between five and eight years of age.

In this contumacious column I have cited the observation made by Dr. Barron of Addison (not to be confused with Mr. Roth's Addison Sims of Seattle). In the routine examination of school children in the winter term Dr. Barron and other school physicians found most of the children had enlarged tonsils and sent notes to their parents suggesting that the tonsils should be removed. Few if any of the parents followed the suggestion. Again after school reopened in the autumn the same doctors re-examined the children—and were astonished, Dr. Barron reported to find that the enlarged tonsils had shrunk to what the doctors considered normal.

If I kept Dr. Baron's original report (published, I believe, in the N.Y. State Jour. of Medicine years ago) it is buried somewhere in my maddening files. So I can't say positively whether Dr. Wm. E. Barron of Addison, N.Y., or Dr. Wm. (Nought) Brady pointed the moral: Decide after summer vacation is over whether to expose the child to the grave risk of tonsillectomy.

An editorial article in the Jour. A.M.A. March 16, '40, cited the statement of Mrs. F. H. Hansel and C. S. Chang, in Arch. Otolaryngology, for January, '40, that 13 per cent of the annual total of more than 1,250,000 tonsillectomies are unnecessary—that is, no less than 160,000 persons subjected to this major operation in the course of the year have only allergy.

I hope you—you credulous parents will understand that these are not just my pipe dreams, but the conclusions reached by medical authorities that can't be brushed off by the everready operators.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A few weeks ago, the Packsack took a hearty swing at soap operas. And from places as distant apart as Namur, Quebec, and Dauphin, Manitoba, have come letters protesting vigorously against the narrowness of the Packsack's viewpoint.

L Mrs. Welburne of Namur, who confesses she is well up in years, says:

"Probably your attitude is understandable in cities and towns, but not in country districts far removed from movies and other entertainments. Please put in a plug for the soap operas as one of our few diversions and pleasures."

The western correspondent says:

"I live alone most of the year and most of the days of the year. The nearest movie is 16 miles, and is very poor. On the rare occasions I get into town, there is usually a Western, which is very unlike the West that I have known all my life. Never do any of the great movies we read the reviews about come to this theatre. But for ten years I have faithfully followed soap operas, all of them, and the people in them are more real to me than the neighbors amongst whom I live. Much as I love thm, I can understand that you who live in cities, with your wealth of entertainment, might look down on them as being slow-paced and maybe a little melancholy, as you have suggested. But please never forget the tens and hundreds of thousands of us who do not live in cities and towns. And to many of us soap operas are art. Now get out your dictionary and look up what art means, in its fullest sense."

I do so. Art: the production or expression of what is beautiful, appealing, or of more than ordinary significance."

Lady, you've got me. On two points you win. Indeed, on three. To you the soap operas are appealing, and of more than ordinary significance: therefore, to you, they are also beautiful. You win, and most sincerely I lift my hat to you.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

LAWS IN RIGHT PLACES

Mr. Howard Plye, governor of Arizona, has recently written as follows: "Over my desk, and over that of every other governor, flows a steady stream of beautiful rationalized appeals for more laws to avoid this and prevent that . . . Men cannot be made law-abiding by law alone. If laws were enough to produce such a result, ours would be a model country for all time, because it would be hard to find a nation on earth more surrounded by rules and regulations than ours. Still, we are writing more of them, with increasingly dubious results."

It is hard for us to get into our heads the plain truth that the only thing wrong with the world is the hearts of the people who live in it. Therefore, the only way to make a better world is to make a better humanity; and this we do chiefly through education, through the extension of democracy, and, above all else, through the enobling power of religious faith.

Laws in themselves will do us no good. Neither will jails nor insane asylums nor strait jackets. Not more laws written on the legislative scrolls, but more laws written on the fleshly tablets of the heart. Neither will hand-wringing, nor tears, nor curses do any good.

Start changing people; and you and I do not need to be told who are the first ones that need to be changed.

C.G.I.T. 'Mother-Daughter' Banquet Held at Baptist Church

The CGIT held its annual city-wide "Mother and Daughter" banquet at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Wednesday evening.

The tables were nicely decorated in white with a strip of dark blue through the centre of each. The head table was adorned with a lovely potted plant with blue and white candles and CGIT dolls on either side.

The grace was given by Rev. L. K. Daniel. Mrs. F. Davidson expressed words of welcome to everyone. She thanked the Baptist Church for the use of their facilities, the ladies of the Girls' Work Board and the publicity committee for helping to make the banquet a success.

TOASTS PROPOSED

Following the dinner, the chairman, Miss Gwethelyn Cathers, asked for the toast to the Queen and then the toast to the Church by Miss Judy Robson of the Baptist Church.

"Jesus himself founded the Church, 'Upon this rock, (Petra), I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.' We come to love the church we grow up in. With a common faith, we are all a part of God's family. We need the Church and the Church needs us." Rev. L. K. Daniel made the response.

"I want you to feel you are part of the Church. As you fulfill the purpose outlined for you in CGIT, you are filling a part of the Church." Miss Cathers then called on Miss Barbara Touchie of Tabernacle United Church, for the toast to the Sunday Schools.

"Christianity becomes more important to us, as we look toward the future, remembering the words of Christ, I am the Way, the Truth and the Life. In Sunday School we can learn Jesus' way, the Truth of the Gospel, and how to follow the Light that leads to a higher and better life. Here we can prepare to become true and faithful Church members, and as Canadian Girls in Training, become the girls that God would have us be.

We are taught to love the Lord;
We are taught to read His word;
We are taught the Way of Heaven;
Praise for all to God be given."

Mr. John Babiak responded to this toast.

TWO VALUES OF C.S. CHILDREN

"The Church School recognizes the two full values of its children. One is now and the other is as adults in the church. Their future value depends on the training and inspiration they receive now. The CGIT is a channel through which the church can flow. The church and the church school need the CGIT."

The toast to the many gracious mothers was made by Miss Sharon McDonald of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

"Were it not for the loving guidance of our mothers, we might never have known CGIT".

Mrs. D. McDonald responded on behalf of the mothers.

Mrs. K. Davis of Holloway Street United Church proposed a toast to the CGIT. "The work done by the CGIT is a worthwhile one. We appreciate the work of the leaders in training our girls."

Miss Leslea Anderson of Bridge Street United Church gave an interesting talk on "Camp Promotion." She was chosen as one of the girls to go to Camp Council at Kwasind, last summer.

"Kwasind is the same as any other camp, except at 'Council Hour.'

At this time everyone exchanges ideas to make CGIT better. The main topics at Council Hour were program promotion; national issues; finance and camp promotion. Miss Anderson pointed out the needs within CGIT of more leadership and finances.

"To the girl who attends Camp Council this year, I wish her the same uplifting experience that I had."

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. F. Davidson introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. H. R. Varcoe, whose address was entitled, "Be Glad."

"Be glad you are a Canadian. Be proud you are a Canadian. If you were living in Formosa tonight, you would be being bombed. If you lived on the mainland of China, you would be out searching for food for your family. If you lived in India, you would probably never know what it was like to go to bed without hunger pains.

"Be glad you are a girl. Once you have set your mind upon a goal, stay with it. It has not been long since women have been accepted in the ministry. The medical schools were closed to them. A girl wanting to study architecture or engineering was most unpopular, but to-day, these fields are all wide open to girls.

"Be glad you are in training. Training sometimes gets monotonous, the same old arithmetic, algebra and trigonometry, same old music scales, but all these things have a purpose in training you to think clearly and logically. During this period of training, do your work well. You are being trained to take your place in the country and community in which you live."

Mrs. Varcoe was graciously thanked by Miss G. Cathers.

"JINGLE BOXES" SAVINGS

Miss Jean Scott, a CGIT leader from Holloway Street United Church, led in the presentation of the Jingle Boxes. This money is a voluntary savings on the part of the girls, and it is used for girls' work in Canada, such as promoting camps. The CGIT hymn was sung during the ceremony.

Everyone joined crossed hands for the singing of "Taps".

The Benediction was given by Rev. Mr. Davis of Bridge Street United Church.

H&S Assoc. Of P. of W. School Meets

Prince of Wales Home and School Association held its February meeting in the senior room on Tuesday, at 8 p.m., with a record crowd of parents in attendance. The meeting opened with "O Canada" with Mrs. Burtt at the piano. Mrs. Arthur Fudge read the devotional exercise which was taken from the first twelve verses of Psalm 91. The Lord's Prayer followed.

Mrs. Murray, the president, thanked Mrs. Vandevoort for carrying on so capably in her absence. Mrs. D. McLean, the secretary and Mrs. Hunter, the treasurer then gave their respective reports.

A letter of thanks from the Salvation Army for a donation was read.

Mrs. Mastin and Mrs. Slack had an equal number of parents present.

The Valentine tea and euchre to be held on February 9, was mentioned and all interested persons were asked to attend.

A poster drawn by Connie Spencer and enlarged by Mrs. Watson was shown to the audience.

Mr. Burch, the program convener, mentioned this was the anniversary of Founders' Night.

Carol Daugherty favored with a recitation very true to life entitled "Haven't Got Time."

Mr. Bob Parks, accompanied by Mrs. I. Badgley sang "Any Time" and "The Rose of Tralee".

The parents were then invited to the classrooms to see the work of their children and talk over with the teacher any problems that might arise in school life.

A most profitable evening was brought to a close by the guests having refreshments served by Mrs. Grey and her committee.

Congregational Meetings

CHRIST CHURCH ANNUAL VESTRY MEETING

The annual Vestry meeting of Christ Church was held on Monday evening, January 31st. A message of greeting was read from St. Thomas' Church and the Rev. L. Arthur Page, who was present, voiced greetings from St. Margaret's. The financial reports of all organizations were presented. They revealed a healthy financial position and reflected the happy fellowship that exists within and between all organizations.

The rector presented his report showing that a total of 489 services had been held during the year. There had been 118 baptisms and 83 candidates confirmed. He thanked all the organizations for co-operation received and commented upon the good work of the Rev. E. P. Smith, assistant, and Mr. John Withers, organist and choir-master. At the conclusion of his report Archdeacon Creeggan read the names of thirty members of the congregation, who had passed to higher service during 1954 and with bowed heads prayer was offered for them.

Mr. E. E. Palmer, People's Warden, presented the Warden's financial statement, which showed an increase over previous years with all obligations met and a substantial balance. In the mission account the apportionment was overpaid and the indebtedness to the Bishop's residence paid in full. The Vestry accepted an increase in apportionment for 1955, plus the intention to overpay as much as possible.

The institution of a new fund to be known as the organ fund was noted. The purpose of the fund is to raise monies for a new organ, which will be a necessity in the near future.

Mr. M. B. Button presented the Parish Hall Fund and disclosed the fact that there were sufficient funds on hand to pay off the mortgage, when it falls due. The responsibility of the finance committee, which has been headed by Mr. F. G. Creeggan as chairman; M. B. Button, treasurer, having been discharged, the committee automatically ceased to function. The Vestry, realizing other necessary projects for which monies must be raised, set up another committee to be charged with the raising of the funds involved. This committee consists of Messrs. L. G. Lennox, M. B. Button, F. G. Creeggan, W. A. Mills and F. Beeby.

Officers elected for 1955 were as follows:

Rector's Warden—E. E. Palmer.
People's Warden—Edward E. Follwell.

Lay delegates to Synod for the next three years: F. Beeby, F. G. Creeggan; for two years, E. E. Follwell, W. A. Mills; for one year, M. B. Button, James Wright.

The Vestry Council consists of the clergy, church wardens, lay delegates, a representative from each organization and eight elected. Those elected were: Messrs. C. Colling, L. G. Lennox, C. Fuzzen, J. Miles, H. Hollomby, A. Wonnacott, G. Taylor, F. Ethier.

Mr. Cecil Cherry was elected captain of the sidesmen and deputy, E. E. Eatly. Mr. W. M. Adams was again appointed to be in charge of the lawns and flowers of the church for 1955.

It was announced that Mrs. Douglas Ellis had retired as envelope secretary and a note of appreciation for her eight years of invaluable service in that capacity was passed.

Mr. L. G. Lennox, retiring Warden was presented with a pen desk set, suitably engraved as a token of appreciation from the congregation for his faithful service for the past two years.

Rev. E. P. Smith thanked the people for their many kindnesses to him and stated how much he loved his work.

Square Dancing Becomes Vogue In Far North

EDMONTON (CP) — Square dancing has become the vogue in the tiny Arctic settlement of Aklavik, the outgrowth of a few steps shown a native patient by an Ontario nurse.

Norma Westgate, 25, of Watford said in an interview she performed a few square dance steps for a patient three years ago when she arrived at the Anglican Mission Hospital at Aklavik, 100 miles inside the Arctic circle.

Square dancing now is on the program at every wedding feast, she said, recalling "the most wonderful three years of my life."

Miss Westgate left for home by train Tuesday night after having fulfilled her childhood ambition to live in the north.

She joined a staff of seven nurses and two doctors at the 120-bed hospital where 90 per cent of the patients were tuberculosis cases. There are about 400 whites and 400 Indians and Eskimos in the settlement.

ADD TO STRENGTH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States army in a move to strengthen its atomic striking force overseas, said today it will send a sixth battalion of 280-millimetre cannon to Europe in the near future. Like the five already in Europe, it has six cannon capable of hurling both conventional and atomic ammunition up to 30 miles.

The weekly meeting of St. Michael's Regis club was held in the K. of C. hall.

Under the chairmanship of Bernard Mascaro, the spiritual committee conducted table discussions on the gospel for the following Sunday.

Betty Kenney, of the Intellectual committee, reviewed the book "Where I Found Christ", recommending it as good reading material for all club members.

45th Wedding Anniversary Marked by Surprise Party

Mr. and Mrs. George Oram of R.R. 1, Bloomfield, were pleasantly surprised on Sunday, when on arrival at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Regensburg, they were greeted by their entire family, who had prepared a turkey dinner in honor of their 45th wedding anniversary.

The dining room was decorated with pink and white streamers and bells. The table was centred by an anniversary cake inscribed with "45th Anniversary, Mom and Dad" and decorated with pink and white candles. A bouquet of pink and white carnations, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Yorke, added an extra festive touch.

The family presented their parents with a trilight floor lamp and bouquet of mauve and gold 'mums.

The wedding of 45 years ago, took place on January 29, 1910, at the home of the Rev. T. Wallace, at Monteagle Valley. The bride was formerly Janet Rutledge, daughter of George and Mary Rutledge. The bridegroom, George Duncan Oram, was the son of Duncan and Jeanette Oram.

The honeymoon was a train trip to Niagara Falls.

They kept a general store at Boulter for about four years and then at Combermere for six years, later moving to their farm near Crofton in 1922.

Both are in good health and quite active. Mr Oram is an ardent hunter and fisherman. He spends many week-ends at their cottage on Kaminiskeg Lake, fishing for grey trout. He has never missed a hunting season in about 55 years.

At the age of 70 he shot a 250-pound black bear. Mrs. Oram is a valued member of Crofton Ladies' Aid.

Mr. and Mrs. Oram have four children, (Phyllis), Mrs. Harold Regensburg; Johnson and Elgin, all of Belleville and Harry at home.

They also have eight grandchildren.

Woman Sells Home-Made Dolls for Living

NANOOSE BAY, B.C. (CP)—Mrs. Betsy Howard earns a living for herself and her invalid husband by selling home-made dolls to connoisseurs, collectors and celebrities.

In a little roadside workshop on the Vancouver island highway near here, Mrs. Howard turns out her dolls from colorful characters in legend, nursery tale and history.

Sir Winston Churchill was given a doll dressed as a scot and he sent the elderly woman a letter praising her craftsmanship. Numerous movie celebrities seek out Mrs. Howard, sometimes coming to Vancouver island for the specific purpose of buying dolls.

Mrs. Howard began marketing her dolls six years ago when a doctor told her she was working too hard.

Until then, the English-born woman owned a dairy farm, milked 10 cows a day, did all the other farming chores and looked after her invalid husband.

Besides the dolls she sells at the door, Mrs. Howard supplies a specialty store in Victoria and another in Vancouver.

Three of her dolls won three first prizes at the San Diego Doll Fair.

Mrs. Howard starts by making heads and faces of fine silk dyed flesh color, stuffed hard with wool. High-lighting, expression, complexion are done with fadeless pastel. Then she paints on mouth and eyes with lacquer. Real hair is supplied in assorted colors and types by a barber who saves his customers' locks for her.

She is especially particular about footwear for her dolls. A Vancouver island logger has properly spiked boots; a toreador's shoes are patent leather; a dancer wears ballet shoes.

Shannonville H-S Assoc. Holds Party

The Shannonville Home and School Association held a successful corn soup supper and euchre on Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Spencer. A fine crowd was present and it is hopeful they will continue as the funds from these card parties go toward the trip for the children in March to see the Sportsman's Show in Toronto.

Euchre prize winners were, ladies, 1st Mrs. Betty Louis; 2nd, Mrs. Helen Louis; ladies' low, Mrs. Ruth Rickman; men's 1st, Fred Louis; 2nd Roy Sager; low, Bert Spencer.

The silver dollar lone hand prize was won by Mr. Roy Sager.

The next euchre is to be held on February 11.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BETTER TELL THIS GIRL TO MAKE A CHOICE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 22. I have just been discharged from the army, and find that, while I was away, the grandmother of the girl I had been expecting to marry has been telling my girl she should not marry me because I have no money and will only be beginning now to make my way. I have a fairly good job which will be enough for our needs, and I am sure we can do all right.

Everybody in my girl's family likes me except, apparently, this grandmother, and, now, when the grandmother comes visiting, my girl doesn't even want me to come to the house, because she thinks it will make her grandmother mad. She says she loves me a lot, and wants to marry me, but does not want to marry without her grandmother's consent. We are constantly having spats about this, and I am afraid we are headed for real trouble unless you can tell me what to do. — Peter S.

Dear Peter: What's the matter here, anyhow? Has your girl's grandmother a lot of money to leave so that your girl is afraid she'll be out of the will if she marries against her wishes? That's the only possible reason I can think of for such ridiculous behavior.

If your girl doesn't love you enough to have the gumption to tell grandma in plain words to lay off, then I'd advise you to think things over very carefully before trying to persuade her to marry you. If she's more influenced by this relative than she is by you at this point, she's not likely to stand by and back you up after you're married, even if you should be successful in persuading her to go against granny's wishes.

I'd suggest that you tell this young lady she'll have to choose right now between you and her domineering grandmother, but that she definitely can't have both. If she refuses to choose, then you'd better get going and look around for another girl, for this one will have proved herself a poor bet.

ADOPTING A CHILD MUST BE DONE THROUGH THE RIGHT CHANELS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I have been married for three years, and the doctors told us we will never have any children of our own.

We are both very fond of children and would like to adopt a child. We have been told we could adopt a Korean or a French child for a very small fee.

Would you please advise us how we can go about this? — Mrs. A.W.

Dear Mrs. A.W.:

The only proper way to go about adopting a child is through the authorized agencies. If you try to go at it in any other way you are likely, almost certain, to run into all sorts of complications, and perhaps real trouble. Child adoptions are carefully regulated by law, and the only way you can be sure of being on the safe side is to consult a child adoption agency which operates under the laws of your state.

The thing for you to do would be to get the names of the child adoption agencies in your state, pick the one, or ones, nearest you, and go there and discuss the matter. If there is a legal way by which you could adopt a baby from some country abroad, you could find out about it and proceed according to the proper rules and regulations. Otherwise, you will simply have to add your name to the list of people who want to adopt children through these agencies, and wait your turn. There are, today, more people who want to adopt children than there are children available for adoption, and many couples have had to wait two or three years for the opportunity to come their way. I tell you this, not to discourage you, but simply so that you will understand there are difficulties involved, and be prepared to take the necessary steps patiently.

At your public library you will find books on child adoption, together with lists of agencies and Homes where you can apply for a child to adopt. It would be worth your while to look these up.

Meat Pie With English Pastry

By Mary Moore

Believe it or not but we are still eating leftover turkey. This was from one that we froze before Christmas, then roasted for a family party in mid January. Since some was still left because it was a big bird we froze that and last Sunday night we made it into a pie.

I am giving you this pie method today because I think it is the number one way to use left over meat of any kind. But listen to your old Grandma and be sure to use the English pastry. It was perfect.

EMEM'S DEEP MEAT PIE

This pie was baked in a glass casserole measuring 8 1-2 by 3 inches. The amounts given just fit and fill it and will serve five generously.

The Pastry— Sift all-purpose flour. Put sifter over bowl and put 2 cups sifted flour in it with ? teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Sift through into bowl. In another bowl put 2-3 cup shortening (if you are feeling a little bit extravagant make part of this butter) and pour over it 1-2 cup boiling water and stir until shortening is mixed with the water and melted, then add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 egg yolk unbeaten. Mix, then stir into flour mixture until smooth. Cover and chill dough. To line the bottom and sides of 8-inch casserole take 3-4 of the pastry and roll out to less than 1-4 inch thickness on floured board. Line inside of casserole with it. Pour in

The Filling—You need approximately 1 quart—5 cups—of filling. We cooked until barely tender together 1 small onion sliced, 1 stalk celery cut finely, 1-2 green pepper cut in long strips, 3 long very thin carrots in barely enough water to prevent going dry. To this we added turkey gravy which we made up to 1 3-4 cups by adding the vegetable water and some whole milk to it. The rest was large pieces of light and dark turkey meat. We heated them all together and seasoned well with salt and freshly ground pepper, and when it was real hot poured it into the pastry lined casserole. I rolled out the remaining pastry to fit the dish and gashed it to allow steam and juice to escape, and sealed the edges well and baked it at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 35 minutes—or until it was golden and juice bubbled through the gashes.

Be sure to treat your family to this pie soon for you can use beef, pork, veal, ham, chicken, rabbit (wonderful) and even fish.

Dorothy S. wanted an Eggless Cake and I have room for it here:

APPLE CAKE

(Eggless for Dorothy S.)

One-half cup shortening, 1 cup sugar, 2 cups sifted cake flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 1-2 teaspoons soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 1-2 cups ground tart apples (raw), 1 cup each chopped seeded or whole seedless raisins and chopped nuts. Sift the sifted flour with the sugar, soda, salt and cinnamon twice. Cut into these dry ingredients the shortening as you would for pastry. Dust raisins and nuts with flour and stir them in. Add ground apples and stir only enough to moisten the ingredients with the apple juice. Pour into buttered pan 4x8x3 and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. This cake has a lovely flavor and is economical.

COFFIN-HANDLERS DIE

MONTEPELIER, Vt. (AP) — A coffin-loaded truck proved deadly Tuesday for Alonzo Dukette, 60. Dukette was killed and Roland Gaboury, 29, was overcome as they napped in the cab of a casket company truck at a gasoline station. Police said the motor was running, apparently to provide heat in the cab.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

JUST A SUPERSTITION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

David and I became engaged just before he left for his service overseas. Our engagement isn't announced, will not be until he returns, and I have no engagement ring yet. But I would like to have a hope chest and start buying linens and so forth now. But I have always understood that it is not good luck for an engaged girl to buy her own hope chest. Is this correct? And, if so, what should I do about a hope chest?—Marian S.

This is a superstition I've never heard . . . and I thought I'd heard of all of them concerning engagements and weddings! Please don't be superstitious, and particularly about something so completely and ridiculously unfounded. If it's "not good luck" for an engaged girl to buy her own hope chest, how come so many, many girls do just that . . . that is, if they really want one?

INFORMAL ATTIRE FOR MEN IN WEDDING PARTY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My bride-to-be and I are making plans to be married at a very simple, small wedding in church, with informal reception following at her parents' home. The best man, the two ushers and I are to wear dark blue business suits. What kind of ties should we wear (four-in-hand or bow?) and what color? What color shirts? — George K.

Either four-in-hand ties or bow ties are correct with the dark blue business suits. But, since all should wear the same, and since bow ties are not becoming to all men, it might be safer to choose the four-in-hand ties. Ties with a blue background and a conservative gray or white pattern are an excellent choice. And the men should wear white shirts.

SERVING COFFEE AT TEA-TIME

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Would it be incorrect to serve coffee at an afternoon "tea" instead of serving tea? — Reader

Today coffee is very often served at an afternoon tea . . . but usually as an alternative to tea. However, if the hostess is positive that all her guests prefer coffee to tea, she may serve coffee only.

SHE SHOULD EAT VEGETABLES WITH A FORK

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine, a co-worker to whom I'm very much devoted, often has luncheon with me, and quite often we order a vegetable plate in a restaurant which makes a specialty of this. She insists that all the vegetables on the plate, no matter how prepared, baked or boiled or creamed, should be eaten with the fork. But I maintain it's proper, because more convenient, for me to use a spoon to eat, for example, creamed mushrooms or corn, or succotash or peas. Who's right about this? — Two Friends

Your friend is right. You'll look really grown-up if you use the fork when you eat the vegetables. So, lady, why not make yourself get accustomed to using the fork?

MAILING FORMAL INVITATIONS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

How long before my formal May wedding should the invitations be mailed? — Dorothy K.

Today formal wedding invitations are usually mailed four weeks before the wedding date.

Beauty

SITTING PRETTY

Few women, and fewer young girls, sit easily, gracefully, correctly. When standing or walking, most women are conscious of the appearance of their bodies, but when they sink into a chair, they assume poses that are not as pleasing as they should be.

Teenagers flop down, sprawl or do a sort of doubling up act that flattens chests, sends abdominal muscles up and outward. If they could see themselves as others see them, they wouldn't do it.

There are simple rules which, if kept in mind, will help any girl to appear more attractive. They're easy to remember, easy to follow.

When occupying a chair, occupy the entire seat. Place the torso well back. Nature intended you to sit on the bones of the thighs, never on the edges of the thigh bones or on the side of the chair. Nor should one cross the legs or twine the feet around the chair rungs.

No slump in the spinal column, if you please. The torso should be held erect, but not rigid. That attitude lifts the chest, flattens the abdominal muscles, so the mid section appears trim.

Keep elbows at the sides. Extended elbows look awkward, gives unpleasing conteur to the silhouette.

Remember that grace, like beauty, begins in the mind. Feel graceful and your body will naturally assume charming lines. Women of keen mentality show this quality in movement as well as posture.

Some women spend money recklessly for lovely attire, forget that it is not only dress that counts but the way it is worn. Unless it is carried with splendor, the most beautiful and expensive gown will be nothing more than so much fabric.

Beauty is a quality or combination of qualities that delights the eye. Correct posture when standing, sitting or walking is by no means a minor thing if you wish to create a pleasing appearance.

CAMPBELLFORD

George Rader Addresses Rotary Club on Ravages of War

CAMPBELLFORD — Mr. Geo. Rader, who is presently the sales representative for the Dupont Company, gave a most interesting address at the Monday meeting at the Campbellford Rotary Club.

Mr. Rader, who is of Norwegian nationality, commenced with the thought the "war is not a pleasant subject to contemplate." Norway was brought into the war on April 9, 1939, by the Nazi invasion. With more than 3,000 miles of coastline to guard, the relatively small population of Norway was helpless as the entire German navy plus six divisions and the Nazi Luftwaffe attacked in scattered spots along the coast line at strategic points. They had some help from within the country, which further hindered their attempts at defence.

NAZI INVASION

The invasion was not without German losses, as is testified by the sinking of the Blucher, one of the greatest fighting ships afloat at the time, in Oslo Fiord by two guns on the shore left there following the war of 1870. The speaker said he doubted if the guns had been used before, but they were quite satisfactory when required. The job was finished by torpedoes from the Great War of 1914-18. Norway fell in June, 1940, and King Haakon and his advisers were moved to England.

The escape of the king to England was encouraging to the people of Norway. He became a 'symbol to them of resistance. A small, but active element of anti-Nazi forces were immediately recruited, led by professional men, doctors, clergymen and professors, together with escaped army officers, formed the nucleus of the new underground of which he was a member.

FAMILY SAFETY

The chief concern of an "underground" fighter or saboteur was for his family's safety. He must always be on guard, not only because of the consequences to himself, but because of the enemy reprisal on his loved ones.

UNDERGROUND DIRECTION

By 1941 the work of the underground was directed from London. Thousands of Norwegians were trained by Norwegian and British instructors in the art of sabotage and resistance. No German ship sailed from Norway without being bombed and many were sunk. A complete news service was instituted within the organization so that the patriots knew what was going on in the world, despite strict control of press and radio by the Nazi command.

The mountainous country and the patriot's knowledge of it contributed greatly to their success, but greatest of all was the help received from Britain and the other allies.

SCORCHED EARTH POLICY

Unfortunately, when the Germans were driven out of Finland, they moved through Norway and carried on a devastating "scorched earth" policy, destroying about one in five of all the buildings, churches and bridges in the country.

The Norwegian underground embraced about 200,000 people in all and about 8,000 died in concentration camps. The country fared poorly through the occupation, but the help of the British air force ensured fairly regular supplies of food and war materials. The speaker paid special tribute throughout his address to the British.

Mr. Rader said that World War II cost 22 million lives and left 34 million cripples and invalids. He remarked that "war is terrible, and the world is big enough for us all. Let us hope that peace will win," was his parting thought.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Bud Davidson and was thanked by president Bill McComb.

Easy Money in Canada, Big U.S. Dollar Reserve Combine to Affect Exchange

OTTAWA (CP)—The double influence of easy money in Canada and the growth of huge reserves of U.S. dollars and gold appears to lowering the Canadian dollar's value on world markets.

For three years the Canadian dollar has been at a premium in relation to American currency. Exporters have complained of the situation, since it means a premium on the price of Canadian goods to world buyers making payment in Canadian funds.

The exchange premium, however, has declined in the last seven days by about one-half cent to approximately $1.03 1-16—the amount it takes in American funds to buy a Canadian dollar.

DECLINE IS SHARP

Federal officials said Wednesday that it was a "pretty sharp decline" in relation to previous fluctuations. They agreed it will help ease the financial pressure on exports but added that the government is not trying to control the exchange rate.

The government has been building up huge reserves of gold and dollars. They increased more than $120,000,000 last year to a high of $1,942,600,000. The government has repeatedly said these reserves are used only to iron out day-to-day changes in the exchange rate.

ABBOTT OPPOSED IDEA

Use of Canadian dollars on the New York market to buy U. S. funds would increase the supply of Canadian dollars in the U. S. and perhaps lower the premium on them.

Exporters and banking officials have been urging the government to do this. But last year former finance minister Abbott said there wasn't enough spare money in the treasury to bring the Canadian dollar to par by buying U. S. Currency.

HELPED PREVENT RUNAWAY

Officials say the premium might be even higher if the government's monetary reserves had not been increased.

Another, and perhaps more important, factor is helping to bring the Canadian dollar's value closer to parity with U.S. funds. That is the government's recent "easy money" policy.

Lower U.S. interest rates, plus a plentiful supply of money for investment, led to heavy borrowings in the U.S. by Canadian corporations and governments. This borrowing, and a heavy flow of U.S. investments in Canada, were major factors in raising the value of the Canadian dollar.

LESS ATTRACTIVE NOW

Now, federal officials say, Canadian and U.S. interest rates are nearly equal. And Canadian banks have been making more money available for loans.

This easy money policy may tend to reduce the influx of capital from the U.S. But the experts face the problem of not carrying the policy too far lest it cause inflation.

Uranium Stocks Running Far Ahead of Pack

By GEORGE LINTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Uranium stocks, once the trailers on Canadian markets, now are running far ahead of the pack.

Seven months ago they began their latest spurt and since then 10 important issues have increased in price at Toronto an average of more than 60 per cent.

Underlying the price boom is the Canadian government's pledge to pay private producers a minimum of $7.25 a pound for uranium oxide until 1962. And back of this is the free world's restless desire to stockpile atomic weapons against a third world war.

Uraniums have coursed a hectic boom-and-bust pattern in the two years during which they have climbed to prominence.

OTTAWA PRICE ATTRACTIVE

In 1954 the United States wanted more uranium from Canada and Ottawa set the $7.25-a-pound price to attract private enterprise. Listings on the Toronto exchange increased until the total now is about 60.

Today's stock levels, with the government guaranteeing a price, is considered much more solid by many experts.

But investors seem well aware that uncertainty remains. Uraniums last week suffered their sharpest break in seven months after William Bennett, president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., said demand for uranium may ease off after the guaranteed price expires March 31, 1962.

PRICES CLIMB

The government has contracts with a half-dozen companies to take ore until then. Gunnar mines, with an agreement to deliver $76,000,000 worth of ore from its Beaverlodge, Sask. properties by 1962, has climbed to $13.50 from $9.45 seven months ago.

Pronto Uranium, in the Blind River, Ont., district has an undisclosed agreement. It climbed to $5.75 from $4.75.

Gunnar and Pronto are expected to be producing by September. Algom Uranium, with two big ore bodies near Blind River expected to start production in 1956 and 57 soared to $15.50 from $6.20.

Ottawa has put security wraps around almost all the facts investors usually study in detemrining a mining stock's worth — ore body and production figures, grades, and the going price for the ore.

Profits on operation, however, are not classified. Rix Athabaska had a net return of $219,083 for six months ending Sept. 30, 1954.

Custody to Mother

TORONTO (CP) —Mr. Justice Wilfred D. Roach reversed a previous court decision Wednesday and granted custody of a four-year-old girl to her mother, basing his reasons on the law of human nature.

The child, daughter of James Arthur Bell and Ethelwyn Bell, who taught at the same school in Aldershot, a suburb of Hamilton, was originally given into her father's custody.

Mr. Justice Roach said: "No father, no matter how solicitous for the welfare of such a child, can take the full place of the mother."

DISASTERS IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A train and street car collided Wednesday injuring 82 persons, 22 seriously. In another accident, eight persons were drowned when a bus plunged into a pond near Jaolostotitlan, 250 miles northwest of Mexico City.

Two Are Injured

HAMILTON (CP) — Two Brantford men were injured, one severely, in a head-on car crash Wednesday.

Timothy Fitzpatrick, 70, suffered multiple head injuries in the smashup. He was a passenger in a car driven by John Szul, 36, of Brantford.

Also hurt was Bruno Warnken, 25. He received cuts to the forehead and was riding in a car driven by John Behrens, 43, of Brantford. Szul and Behrens escaped injury.

SMALLPOX HITS FRENCH

PARIS (Reuters)—Parisians today were urged to get themselves vaccinated against smallpox following 15 deaths among 72 smallpox cases in France. Health officials believe soldiers returning from Indochina brought the disease with them.

Princess Hears Calypso Song In Her Honor

By SAM SUMMERLIN

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) Trinidad took a royal holiday today to watch Princess Margaret tour this capital city. Early birds staked out claims to sidewalk vantage points for her state drive, with thousands expected to jam the route.

The government declared the day a public holiday in honor of the 24-year-old sister of the Queen.

The day's royal schedule also included a reception at town hall with the princess responding to Mayor John Hutchinson's address of welcome, another reception for the 60 correspondents covering the tour, an appearance at a children's rally in Queens Park oval and a state banquet tonight at Government House.

The princess, who landed in Trinidad Tuesday to begin a month long tour of the British West Indies, was given a preview Wednesday night of the islands' gala carnival later this month.

SPECIAL SONGS

Almost 800 singers and dancers appeared in the hour-long performance that followed a big reception at Government House. Princess Margaret tapped her feet to the rhythm of a calypso song written and sung in her honor by Vernon Roberts, nicknamed "Mighty Panther."

She wore a white honeycomb lace dress with a deep V neck, a small yellow hat, white shoes and carried a white bag. She passed down the lines of guests, pausing now and then to speak with selected persons.

McCann Knows Of No Officials Entertained

OTTAWA (CP) — The government says it knows of no federal officials having been entertained at a palatial country retreat by an unnamed construction company seeking government contracts.

Revenue Minister McCann made the statement Wednesday in the Commons in reply to the latest series of questions on the country home, described in newspaper reports as a Hollywood set-designer's dream in Quebec's Laurentian hills.

Dr. McCann, in reply to the questions by Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre), also said no federal contracts with the company are being considered at present.

The government said Jan. 24 that no federal contracts were awarded to the company since it purchased the retreat.

MENTIONED IN REPORT

Existence of the retreat was disclosed in a Jan. 8 judgment of the income tax appeal board on a claim by the company for deductions of $27,789 from 1951 taxable income for renovations to the place.

RESIGNS FROM CABINET

HALIFAX (CP)—Harold Joseph Connolly, health minister and one-time premier, resigned Wednesday from the Nova Scotia cabinet. He will retain his Halifax seat in the legislature, temporarily at least. Mr. Connolly will be replaced as minister of public health and public welfare by Geoffery Stevens, 63, minister without portfolio and administrator of the Nova Scotia Liquor Control Act.

Borrowings and Savings In U.S. Both at Record High

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are stashing their money away in the greatest volume of savings ever—and at the same time are going deeper and deeper into debt.

These seemingly contrary trends are highlighted by reports that deposits in mutual savings banks have reached a record high, that saving and loan associations have had a record year, that total liquid savings have risen—and that instalment debt has reached its highest level in history, as has the much more important form of debt, mortgages.

Total debt—what is owed by government, corporations and individuals—has risen by 47 per cent since 1946, with corporate and personal debts leading the way. Total debt now exceeds $600,000,000,000.

Is this dangerously high? If not, where will the danger point be?

Mortgages on family homes have climbed to $75,000,000,000. The home loan bank board estimates that more than $16,000,000,000 additional will be needed this year to finance home buying.

Instalment buying totals spurted with the advent of the new auto models and now are put at $22,500,000,000.

U.S. federal government debt now is $278,500,000,000, but hasn't been climbing much recently. State and local governments, however, increased their debt totals by about $6,000,000,000 last year.

Corporations went into debt last year at an even greater rate and the total of business debt now is around $187,000,000,000.

Mutual savings banks deposits increased eight per cent last year.

Bankers, and other managers of money and credit, say that the growing total of debt isn't the important thing—what matters is the relation of debt to income. And they say that in general income has been rising as fast as debt.

The ratio of corporate debt to income is well below the level of the 1920s. Farm debt in relation to farm income is less than one half the ratio in the '20s.

Mortgage debt's ratio to personal income is nearing the 1929 peak. But builders and lenders alike say that mortgage terms, amortization and government guarantees make mortgage debt less vulnerable than it was in the earlier era.

RAN OUT OF WATER

OIL SPRINGS, Ont. (CP)—Firemen had a house fire almost under control Wednesday when their 500-gallon water tank ran dry. They were forced to watch the wind-whipped flames burn the building to the ground. The $8,000 blaze was believed started by an overheated stovepipe in one of the bedrooms. No one was hurt.

Rear-Admiral Weds

OTTAWA (CP) —Rear-Admiral Horatio Nelson Lay, 52, vice-chief of naval staff and Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Viets of Ottawa were married here Wednesday in the chapel of Christ Church Cathedral.

Among the guests at the quiet ceremony were Vice-Admiral E.R. and Mrs. Mainguy. Rear-Admiral J. G. Knowlton, chief of naval technical services, was best man.

Mrs. Viets is the widow of the late J. C. Viets of Ottawa who died in 1952. She has two sons, John Peter, 3, and Robert William, 2. Rear-Admiral Lay, a widower, is a nephew of the late Mackenzie King. He has one son, David, 12.

St. Paul's Anglican Holds Vestry Meeting

MARMORA.— Enthusiasm prevailed at the annual vestry meeting of St. Paul's Anglican church, held in the Parish Hall on Monday evening.

The rector, Canon J. M. Brownlie, presided. Having opened the meeting with prayer, he presented his report. He referred to the retirement of George Kerr, treasurer for the past 16 years, thanking as well as that gentleman, the Ladies' Guild, the W.A., and the Sunday school, for their valued services. Referring to the Parish hall he remarked "we continue to work towards its completion and greater usefulnsss."

He extended thanks to the organist, Mrs. Roy Frost and to the choir. He said there were 12 burials, 14 baptisms, four weddings, besides over 50 hospital calls which he had made.

On behalf of G. Kerr, unavoidably absent, C. R. Whittemore read the treasurer's report. Approximately $4,300 were received and after expenditures a favorable balance remained on hand.

Miss M. Savage for the Mission Fund, reported increased obligations having been met with a surplus on hand at the end of the year.

Mrs. C. R. Whittemore, incoming president, gave the report of the Ladies' Guild. Well over $2,400 was raised and the year closed with a good balance on hand.

Applause greeted the adoption of this report.

Mr. C. R. Whittemore gave the report of the Decorating Fund. For the Sunday School, W. J. Cottrell reported a flourishing year in which over $180 was raised and with its obligations met, a goodly balance remained at the end of the year.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. R. G. Winters, the report of the W.A. was handled by Miss M. Robinson. Receipts slightly exceeded $200 and there was a favorable balance on hand after all liabilities had been met.

The rector appointed Arthur Pordham as his warden, and Everett Barrons was elected people's warden by the vestry. Edward Hewitt consented to be treasurer in succession to G. Kerr.

Lay representatives to Synod were appointed as follows: three years, W. J. Cottrell; two years, R. E. Bonter; one year, C. R. Whittemore.

Miss M. Savage was re-elected Missions treasurer and C. R. Whittemore as vestry clerk.

VESTRY COUNCIL

The vestry council was chosen to include, rector, wardens, lay delegates—E. Hewitt, D. Robertson, W. D. Lavender, T. Pearce, G. Kerr, Mrs. C. R. Whittemore, Mrs. R. G. Winters, Mrs. D. Robertson and Miss M. Robinson.

Several matters of importance to the congregation having been dealt with, a vote of thanks was tendered Canon and Mrs. J. M. Brownlie for their leadership.

The meeting closing with the benediction, the ladies served refreshments.

National Hockey League Developing Into Four-Team Race; Blues On Spot

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

COULD BE!

Michael J. Rodden, the Yogi of Roddenville, gazed into his crystal ball the other day, and the estimable swami saw somewhat strange sights.

In the milky mist of the spheroid the seer saw row upon row of figures, some clustered, others separate. When the mist slowly cleared away, El Miguel blinked his eyes and noted that the circular prognosticate had blazoned upon a board the names of the four top teams of the senior "B" hockey group.

Leading the pack, the yogi saw Cornwall with 68 points; Whitby 66; Kingston 65 and Belleville (he must have blinked and squinted in disbelief twice at this one) with 64.

The strange sight sent the honorable Michael reaching for pen and paper. He nose-dived into statistics and came up with a lot of possibles and probables. Here is how he explained the strange phenomenon and his comments after coming up with order out of the statistic chaos:

"The Whitby Dunlops, who will play six of their remaining ten games on home ice, rate favoritism to cross the finish line in first place. Moreover, in nineteen games on the road they have split the points and top the field in this respect. Cornwall, with twelve more games to go, will be away as often as they are at home.

"Goodyears, who have five at home and six away, will have to rise to dizzy heigths as visitors if they hope to gain possession of the top rung. Their away-from-home record of recent vintage shows six defeats, two ties and one victory, a 4 to 1 triumph in Brockville. Ere playoff time arrives they will appear once in every city in the circuit.

"Belleville Memos, who visit Whitby tomorrow, will conclude the regular schedule with five games at home and the same number away. They will visit all centres except Whitby again and will play hosts to all teams with the exception of the newly-named Dunlops.

"Satistics to date show the following club records: Whitby—at home—13-5-1; away 9-9-1. Cornwall—home—14-4-0; away—8-10-0. Belleville—home—11-6-2; away—7-8-2. Kingston—home—13-5-1; away—7-8-2. Brockville—home—10-7-0; away—4-12-1. Clinton—home—6-6-5; away—1-15-0.

"Those figures show why the chaff has been parted from the wheat. The second division teams have been woefully weak when travelling, with the Petes, having the unenviable distinction of losing 15 games in 16 starts. It has been a long time, indeed, since a representative of the Liftlock City staggered through such a disastrous campaign."

In such an uncertain group as this, we are of the opinion that limb-crawling is definitely out, despite the statistics. In a league where the first and fourth place teams can switch positions practically overnight, prediction is a waste of time.

However, we are inclined to hope that Mr. Rodden is right in his saga of see-ahead. If memory is correct the first and fourth, and second and third teams clash in the group semi-finals. That would bring Cornwall and Belleville and Whitby and Kingston into three-of-five combat.

Past performances probably are as wacky as predictions in judging the things to come. However, if they do mean anything the fact that the Memos have had the Indian sign on the Cornwall Colts this far and the consistent performance of the Whitby Dunlops, who hold a 2-2-1 record against the Goodyears, might lead to the belief that Whitby and Belleville will battle for the group title.

To quote Mr. Allen: "How About That?"

However, we do not share Mr. Rodden's opinion that Brockville and Clinton, plus the Petes have been "woefully weak," nor are the first two clubs out of the playoff running. There is the possibility of one or more of the first division clubs running into a lengthy slump, which would be extremely disastions at this stage of the game. If such turns out to be the case and either Brockville or Clinton, or both, turn on a surge of belated power, the top four picture could change. "We ain't out of the woods, yit, bub."

And if it is to be that Cornwall, Belleville, Kingston and Whitby grab the playoff berths, Clinton, Brockville and Peterborough are going to have something to "say" about the final positions of the title-questing quartet.

The last ten days of schedule play sees Clinton, Brockville and the Petes battling aplenty with the remaining four clubs. And you can bet your last shekel, if and when they are out of the playoff circle they will be no respecter of clubs down the home stretch. They have beaten the upper crust squads before and they can do it again, and at a time when a loss will be very unwelcome.

A report from Kingston has it that the Goodyears have enticed the veteran Joe Watt ("So What") out of the retirement mothballs. Joe used to be a tower of strength on the Goodies' defence and should help them in the stretch run. However, there is no truth in the rumor that the Goodyears have offered contracts to Bill Cook and Jim Sutherland.

THEY DOOD IT!

"Everyone was talkin' bout those Jones boys" up thar in Whitby last night when the upstarts from Belleville spoiled the newly-dubbed Whitby Dunlops' debut under new sponsorship by administering a 6-2 shellacking to the ex-Wrens.

The Memos were full value for their victory after spotting the Dunlops a goal in the first heat then roaring through for five markers in a speedy second chapter. Dipsy-doodling Davy Jones put the game on ice with two goals in 19 seconds after the Memos had grabbed a 3-2 lead. Hub Macey scored the only goal of the final stanza.

The Memos meet Cornwall in an important tussle here Friday night. The management announces that several special prizes will be given away to program holders besides the usual quota at this game.

Bruins Defeat Black Hawks To Tighten Hold on Fourth; Win or Get Out for Rangers

h By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The National Hockey League race is fast developing into a four-team affair, with New York Rangers heading for a win-or-get-out showdown.

There never was much doubt about the top three spots in the league. Everybody figured they were cornered by Montreal Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs.

But the fourth spot was a tossup between Boston Bruins and New York Rangers. Chicago Black Hawks were just along for the ride.

The Bruins took a little stronger hold on the fourth and last playoff position Wednesday night with a 3-2 victory over the Hawks. It gave them 48 points, nine ahead of the Rangers and 19 up on Chicago. Rangers already are behind the eight ball. They have played 51 games, two more than Bruins, and will have to start moving.

SANDFORD GETS WINNER

It was big Ed Sandford who scored the winning goal for the Bruins before only 3,180 Chicago customers. That was their 18th victory of the 1954-55 campaign. The other Boston goals were split between centre Cal Gardner and rightwinger Real Chevrefils. Bucky Hollingworth and Red Sullivan tallied for the Hawks, who suffered their 30th defeat of the season.

Two games are scheduled for tonight — the third-place Leafs against the league-leading Canadiens at Montreal and the Bruins against the second-place Wings at Detroit.

Leafs expect the Montrealers to be tough. In their last game, Canadiens were unceremoniously thrashed 7-1 by the Wings and Toronto coach King Clancy figures they'll try to exact vengeance on the Leafs.

Leafs Call Brian Cullen, Replaces Migay

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League said Wednesday they have called up centre Brian Cullen to replace Rudy Migay, injured Tuesday in a Gardens scrimmage.

Cullen has been playing regularly with Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League, Toronto farm club. Leaf officials said he would fly to Montreal today for Toronto's game against Montreal Canadiens.

The rookie centre played with Leafs at the start of the season but was sent down to Hornets for seasoning after he managed only two assists in eight games.

Migay was injured when he was hit by Larry Cahan's hard shot during a gruelling Leaf workout.

Leaf officials said he will likely miss at least a couple of games.

Seek Glory In International Sled Derby

By ART WILKES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—An expected 27 men and women drivers and their dog teams will mush through the 66-mile international sled - dog derby here next week. Stamina and speed will pay off in $4,200 cash and merchandise prizes.

Officials say trail conditions over the 33-mile course are perfect and two-day contest Feb. 9-10. The 62 inches of snow so far this winter is hard packed, favoring drivers using cross-breed dogs. Purebred huskies go faster in loose snow.

Heading the record entry list of Canadian and American drivers are two former winners, Emile Martel of Loretteville, Que., and Wilf Lepine of Quebec City.

Martel captured the derby last year and also in 1951, while Lepine was the victor in 1950 and 1952.

Among the other top drivers is Narcisse Dompierre of Quebec City who defeated Lepine last week in a 90-mile dog derby at Quebec City. Both Dompierre and Lepine almost missed this year's international.

WOULD SUE

Derby officials were urged by the Ottawa Humane Society not to accept entry applications from the two on the grounds of improper treatment of their dogs at last year's race. J. Wilfrid Dufresne, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Quebec West, informed officials the drivers would sue for damages if their applications were rejected. They were accepted after some consideration.

Humane society officials say they will have a number of officials along the route of the race watching for any improper treatment of dog teams.

The race includes a special women's division in which five women drivers have entered. They include Mrs. Bunty Dunlop of Burlington.

Ernie Brunet of nearby Pointe Gatineau, Que., a postman who sometimes uses his dogs to deliver mail, is back for another crack at the top prize. Brunet lost out to Martel last year by less than three minutes.

Colorful International Bonspiel Scheduled for Second Half Today

By GEORGE FRAJKOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—The 42nd annual Quebec International bonspiel moves into the second half today after the men curlers took time off for a banquet Wednesday night and let the women curl for the Paterson Trophy, awarded this year for the first time.

But before the men left the ice, Dr. C. G. (Ted) Teskey of Kitchener haad rolled up a perfect eight-point end against D. Bellam of Lennoxville, Que.

Teskey, playing in the Holt-Renfrew Trophy event, one of the lower competitions, pulled a neat takeout with his last rock in the seventh end to count the eight-ender and went on to win the game 15-5.

Some 300 curlers attended the banquet, an annual attraction at the bonspiel, and cheered lustily when carnival queen Estelle Cote, 19, and her six ladies-in-waiting were escorted through the ballroom by a Scottish piper.

Miss Cote was the curlers' candidate for carnival queen.

SEMI-FINALS PLAY

Today, semi-finals in the bonspiel's main events, the Chateau Frontenac, Omega and Francois Jobin Trophies, will be run off as well as quarter-finals of the Lieutenant-Governor's playoffs and early rounds of the other events.

Rinks reaching the quarter-finals of the three main events qualify for the Lieutenant-Governor's and grand aggregate awards—the two highest trophies.

Ira C. McEwen, Montreal Thistle undefeated after four rounds of play in the Omega and one round in the playoffs, is favored to go all the way. McEwen today meets Huntley Ferguson's Bathurst, N.B. rink.

Percy J. Power of Detroit, only American left in the running for the Lieutenant-Governor's got a bye into the quarter-finals today. He was knocked out of the Francois Jobin event 8-7 by Sam Wilson of Sudbury, in the quarter-finals Wednesday.

CANTON, N.Y. (AP)—Joe McLean's two goals paced St. Lawrence to a 3-2 hockey victory Wednesday night over Queen's University of Kingston.

The score was tied 2-2 going into the final period, when McLean got his second marker.

Memos Wallop Whitby 6-2; Climb Back To Second-Place Tie With Colts

Spot Leaders One in First, Two Quick Goals by D. Jones Clinches Verdict in Second

WHITBY (Special) — The Belleville Memos, still smarting under the 12-5 defeat handed them by the Whitby Wrens on their own ice, roared back with a vengeance here last night, handing the newly-named "Dunlops" a 6-2 setback, their first under the new sponsorship.

The Memos were full value for their victory. They spotted the Dunlops a goal in the first period and spearheaded by Davy and Peter Jones exploded for five markers in the second heat to a single return. The Memos scored the only goal of the third period.

Davy Jones scored two goals in 19 seconds for the Memos in the wide-open second period with brother Peter getting one. Ed Duncan, Ted DeGray and Hub Macey scored the rest. Connelly and Treen were the goal getters for the Dunlops.

The Dunlops claimed the Memos had a player on the ice whose name was not on the referees' report, but refrained from protesting because of former unsuccessful experience along these lines.

The victory hoisted the Memos into a second place tie with the Cornwall Colts, each with 44 points, two behind the group-leading Whitby Dunlops. The league's two high-scoring forwards Gagnon and Attersley failed to score a point.

The locals started off on the right foot as O'Connor scored the first goal of the game before the period was one minute old. He took a pass from McBeth and beat Barclay from close in. Both teams fought hard to get back into the scoring way of the game but neither could manage to get a rally going. There were several good hard body checks handed out on both sides but nobody was hurt on the play. The play was fast but did not have the usual sting that is common when the Memos and the locals play. There were five penalties handed out in the first frame with the Dunlops getting three of them.

FIGHTING MAD

In the second period the Memos came out fighting mad. They tied the score at the 1.01 mark as Pete Jones took a pass from Doran and beat Courtney. The Memos went ahead for the first time in the game as DeGray scored on a three way passing play with Muckler and Ed. Duncan getting assists on the play. Then the old reliable Alfie Treen scored the best goal of the game as he skated just inside the Belleville blue line and let go a blazing shot that caught the top corner of the net for a picture effort. This goal tied the score at a pair each. The Memos went ahead at the 8.20 mark to stay as Ed. Duncan scored on a scramble around the Whitby goal. Courtney had thrust aside several hard shots and the defence and forwards were very poor in clearing and never gave the kid any help with the result the Memos rapped one by him. The next one appeared a little easy as the Memos scored in the corner on a slow easy shot.

D. Jones was the trigger man on this goal. He must have received a burst of energy as he came storming right back just seconds later to score another and make the score read Memos 5, Whitby 2. That was the way the period ended. Six penalties in the middle frame being divided evenly this time.

In the final frame the locals came out with their back to the wall. Several of the fans figured that possibly the Dunlops would pull up their socks and come out flying. The Memos played it cagey and they checked like fiends. They allowed the locals about eight shots on goal in the final stanza. With less than a minute to go the Memos scored another. Not that the goal had any bearing on the game, the Memos just were not ready to call it quits. Both teams were playing a man short at the time of the goal.

The Dunlops have lost their last two starts and possibly have shaken their chills. They hope to be at full strength for the game on Saturday night. Air missed last night's game but hopes to be back in action come the week end. O'Connor missed the last part of the final frame as he hurt his ankle again. Jack Thaler was back in action and looked all right.

Line ups.

Belleville Memos: goal, Barclay; defence, Wilson, Doran; centre, P. Jones; wings, Macey, Dugan; alternates, DeGray, Goyer, D. Jones, MacDonald, Bettiol, Duncan, Hull, Muckler.

Whitby Dunlops: goal, Courtney; defence, Sinden, McBeth; centre, Attersley; wings, Gagnon, O'Connor; alternates, Samanski, Etcher, Copeland, Williams, Thaler, Trimm, Treen.

MONTREAL (CP). — A new wrinkle in public relations was to be introduced by the Canadiens hockey club management today when representatives of the press, radio and television will have dinner with the "opposition" in the National Hockey League.

Toronto Maple Leafs are the first guest team in the meet-the-opposition series inaugurated by the club. The Leafs meet Canadiens tonight, and the dinner is at 3 p.m. — usual eating time for hockey players on the day of a game.

The dinner is strictly for the visiting club. Montreal players will have to eat at home.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—For the first time we can recall since he took office, commissioner Ford Frick received a bad local press for the speech he delivered at the annual banquet of the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association here Sunday night.

His listeners got the impression Frick believed there was some sort of devious underground plot afoot to discredit the great summer sport and spread the thought that it is in danger of falling apart. He denied vehemently that the game is ailing and announced that a special week has been set aside in March to make the United States baseball-conscious.

DENY ANY PLOT

Critics of the commissioner's address pleaded ignorance, first, of any plot to undermine the public's confidence in the game. They thought, also, that in painting a glowing picture of baseball's past, present and future he left out something about the current precarious condition of the minor leagues, including triple A.

Finally, the somewhat affronted scribes suggested that anyone who tries to celebrate Baseball Week next month in this climate might get himself frozen to home plate. It could be that the previous commissioner, A. B. (Happy) Chandler, had the right idea when he struck to his simple and unassailable platform of loving baseball.

Record shattering Catcher Roy Campanella appears with the Brooklyn Dodgers in the baseball comedy "Roogie's Bump" now playing till Saturday at the Capitol Theatre.

Close Race For Playoffs In American Loop

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS,

Only three points separated the second, third and fourth place teams today in the tight battle for the Calder Cup playoffs in the America Hockey League.

Springfield, Hershey, Buffalo and Cleveland, all in the running for the playoffs, saw action Wednesday night. The Barons won their fourth straight defeating the Indians 7-3 and the Bisons downed the Providence Reds 5-3 to remain in a fourth place deadlock with 43 points apiece.

The Bears moved within two points of second place by trouncing the league-leading Pittsburgh Hornets 6-3. Springfield has 46 points and Hershey 44. The Hornets continued to lead the league with 52.

The Barons took a 2-0 lead in the first period and opened up a 5-1 gap in the second. Freddy Glover, the league's leading scorer, got one goal and teammate Eddie Olson added a goal and an assist.

Gordon Hannigan scored in the first period for the Hornets but two quick goals by Stan Parker gave the Bears the lead. In the second and third periods the Bears scored a pair of goals each.

Ed Slowinski scored a pair of third period goals to lead the Bisons to their third straight victory.

Wants East-West Soccer Final

VANCOUVER (CP)—Jock Hendry of Vancouver, president of the Football Association of Canada, wants to see an east-west soccer final this year.

Hendry said Wednesday night he will urge the FAC's annual meeting in Toronto July 9 to consider a Dominion cup final between British Columbia and the east. The winner of an Ontario-Quebec playoff would meet the west.

Big Four Governors Endorse Argos Stand—To a Degree

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts didn't get the cold-shoulder deal from the Big Four Football Union's board of governors.

The governors, endorsed, to a degree, the Argonaut stand on American imports in a proposed no-raiding pact with the National Football League.

The league governors Tuesday backed the Big Four executive in its move to prevent clubs signing any players under contract to NFL clubs. A telegram from the governors said:

"We endorse and recommend the efforts of the league executive to bring about harmonious co-operation in respect to players' contracts as between the National Football League and the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union."

There was one word missing that prevented the message from being an approval of the league decision. The word was "option."

UNDER OPTION

The other Big Four clubs wanted to make the pact retroactive, which would rob Argonauts of players they had signed or promised to sign.

Argos refused to go along with the retroactive idea because boys they had signed were only under option.

Cec McFaddin of Toronto, a member of the five-man board of governors, said Wednesday night "It was not an oversight that caused us to leave out the word 'option' in our recommendation. We left it out deliberately because we didn't feel it belonged in the message in which we conveyed our thinking to the union."

Did this mean the Argonaut stand was receiving endorsement?

"Well," said McFaddin, "we endorsed the league's efforts to bring about harmonious co-operation in regard to contracts. We didn't say anything about options. I think that tells the story."

Winnipeg Gets Badminton Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) —The Thomas Cup matches between the United States and Canada for the American zone badminton championship will be played in Winnipeg March 11-12.

The winner of the American zone title will meet the Asiatic zone champions in Malaya May 31. Further elimination matches between the American-Asian winner and the European zone winner will decide the team which will challenge the international champion Malayan team for the Thomas Trophy, emblematic of the world title.

Canada has named Daryl Thompson, Vancouver; Don Smythe, Toronto, and Gordon Simpson, Montreal, to its team. The others will be chosen after the Canadian national championship matches March 3-5.

'Golden Boy' Of Soccer Gets Tabbed

LONDON (CP)—Wilf Mannion, English soccer's "Golden Boy" who twice quit football and twice came back, has been fined five guineas by the Football Association.

The 36-year-old inside forward, who now plays for Hull City, drew the penalty for breaking an FA rule that bans players from taking part in Britain's football pools.

Mannion, during one of his "retirement" periods, had forecast match results in a Sunday newspaper. Technically, he could have been suspended permanently.

Mannion, who has played 26 times for England, still has one score to settle. It concerns his published statement that a first division club offered him a £3,000 "bribe" to sign.

The football league management committee, which governs professional soccer, wants to know the name of the team that made the illegal offer but Mannion refuses to say and repercussions are expected later in the season.

Bauer Signs With Yankees

NEW YORK (AP)—Hank Bauer, the muscle man who plays right field for New York Yankees, has signed his 1955 contract calling for a slight raise to about $24,000.

The figure is unofficial but that was the estimate around Yankee headquarters where the signing was announced Wednesday.

It was the seventh Yankee pact for the 32-year-old Bauer who has played in five world series.

Will Request Race Commission For Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Trotting Association voted unanimously Wednesday night to ask the Ontario government to appoint a separate commission to govern harness racing in Ontario.

At present all Ontario horse racing is governed by the Ontario Racing Commission.

The association, holding its annual meeting here, said it would be content to conduct its business under the chairmanship of magistrate S. Tupper Bigelow, chairman of the ORC, but added it believes there should be separate commissions for the different types of racing.

The CTA also voted to ask the Ontario government to approve "night harness-racing in Ontario in 1955." Similar resolutions have been passed by the CTA for the last five years.

The government also was asked to abolish the two-per-cent amusement tax on admission to one-day and two-day harness-racing meets.

Dr. C. H. Heslop of Milton was re-elected president of the CTA.

Directors include:

District 3—Bert H. Soper, Smiths Falls; R. J. Polk, Kingston; J. E. Thompson, South Mountain; Thomas Lennox, Spenceville; T.E. McCool, Pembroke; Dr. W. H. Perrin, Brockville.

District 4—Dr. Heslop; Dr. J.S. Ferguson, Chatham; Ken MacKinnon, Owen Sound; John Morrissey, Exeter.

Pitched Last Game, Says Reynolds, Yankee Star Retires from Baseball

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Allie Reynolds says he has pitched his last major league baseball game. The decision to retire after 12 years in the big time comes as a result of a back injury and his doctor's advice.

In eight years with New York Yankees, the big righthander established himself as one of baseball's pitching greats. His life-time record is 184 victories and 104 defeats. Reynolds, always the "money" hurler, won seven world series games for Yanks and dropped only two.

His doctor recently warned him against the possibility of further aggravating the injury and said major surgery might be required if his career continued.

Reynolds, 37, made the difficult decision reluctantly.

"Some may think you approach something like this with a detached attitude," commented Allie as he wrote off a career which saw him help Yankees to six world championships—five in succession.

"But when you get around to it the old, close ties are awfully hard to cut. From a standpoint of years I had lots of good pitching left; there's nothing wrong with the arm. I can throw as hard as ever."

In Glendale, Calif., Casey Stengel, Yankee manager, didn't know that Reynolds was quitting. "If it's true I can only say that he'll be mighty hard to replace."

Wings Invite Six-Foot Midget

HALIFAX (CP)—Dave Amadio, 15, still eligible for midget hockey, has accepted an offer from Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League to attend their training camp next fall.

His agreement hinges on his parents' consent.

Amadio stands six feet three inches and weighs 215 pounds.

Harringay Trims American Team

LONDON (AP) — The United States amateur ice hockey team, en route to the world championship tournament in Germany, took a 6-2 beating Wednesday night from the Harringay Racers of Britain's top hockey league.

It was the touring squad's second outing in Britain. The Americans defeated England in a practice game at Southampton Tuesday night, 8-2.

Most of the Harringay team are Canadians.

Marlies Edge Barrie 3-2; Galt, Canucks Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Barrie Flyers and Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks have lost all but a mathematical hope of making the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A playoffs this season.

The Flyers dropped a game 3-2 to Toronto Marlboros at Barrie Wednesday night and Kitchener tied 3-3 with Galt Black Hawks at Kitchener.

For Canucks, it was their 16th point of the season. They are last in the eight-club league, 12 points behind Flyers. To make the playoffs, Kitchener would have to win its next 10 games while either Hamilton Cubs or Galt, each with 36 points, would have to lose the rest of their games.

Barrie, with eight games left, is in seventh place, eight points behind Galt. Galt also has eight games left in the 48-game schedule.

Canucks blew a two-goal lead when the Black Hawks dominated the third period and tied the game with 69 seconds of regulation time remaining. The overtime was scoreless.

Lloyd Smith, John Sleaver and Hec Lalande scored for Black Hawks. Stan Baluik, Bob White and Ted McAskill counted for the Canucks.

Marlboros held the play in the first period, taking a 2-0 lead, and then added a third in the second.

Garry Collins, Garry Aldcorn and Bill Kennedy counted for Toronto. Bob Kane and Bob Barlow scored for Barrie.

BLAME SNOW

Frankie Laine for Long Time Has Baffled All Experts

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Frankie Laine departs today for Australia, where he'll probably add another chapter to his amazing success.

Laine has long baffled the experts. Even his own mother wouldn't term him handsome. He has a figure that resembles a barrel. He half-sings, half-shouts his songs in a voice that seems to some of his critics more suited for calling hogs. When he performs, he waves his arms like an aggravated windmill.

Yet Laine manages to draw a comfy $500.000 a year and charm enthusiastic followers from Down Under to Scotland. How does he do it?

I have always claimed that he is one of the last of the minstrels. He seems to be cut from the Al Jolson tradition. Though he lacks vocal finesse, he more than makes up for it with enthusiasm and a superb lyric sense.

And sincerity. He can put his heart into weird pieces like "Mule Train" and "Wild Goose" and make you believe them.

I chatted with Frankie before his Australia hop. He was finishing up another of his Columbia musicals, "Bring Your Smile Along." The singer took a sip from a bottle of beer and listened as producer Jonie Taps enthused about the films.

"We opened a little picture called 'Rainbow Round My Shoulder' in London after Frankie played the Palladium," Taps reported. "The film played for eight weeks to standing room only, an amazing record for any picture in London. We got back the negative cost in England alone. That shows you how popular he is overseas. I've had him for five picture, and I'd like to sign him for five more."

Frankie (born Frank Paul Lovecchio) discussed his contract with Columbia records, which is one of the most envied in the business. He gets paid at least $50,000 a year for 10 years, and his accrued royalties continue five years after that. He makes a minimum of 16 sides a year, plus an album. One of the stipulations of the deal is that he must go out and perform before the public at least 26 weeks a year.

His success in the record field has been phenomenal. Bing Crosby has sold more records in his long career. But no singer, not even young Eddie Fisher, has sold so many platters in such a short span. Laine has been a record star only since 1947, but his discs have been estimated at 25,000,000.

BANCROFT

Pontiacs Edge Tamworth 7-6

BANCROFT — Described by fans as one of the best games ever seen in the Bancroft area, Monday night's encounter between Bancroft Pontiacs and Tamworth resulted in a narrow victory for the home team. The score was 7-6.

Tamworth, a greatly improved team, led 3-0 at the end of the first period with some fine work from Gerrow who scored twice. The Pontiacs got under way in the second and pushed home four goals against the visitor's one.

A nice display of teamwork continued in the third frame and with some noteworthy play by Severin and Grenville Crosby the home team took the edge by one goal.

The line-up:

Bancroft — Young, Pilgrim, Bruce, Green, Stringer, Comrie, N. Brough, Ramsbottom, Shala, Severin, E. Brough, Lentz, Grenville Crosby, M. Crosby, Grover Crosby.

Tamworth — Green, McClean, Parry, Bendenor, J. Cox, Brady, Gerrow, Ohklie, Murphy, Rombough, R. Cox, Kennedy, McDonald, Boston, G. Brady, Fish.

DORIS DAY - FRANK SINATRA SEEN IN NEW FILM, TODAY

Doris Day and Frank Sinatra star in the Warner Bros. romantic drama-with-music, "Young At Heart", now at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre. Gig Young and Ethel Barrymore also star in the WarnerColor film which marks the first teaming of two of America's vocal favorites.

Doris Day, recently in "Lucky Me" and "Calamity Jane" from Warner Bros., is seen in her seventeenth motion picture for that studio. Miss Day was discovered for the screen by Warner Bros. and has risen to the top as evidenced in fan and motion picture exhibitor polls since her first appearance in "Romance On The High Seas."

Frank Sinatra, known primarily as a singer, is the current sensation of the entertainment world having won an Academy Award for his strong dramatic portrayal in "From Here To Eternity." In "Young At Heart" he combines both acting and singing in his role as a talented composer.

The supporting cast of "Young At Heart," an Arwin production, includes Dorothy Malone and Elizabeth Fraser. Gordon Douglas Douglas directed and Henry Blanke produced for Warner Bros.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Unless you have rip-vanwinkled, you must have heard somebody say there are signals in bridge. A jump bid shows help for a game. A new suit takeout asks partner for one more chance to bid.

Your partner in South has opened with a bid of one heart. His west opponent has passed. You hold the north hand shown here:

♠K 10 9 7 5 2
♥Q 6
♣K 5

What is your first response? It is a simple bid of one spade. This is a new suit takeout; signal that partner must give you one more chance to bid. Why not jump at once? I'll tell you why.

By instinct or rule you may come to the conclusion that your hand should help produce six tricks. An opening one bidder says he has at least five. You can thus see 11 tricks in your pair.

With 11 tricks a game is expected to make in something. So, it should influence you to advise your partner not to stop short of a game. To tell him so the signal is a jump in number.

However, opener may have six tricks instead of five. If so, he will see 12 tricks. This will indicate to him a possible slam. And your cards are not quick enough takers to assure a slam.

Opener should get some warning of this lack of quick takers. A combination signal is used to take care of such a situation. The jump is delayed unless responder has two sure tricks.

Instead, he makes a simple takeout to a new suit. This assures him another chance to bid. If partner has not by then made a jump, responder jumps on the second round to promise game.

Your hand does not contain two sure tricks. So, your first response should not be a jump. True, you are anxious to say your pair should reach a game. But wait until next round to say it.

An immediate jump response does not guarantee a slam. But if opener has another trick or two it sure makes him slambitious.

AT THE CAPITOL — Lovely Ruth Warrick portrays the hero's young mother in "Roogie's Bump", opening at the Capitol Theatre on Thursday. In this scene Ruth Warrick, Roy Campanella and Carl Erskine consider the problem of a small boy with a murderous pitching arm, keystone of John Bash's production. On the same program, it's dynamite, "Hell's Outpost", starring Rod Cameron, Joan Leslie and Chill Wills. Both hits are first showings.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars,

For Friday, February 4, 1955.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Big or little task, if it's on your schedule and deemed important to the fulfillment of project, give it the proper respect and evaluation. Many elements make the whole.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — May have to walk a narrow path to keep out of mischief today, but it won't be dull or difficult. Might be well, too, to finish incompleted matters on calendar rather than take on new ones.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — You may hit on something new that could be advantageous, perhaps really profitable if you hold ideas and emotions in sensible circle and don't be changeable. But seek fresh advantages.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — "A little with contentment is great gain" could be today's sensible slogan. Go forward, of course, but don't fret or worry if you can't advance all you had hoped you would.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — All days don't yield in measure as we like but no day is a loser if we don't waste it on pointless, purposeless things. Meaning? It is up to us today what we do with our time, energy, talents.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — Favored among other useful and essential activities and affairs are designing and decorating, authoring stories, plays, all artistic professions, teaching and study. Industry can gain.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Your indications simliar to Gemini now. Be ambitious but don't overreach and perhaps be disappointed because you do not gain all you want. It can be a good day for a good you.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Perhaps an unusual day in several ways. Things out of the ordinary favored if they have value or can be of some good to family, business, the community. Interesting news.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — A few obstacles or keen competition doesn't usually deter you bright, energetic folks so if one or both appear today, handle them intelligently and stay with your plans.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Your natural determination and perseverance (not overdone) can be great aids in all you do today. Don't grow impatient with seemingly small details; view it all as a whole picture.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — May have to be doubly alert and attentive to duties and extra tasks now but you will be rewarded in like measure, especially if you keep in good humor and help others along, too.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — No pulling in two directions, friend. Set your pattern early in day's schedule and do your best to stick to it unless urgent deviations crop up. You may have some change. Faith!

You Born Today: Brainy, quick of thought, yet meditative. Often creative and ingenious but do not follow through your good ideas and intentions and reap the fine results you should. Be constantly on the watch to avoid unwholesome associates, they could have bad effect upon you and your success. Bright, intelligent and high-principled companions will be a boon. You have splendid talents, general capability and the patience and perseverance to make them very much worth while. Pray daily for God's help. Birthdate: Georg Brandes, Danish critic; Blessed Eymard, French apostle; Mark Hopkins, educator, College pres.

BOY DROWNED

WOODBRIDGE (CP) — Three-year-old Ricky Elliott was drowned Tuesday when he plunged through ice on a creek at the rear of his home in this village near Toronto. Two playmates, Stephen Guy, 6, and his brother, Ricky, 4, were pulled from the water by an unidentified man after they tried to help their friend.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop lit a cigar with a band on it after dinner, saying to ma, I've been saving this cigar that old Personby gave me at the party last night. I knew anybody with all his money must smoke the choicest Havannas, he said.

And he leened back and blew out a happy puff, saying, Ah, this is the life. I think I'll smoke right through the band, he said.

My, there's no more contented picture than a man and a cigar, ma said, and pop said, And what a cigar. I dont envy old Personby his money. If I just had access to his cigars I'd be quite sattisfied he said.

And he let some more smoke come out slow, and ma said, By the way, now that I think of it, I heard Mr. Personby bragging about his cigars to Mr. Dibbles.

Really? Does he have them especially imported? pop said, and ma said, I dont know about that, but all he has to pay for them is 3 for 25 cents. That's what he was boasting about. I've always heard both the Personby's are famous for being tite with their money.

For Peet sake, pop said, and he took 2 more short puffs, saying, I thought I detected something funny.

Oh dear, William, I shouldn't of told you, I should of left you to injoy the mental suggestion, ma said, and pop said, Mental nuthing, 2 more puffs and I'd of been certain this cigar is one of those fakes with Havanna in the ferst intch and cabbidge in the rest of it. Now I dont envy him anything, and I must say that's rather a relief. My dear, you've done me a big favor, the old miser, he said.

And he put the cigar in the ash tray with a diskusted expression and lit one of his own looking glad of the change.

SAVED SECOND TIME

ANSONVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Calvert township records were nearly lost for the second time in three years when an oil furnace cracked and spread blazing fuel across the floor of the municipal offices Tuesday. Employees quelled the blaze with fire extinguishers. Fire destroyed a former town hall in March, 1952.

Trent Valley Hockey League

The RCAF Flyers outscored the Belleville Juniors in the first and third periods last night and walked off with a well-earned 6-4 decision at the Belleville Memorial Arena in a Southern-section TVL game. The first half of the scheduled twin bill, the game between the Point Anne Cementmen and the Picton McFarland Royals was cancelled.

The Flyers showed more finesse around the net as they took a 2-1 lead in the initial session, both teams fired a pair in the middle frame while the visitors carried the play in the third period to again outscore the Juniors 2-1.

Lum Carson's boys got off to a good start in the first period, skating fast and displaying a good passing attack as they carried the play for the first five minutes. The Buskard-Bryant-Atkins line was hustling hard and came up with the first goal of the game at 2.24, Bryant clearing to Atkins, who relayed a pass to Buskard with the young forward going in alone on Ogden before drilling the disc home.

Francis turned the tide at 6.02 when he sank a blueline shot that Ashley looked rather weak on and from then on the Flyers pressed hard. They peppered shot after shot at the Juniors' custodian around the nine minute mark and Branch finally poked one home from Blanchard and Tardiff on a ganging attack, to give the visitors a 2-1 edge at the period's end. Cowick drew the lone penalty of the period for tripping at 15.36, but the Belleville crew could not capitalize on their advantage.

Belleville knotted the count at the 3.00 minute mark of the sandwich session when Buskard sank his second goal of the game, Atkins and Bryant again drawing helpers. Childerhouse of the Flyers, was off for holding at the time of the goal. Both teams were a man short when Garrison made it 3-2 in favor of the Juniors at 9.02, blasting a twenty-footer home after intercepting Francis' attempted clearing pass in the visitors' end.

Stewart notched the Flyers' third goal at 12.10 on a rather queer play. He took Bowman's pass at the Belleville blueline, backhanded a high one netward that was screened, Ashley ducked and the rubber fell into the twine behind him. The airforce crew played two men short at 16.22 for 49 seconds with Tardiff and Stewart drawing minors in quick succession, but weathered the storm.

The clock read 18.51 when the determined Flyers climbed back into the lead, Francis flipping one home from close in with Bowman setting up the play. The period ended with the visitors holding a narrow 4-3 lead.

The RCAF sextet stretched their lead to 5-3 at 4.24 of the final period on a ganging play, Blanchard backhanding a short shot by Ashley from directly in front after taking Branch's passout from the corner.

Play became rougher as the juniors fought hard to get back in the game but could not get organized. Murray and Branch went off together at 9.10 and Baker was thumbed for tripping a minute later. "Rolly" Rochon upped the score to 6-3 before they returned, banging Francis' rebound into the twine and Buskard retaliated by firing his third marker of the game at 18.55, a wasted effort.

The teams:

RCAF: Ogden, Cowick, Playford, Francis, Bowman, Rochon, Tardiff, Blanchard, Racicot, St. Pierre, Dickson, Adams, Stewart, Branch, Childerhouse.

Belleville Juniors: Ashley, Stoliker, Atkins, St. Denis, Brooks, McKenna, Buskard, Casey, Bryant, Fox, Vesterfelt, Baker, Murray, Garrison.

The referees: Barrett and Carson.

Nervous, Irritable, Felt Exhausted, Couldn't Sleep

Also Suffered with Stomach Disorders, Backache, Headaches and Rheumatic Pains. "Got Grand Relief Since Taking Syntona," she says.

Whether you are 18 or 80 you may at any time begin to feel rundown, listless, tired-out due to temporary and troublesome disorders of the stomach, liver or bowels. Digestion is impaired, appetite lost and backache, headaches and rheumatic pains may add to your discomfort. In many instances Syntona Herbal Compound has proved invaluable to thousands of people.

A Recent Example

After using a short treatment of Syntona, Mrs. E. McCrindle, 18 Wilson Avenue, London, Ontario, said in a recent report:

"I felt tired and rundown for a long time and many mornings when I got out of bed I felt as if I had never slept at all. My nerves were all on edge. I was extremely irritable and often got throbbing headaches. I had backache and pains in legs and joints. I never felt like eating because food gave me gas, indigestion and a heavy, bloated feeling for hours afterwards.

"But, this is all relieved since I've been taking Syntona and it is remarkable what this medicine has done for me. I feel ever so much better, can eat all my meals without trouble afterwards, my nerves are calmed down so I am getting restful sleep, the aches and pains are relieved and I don't feel exhausted and irritable as I did before. I don't have that awful backache now and I am just like a different person."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville by Dolan The Druggist.

Britain Now Pins Hopes for Peace On Asian Leaders

Nehru Believes 'Unwritten' Cease-Fire Could Be Set Up

LONDON (AP)—The British government today wrote off all immediate chances of a United Nations cease-fire in the Formosa strait.

Instead, it turned to Asian leaders at the world-wide Commonwealth meeting here in the hope of finding a solution to the explosive situation and averting a major shooting war in the Far East.

British hopes rest mainly on India's neutralist Prime Minister Nehru, who has been in constant touch with the Chinese Communist government and has been a chief negotiator between East and West in the past.

Churchill scheduled a cabinet meeting for this afternoon and the Commonwealth prime ministers began a series of urgent consultations on new ways to bring a quick end to the shooting between Red China and Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists.

(Alan Harvey of The Canadian Press in London reported that hopes "are not high that any concrete Commonwealth proposal will emerge" from the Commonwealth meetings. He said there was a tendency among some of the delegations to feel that a stalemate has been reached.)

STUDY OTHER PLANS

Responsible informants said Nehru, Churchill and the other Commonwealth premiers are studying these alternate cease-fire moves:

A personal approach by Nehru to the Chinese Reds in an effort to arrange an "unwritten" cease-fire.

Acceptance of an Indonesian proposal for mediation in the Formosa dispute by the Colombo powers. Burmese Premier U Nu already has begun an independent effort through diplomatic channels to arrange a cease-fire.

Soldier Told 'Grow a Beard That's an Order'

WERL, Germany (AP) — The sergeant told Cpl. Joseph Casavant to grow a beard. "That's an order," the sergeant said.

Casavant and his brother, Aime, are twins. Both are members of the Royal 22nd Canadian Infantry Regiment stationed here.

They look so much alike that the sergeant can't tell them apart.

When Joe had duty and wanted to go out on a pass he got Aime to substitute for him, and vice versa. Nobody was wiser until the other day when the twins got caught.

That's when the sergeant told Joseph to grow a beard.

The Casavants are from Ville St. Michel, near Montreal.

Chiang Studying Request by U.S. He Quit Tachens

By FRED HAMPSON

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — Nationalist China's President Chiang Kai-shek was reported today to be considering a United States request that he evacuate his troops from the Red-threatened Tachen islands, 200 miles north of Formosa.

Responsible government spokesmen said flatly tonight there was no truth in reports that Chiang had rejected the request. They said no statement on the subject has yet been made by Chiang.

The request is believed to have been transmitted to Chiang by U.S. Ambassador Karl L. Rankin in a 75-minute conference Wednesday. The U.S. is reported to have taken the stand that its 7th Fleet, which is standing by to help in the evacuation, can not be held in a state of readiness indefinitely.

There was no confirmation here of rumors that Chiang would reply to the U.S. request today.

Red China's bristling rejection of a United Nations invitation to join in cease-fire talks signals trouble, and there is increasing talk at middle Nationalist levels of fighting for the Tachens instead of abandoning them to the Reds.

REDS FIRED BACK

Nationalist planes pounded the Reds hard Thursday night, and the Communists replied today with a minor artillery barrage on Quemoy island.

Chiang's planes ranged the east China sea round the tense area, bombing and shooting up Chinese Communist shipping and the newly-won Red base of Yikiangshan island.

Official reports said the bombers destroyed two vessels near Nantien island, 30 miles north of the Tachens, scored hits on two more about 11 miles northeast of the Tachens and bombed nearby Yikiangshan with excellent results.

Another small transport landed today at the north coast port of Keelung with refugees from devastated lower Tachen. Aboard were 111 sick and wounded Nationalist soldiers, 67 prisoners from Tachen jails and six civilians.

BID FOR TRADE

TORONTO (CP)—The first shipment of grapefruit to Toronto from Palestine since before the Second World War is underselling imported United States grapefruit. Produce dealers say the lower price is an endeavor by the Israel government to increase trade with Canada.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: The large high pressure area which brought eastern Canada its coldest temperatures of the winter is moving slowly southeastward across the province today. By Saturday morning milder temperatures will cover the province. As the high pressure area weakens and moves southeastward snow from a storm centred in eastern Texas Friday morning will move into southwestern Ontario Saturday morning and advance across southern Ontario to the Quebec border by late evening.

Princess Wears New Hair Style On Trinidad Visit

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (Reuters) — Princess Margaret sprang a fashion surprise at a state banquet here Thursday night with a new hair style, similar to one worn by Napoleon's Empress Josephine.

It was created by her personal hairdresser, Rene, who is accompanying the Princess on her month's tour of the British West Indies. Though no official description of the style was given, women guests at the banquet in Government House described it as resembling that worn in the early 1t9h-century French court.

Rene said it was "gay to match her personality." It was swept up at the back to give a touch of sophistication and support the diamond tiara she was wearing.

The Princess came down the staircase from her suite wearing a white silk organza evening gown whose skirt cascaded in tiers of filmy material from the low hipline. The front was embroidered with small white satin flowers, leaves and diamonds. In addition to her tiara, she wore a diamond necklace.

The banquet climaxed a wildly happy day in which the Princess drove through the streets and met thousands of the colony's children at a rally.

Today another children's rally was scheduled, and after the rally she was due to open a new hospital and visit the children's wards.

GENEVA-TYPE PARLEY POSSIBLE ON FORMOSA ISSUE

UN Diplomats Confer But Can Now Do Little

By MAX HARRISON

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—United Nations diplomats consulted today on the next step in their quest for peace in the Formosa strait, but generally agreed that the UN can do little in the face of Red China's boycott of the proposed security council ceasefire talks.

Three courses appear to be open:

1. Make another effort to persuade Premier Chou En-lai to send a representative here.

2. Debate the Formosan problem without the participation of the Chinese Communists.

3. Try to arrange a conference outside the UN—like the Indochina parley in Geneva last spring—at which the whole China problem could be discussed. This appears the likeliest prospect.

In view of Chou's declaration that he will not send a representative to the UN unless the security council ousts Nationalist China and gives Peiping that seat, many delegates see no chance for compromise here. The council is expected to "stick to its previous firm refusals to replace Chiang Kai - shek's representative, and Chou also is not expected to back down.

MAY BE A "BLUFF"

Some United States leaders in Washington are more optimistic. Chairman Walter George (Dem. Ga.) of the Senate foreign relations committee said Chou's reply "may be a propaganda bluff." Senator H. Alexander Smith (Rep. N.J.), the senior Republican on the foreign relations Far Eastern sub-committee, said the Red Chinese are "manoeuvring for position" and their answer was not "final"

A Washington State department statement expressed "regret" at Red China's "further flouting of the United Nations."

The Red Chinese premier rejected the council's invitation in a long cable Thursday to secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold. He said that even if the council ousted Nationalist China he would send a representative only to discuss the Soviet charges of U.S. aggression against China, not to debate New Zealand's cease-fire proposal for which he was invited.

Canadian Pacific Obtains Licence For Arctic Route

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's first trans-Arctic air service to Europe is nearing final authorization.

Canadian Pacific Airlines now needs only the formality of a permit from The Netherlands government—which is assured—after getting a Canadian licence to fly passengers and air express between Vancouver and Amsterdam.

Following earlier cabinet approval, the air transport board Thursday gave CPA a licence for the 4,825-mile run over the upper curve of the world that will cut 1,000 miles off present flying distance between the cities and hook into CPA's trans-Pacific run.

The forecast early May start of the service now hinges largely on CPA's operational progress in getting set for the world's second commercial venture in transcontinental flying inside the Arctic circle.

The first now is in regular operation. It is run by Scandinavian Airlines between Los Angeles and Copenhagen with a refuelling stop —but without taking on passengers or cargo—at Winnipeg.

Frost Still on More Than Pumpkins In Southern Ontario's Banana Belt

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Southern Ontario's banana belt, where the weather is supposed to be comparatively mild all year round, had another freezing day today.

The high in the Toronto area was predicted as 15 above zero after an overnight low of zero.

Cold weather held sway from the Atlantic ocean to the prairies.

White River, one of Ontario's coldest spots, had a low of 28 below Thursday, but its high was 15, two more than Toronto. Ottawa had a high of 10 and a low of 18 below.

Milder weather was forecast for today. The temperature will rise to 13 above in Ottawa. Montreal will go to 15 above and Quebec 10 above.

British Columbia had above-freezing temperatures Thursday and it was expected to stay that way today.

Reds Own Off-Shore Isles But Should Not Seize Them
--Eden

LONDON (AP) —Foreign Secretary Eden today warned Red China that any attempt to seize such Nationalist held-islands as Quemoy or the Tachens and Matsu chains by force would endanger world peace and security.

Eden said in a written reply to a question by the former Labor defence minister, Emanuel Shinwell, that the off-shore islands "undoubtedly form part of the territory of the people's republic of (Communist) China."

But the foreign secretary added: "Any attempt by the government of the people's republic of China, however, to assert its authority over these islands by force, would, in the circumstances peculiar to the case, give rise to a situation endangering peace and security which is properly a matter of international concern."

Eden reiterated the Churchill government's position that the legal ownership of Chiang Kai-shek's main bases, the American-protected Formosa-Pescadores group, remains to be decided.

TV and Radio Technicians Vote for Strike on Feb. 16

MONTREAL (CP) — The way has been cleared for a strike that could conceivably tie up the CBC's cross-country network of radio and television stations by mid-February.

Technicians for the government-owned CBC voted Thursday to walk out if a "satisfactory agreement" on their wage demands can not be reached by Feb. 16.

They are members of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (CIO-CCL), which includes the men behind the scenes who operate the TV cameras and controls, maintenance men, master control operators and others.

Of some 775 eligible union members in Canada, 742 voted at 21 centres across the country, union headquarters here announced.

In the two-part ballot, 674 members, or 87 per cent of those eligible, voted to reject a conciliation board report denying their wage-increase demands, and 647 gave the union negotiating committee power to call a strike if negotiations fall through.

Not all members voted on both questions, union officials said.

The CBC has announced it is preparing "for any eventuality brought about by the NABET action."

Union officials say a strike would seriously affect the corporation's operations. If the technicians were to strike, it would presumably mean radio and TV station operations would be in the hands of department executives and groups not affected by the walkout—office workers, newsroom employees, announcers and actors.

A union official said here Thursday night he has no idea on what basis post-conciliation talks could be started. There have been reports that corporation-union meeting will be held next Tuesday in Ottawa, but union officials here declined to confirm this.

International representative Tim O'Sullivan said the union is "willing as always in an attempt to reach a settlement."

The main union demand is that technicians' wages — currently starting at $44.25 weekly with a top of $96.40—be increased to $53.77 for apprentices with a maximum of $161.54.

Toronto police Thursday picked up two men allegedly for making off with the CBC's plans for emergency operations.

The plans were taken from the Toronto hotel room of a CBC executive from Lachine, Que. The two men arrested were not corporation employees, police said.

Consumer Price Index Down Fifth of Point in December

OTTAWA (CP) — Food prices slipped again during December, reducing the consumer price index by another one-fifth of a point to 116.4 from 116.6.

It was the second consecutive decline in the cost-of-living yardstick and the second consecutive drop of one-fifth of a point. The index is based on 1949 prices equalling 100.

In December it was almost a straight tussle between declining food prices and rising costs for rents and home-ownership costs. Foods won the round to push the index down.

Prices were lower for processed pork products, oranges, bananas, eggs and lettuce, counter-balancing rises for tea, beef and most fresh vegetables.

Rents and home-ownership costs continued their steady rise to new heights, the bureau of statistics reported today.

Among other segments of living costs, some slight increases were noted in household supplies and services but these were balanced by decreases in a few items of floor coverings, furniture and textiles.

Price rises in women's wear were balanced by declines in men's wear. There also were some narrow advances in drugs and personal care items but these were insufficient to make any impact on the index or sub-indices.

Voluptua Ends Police Search

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Voluptua, a six-foot blonde from Brooklyn with a flair for getting herself talked about, ended a police search Thursday by calling officers and informing them she had spent the night with a friend.

The statuesque showgirl, nee Gloria Pall, didn't say where she was calling from, but said she was safe and would "be right in to pick up the car" she left parked on Pacific Coast highway Wednesday night.

"I was upset," she said. Voluptua was fired two days ago from her television program because of complaints she was too sexy.

Miss Pall was not too deflated by the loss of her job of introducing old movies. She bounced into a part of another TV show Wednesday.

Quebec Plans No New Taxes

QUEBEC (CP) —Quebec isn't levying any new taxes for 1955-56, but it expects to boost its take on the much-debated provincial income tax to $27,000,000.

In his annual budget speech Finance Minister Gagnon announced no tax changes but said the government is budgeting for a record $351,857,200 revenue in the coming year.

Yield of the Quebec income tax, estimated now to reach $25,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year this March 31 is expected to be buoyant, going up by a further $2,000,000. But most of the money to be paid over by Quebecers in 1955 will be refunded by the federal government under its new 10-per-cent deduction plan announced earlier this month by Prime Minister St. Laurent.

LIBERALS, PC's DEFEAT MOTION OF S.C. PARTY

Group Wins Support Of CCF Members

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal and Progressive Conservative members of the Commons have voted together to defeat a Social Credit motion favoring "fundamental economic and financial measures" to ensure prosperity.

The motion, one of non-confidence in the government, was defeated Thursday night by a vote of 158 to 35.

The Social Credit group won support of CCF members and Paul Gagnon (Ind. — Chicoutimi) for their motion. It said the government has "failed to take or to recommend the necessary fundamental economic and financial measures to place Canadian producers and workers on a sound and prosperous basis, and to insure our economy against recurring recessions."

JUST A MOCKERY

Hon. Earl Rowe, acting opposition leader, said his group did not vote for the Social Credit motion because it was only an anaemic mockery of his own party's non-confidence motion.

In the debate Thursday, CCF leader Coldwell said the United Nations should neutralize the Chinese Nationalist island stronghold of Formosa. Such action would end the rule of Nationalist leader Chiang Kai-shek.

The United States Far East policy is dangerous and wrong, Mr. Coldwell said. He urged that Canada give diplomatic recognition to the Communist Chinese government as the price of peace.

In a speech dealing entirely with the Far East situation, the CCF leader said difficulties there which threaten peace are due largely to "the fact that we have failed to recognize that there is a new government in China."

Mr. Coldwell said he supports the Formosa policy statements made by External Affairs Minister Pearson before he left last Friday for the Commonwealth prime ministers conference in London.

Mr. Pearson said then that Nationalist forces on the small Chinese off-shore islands should be withdrawn, that Formosa be neutralized and that international negotiation settle the final disposition of the island with regard to the wishes of the Formosans. He said it would be "unutterable folly" to allow the off-shore islands to become the scene or occasion of a major conflict.

Mr. Coldwell said Canada should make it crystal clear that if war develops as a result of U.S. policy "we are not responsible in any way for the onset of that war or the consequences of that war."

Acting External Affairs Minister Martin, who spoke briefly following Mr. Coldwell, said he hopes the UN security council will not lose control of the Formosa situation.

Recluse Found Huddled In Cold Room

TORONTO (CP)—A 92-year-old recluse, huddled in a chair and covered with rags and papers, was found dying in her home Thursday, police said today.

Miss Mary Simpson, sole survivor of a once-prominent Toronto family, was dead on arrival at hospital, police said.

Assistant coroner Dr. Julian Louden said death was due to bronchial pneumonia. But he added that she was undernourished and not properly looked after.

Police said a purse containing $204 was found near the dying woman.

In Freezing Cold Flames Rout 90 From 11 Homes

Two Fires Occur in West And North-Central Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — An estimated 90 persons were forced into sub-zero weather early today in two fires which damaged 11 houses altogether on west-central Adelaide street and north-central Frichot street.

Twenty - five persons were left homeless in the Frichot street blaze. They were cared for temporarily by the Salvation Army.

Firemen estimated that between 60 and 70 persons were forced out by flames and smoke on Adelaide street. Seven houses were damaged. Three of them were made uninhabitable, but the Salvation Army reported that all persons rendered homeless were cared for by relatives and friends.

SAVES OTHERS

Helen Mentha, 11, was credited with saving the lives of her two brothers and a sister in the Adelaide street fire. Helen guided brothers Emilien, 9, and Paul, 7, and sister Emilia, 8, through heavy smoke to safety.

Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mentha, and three couples and their children escaped into the freezing weather.

Firemen blamed overheated stove pipes for the blaze.

In the Frichot street fire, Albert Adams, 7, and Richard Adams, 10, awoke to find their bedclothes on fire. They gave an alarm which aroused occupants of eight houses in the neighborhood.

The 25 persons made homeless lost most of their belongings except what clothes they could grab as they fled.

CAUSE THE SAME

The narrow street and frozen equipment made fire fighting difficult and a second alarm was put in.

Police turned the local police station guardroom into an emergency shelter.

The fire, which started in an upstairs bedroom, is also believed to have been caused by overheated stove pipes, firemen said.

5 Ships Call In Atlantic For Assistance

THE HAGUE (Reuters) — Five vessels called for assistance in the Atlantic Thursday night, including a Costa Rican tanker which reported "many men terribly injured" in a boiler explosion.

The tanker Darnel, 7,053 tons, said she was out of control about 200 miles off the coast of Spain. A United States Air Force B-17 left the Azores this morning in an attempt to locate the Darnel and parachute medical supplies to her. Two RAF planes also were sent to the scene with medical supplies.

At least 28 men are believed to be aboard the cracked 7,718-ton Panamanian freighter Liberator whose skipper radioed: "Crack worsening. Opening dangerously. We cannot continue voyage without escort or assistance."

The Monseigneur Duparc, a 140-ton French ship, radioed that she required immediate tug assistance. She had steering trouble about 20 miles off the Finisterre area of France.

A radio message from an American lighter was also picked up, saying she was adrift in the mouth of the French river Gironde. All ships in her vicinity were asked to render assistance if possible.

The 1,749-ton Norwegian ship Tautra also radioed for help while drifting about 10 miles off La Rochelle, France, in the Bay of Biscay.

Blasts Blundering Bureaucrats Who Built Soo Locks So Far from Chicago

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Sault Ste. Marie locks may be all right in their way, the biggest in the world and all that, but some folks think they're in an awfully out-of-the-way place.

The Michigan Senate sat in bewildered silence when it heard a letter read from a Chicago lady to state highway commissioner Charles M. Ziegler. The letter said:

"Last summer my husband and I decided to take a trip in Michigan to see the Soo locks. After driving several hundred miles and arriving at Mackinaw City we learned that there was an hour's ride on the boat and another hundred miles by auto.

"In disgust we turned around and drove back to Chicago.

"Can you tell me why the locks were built so far away from metropolitan cities, thereby depriving a great many people of this wonderful sight?"

Mau Mau Cell Handled Food Of Legislators

NAIROBI (AP) — A Mau Mau terrorist cell has been unearthed in the Kenya Parliament building, where members were in a position to poison the entire legislature, police announced today.

Three Kikuyu tribesmen, waiters in the Parliament building, have been detained. For weeks they have been handling the food served to members and staff of the legislature.

Will Secure Facts

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A special city council committee investigating the city-management type of government will visit Sarnia Feb. 14, to discuss the success that type of government there.

The four-man committee, led by controller Mrs. Georgina Montrose, will later visit other Ontario and Michigan cities using the city-management type of municipal government, and then report to city council.

NEWSPAPERS GAIN AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Total daily newspaper circulation in the United States for the first time in history went over 55,000,000 last year, Editor and Publisher reports. The trade magazine says as of Sept. 30, 1954, the average net paid circulation of 1,765 morning and evening newspapers in the country was 55,072,480, a gain of 600.194, or 1.1 per cent over 1953.

SENIOR CITIZENS HOLD MONTHLY GATHERING

At the regular monthly meeting of the Senior Citizens of Belleville Club held in the Kiwanis Centre the attendance was smaller, owing to the inclement weather, but enthusiasm was as high as usual in the euchre tournament, and the spoons given by the club were won by Mrs. Crozier, a new member, and Mr. Springer for the highest scores.

Entertainment was provided by Miss C. Maloney, of the O.S.D., who gave two monologues, and they were well received. Mr. Field introduced Miss Maloney to the gathering and also thanked her.

Chairman L. Field reported for the executive, and it was agreed that the meetings in future will start at 7.30 o'clock, for an earlier close.

Refreshments were served under the convenership of Mrs. M. Drummond, and Mrs. L. Moult, the secretary, received seven into membership.

Board Without Services Of Medical Officer

With Dr. A. M. Breuls having left the city to assume his new position as assistant medical officer of health in Scarboro township, the local board of health is without the services of a medical officer of health.

The board has advertised for a new M.O.H. but no action either by the board or by city council has been taken regarding a new appointment. Procedure in all probability would be for a recommendation to come from the board of health with council passing the necessary by-law covering the appointment.

"At the moment we are getting on without the services of a medical officer of health," noted Harold Varcoe, chairman of the board of health. "We did secure a temporary doctor to take charge of the regular clinics this week in Belleville and in Picton.

Mr. Varcoe said it was council's prerogative to make the new appointment. To date, however, the matter has not been discussed in council.

Five Test Holes Dug Below C.P.R. Bridge

With Old Jack Frost continuing to give the Moira River the deep freeze treatment and building up a solid field of ice that may cause trouble during the spring break-up, a few of the local citizenry today were heard pondering the possibilities of a flood come early March.

City Engineer Charles Mott noted that there is 18 inches of ice in the river mouth just below the C.P.R. bridge, but despite the thickness of ice the current was found to be moving fairly well. There was, however, some evidence of frazil ice. Five test holes were dug below the C.P.R. bridge.

On the whole the city engineer said things looked "pretty good" although it was a bit too early to form any opinion as to the possibility of a flood this spring. Despite the continued stretch of zero weather the river is running open from the upper bridge to the Cannifton dam. It is in this stretch of open water that the frazil ice forms and is swept downstream under the ice in the lower stretches of the river.

"It all depends on the weather around the first of March," the engineer went on. "Some mild weather right now would help a great deal. Mild weather would clear out the frazil ice and would get the current moving normally."

Council Burning Midnight Oil To Set Tax Rate

Members of city council are burning the midnight oil this week as they thresh out the various committee budgets in preparation for striking the 1955 tax rate.

Tuesday evening councillors sat to near midnight at a special budget meeting and again Thursday night it was close to midnight before the city fathers called it a day, still with their budget business not completed.

So Saturday morning council will go back at it again, the meeting being called for ten o'clock. Council will discuss budget business for four hours, then adjourn to attend the funeral of ex-Ald. Urias "Sandy" Lummiss.

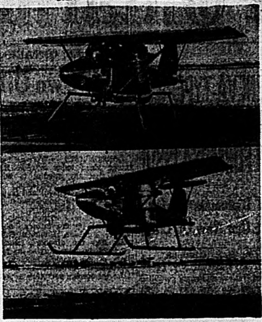
CBC Being Sued For Use of Movie

OTTAWA (CP) —The CBC is being sued for $20,000 on grounds that it infringed a Hollywood film producer's rights to a French-produced motion picture on the life of Christ.

Sam Waagenaar, president of Circle Film Enterprises, told the Exchequer Court Thursday that after the CBC televised the film in Toronto and Montreal in April, 1953, English-language movie theatres in Canada refused to run it. He said theatres in Canada and the United States do not want to run films that have been screened by television stations.

Mr. Waagenaar said he has legal North American rights to the film, entitled Golgotha. The CBC, by infringing his rights, had caused him a sharp loss in revenue.

CAN TAKE OFF STRAIGHT UP



These are photographs of the experimental VTOL (vertical take-off and landing) plane built by the Bell Aircraft Corporation — the first vertical-rising airplane flown with jet power. Unlike the "tail-sitter" type of VTOL craft, the creation takes off in the orthodox horizontal position. Power is supplied by two turbojet engines that flank the fuselage. The jets drive the craft straight up and then the engines can be rotated to a horizontal position to supply the forward power like the conventional aircraft. Test Pilot David G. Howe is rotating the engines in the top photo in a demonstration near Buffalo, N.Y., before the take-off. In bottom photo the plane is rising, driven upward by the thrust of the jet engines, each delivering about 1,000 pounds. During this test the engines were not rotated while the craft was in flight, but forward motion was achieved by dipping the nose of the craft to bring the engines into a semi-horizontal position. The test plane is 21 feet long and has a wing span of 26 feet. It weighs about 2,000 pounds and carries only the pilot. (Central Press Canadian).

BCI Drama Club Praised For Fine Presentation

By HARRY MULHALL

With "More than Meets the Eye" by Fred Carmichael, the Belleville Collegiate Drama Club last night presented its major production of the year at the collegiate auditorium.

None of the cast, all students, was over eighteen. The audience could not have been over 300 — a situation which does not make for comfort on the part of the players. Despite this, however, the cast competently carried the play through its three acts.

"More than Meets the Eye" is a situational farce, the kind of thing that perennial lady "Charley's Aunt" keeps alive in this part of the world. However, if carried properly, a good farce can be unequalled theatre entertainment.

Once into the rhythm of the play last night's cast went ahead with scarcely a hitch — a notable achievement, especially on a first night. Most appreciated by the audience was Paula Freeman in the female comedy lead as the maid in the household of an author who, while aspiring to philosophical writing supports his family by churning out children's stories under the penname of a lovable old grandmother.

As the author, Jack McDonald had his best moments, when fame, fortune and flash cameras descend on grandmother, forcing him to masquerade as the beloved old lady.

CAST MEMBERS RELAXED

The most relaxed member of the cast was young Earla Wilson who played the author's wife with confident aplomb. Miss Wilson might do well to carry her interest in theatre a little further afield in the city — say into the theatre guild.

Robert Ireland turned in a capable portrayal of an ulcery publisher while Constance Sills and Carl Henderson teamed well together as a couple of magazine reporters. Other roles were taken sufficiently well by Sharon Sutton, Ruth Watson, and John Buchan.

Supporting roles were played by Jean Barber and C. E. Kelso.

The direction of C. E. Kelso was a capable one, though some of the players could be more actively employed on stage in this particular brand of play.

Overall, the biggest fault last night was the pitch of the players, whose voices could have been stepped up. Particularly was this noticeable in the first 15 minutes or so of the play which was inclined to drag might have aided this.

The set was designed and built under the direction of E. Tindale.

"More than Meets the Eye" will be presented again tonight.

Nine Statesmen Exchange Views Without Friction

LONDON (AP) — The Commonwealth prime ministers' conference is about as chummy as they come in these days of international feuding. Everyone's on a "hi, Winston" basis.

Drawn together by the growing threat to world peace, the nine leaders of the Commonwealth, representing a quarter of the world's population, have submerged their own differences so far in trying to do something.

In the quiet of the cabinet room overlooking St. James's Park, the nine statesmen are exchanging views about the state of the world without a trace of friction over their own animosities. And in the mixture of peoples, strongly nationalist feelings and differing political views that the Commonwealth represents there are bound to be plenty.

Pakistan's Mohammed Ali and India's Jawaharlal Nehru, whose countries almost went to war over possession of the state of Kashmir, sit at the same table and calmly discuss world tension, but, according to informants, without injecting their own personal quarrels into the discussion.

NO BITTERNESS

All the bitterness between India and South Africa over the latter's color policies affecting Indians there drops quietly away.

South Africa's lanky deputy premier Charles R. Swart, who once acted in Hollywood films, has been mild and charming to all in emphasizing that South Africa doesn't wish to isolate herself from the Commonwealth despite her republican leanings now that she feels she has "grown up."

When matters of defence and security pacts arise, neutralist Nehru and his collaborator Sir John Kotelawala of Ceylon step aside. Their position is understood and respected by the others.

The views exchanged may or may not gradually take shape as policy by the individual government's in coming weeks and months. That is a matter for each capital.

Minor Hockey

Three squirt games were played at the arena last night with the Canadiens edging the Rangers 2-1, Black Hawks downing the Bruins 3-1, while the Maple Leafs blanked the Red Wings 2-0.

Tom Bentley and Brian Williams were the Canadiens' scorers with Ken Sandford the Ranger sniper. Jim Hurst tallied twice for the Hawks with Bobby Rushlow getting the other tally and Jimmy McGuire scored for the Bruins. Donald Graham and Harold MacDonald were the Leaf scorers in their shutout.

Car Prices Will Be Cut If Taxes Are Reduced

OTTAWA (CP) — Automobile prices probably will be cut if federal taxes on cars are reduced at the present session of Parliament, a Progressive Conservative from the automotive centre of Oshawa said Thursday night.

Michael Starr, Ontario, told the Commons during the throne speech debate that he has been reliably informed any reduction will be passed on to consumers by manufacturers and dealers.

He urged the government to abolish the 15-per-cent excise tax on cars. He said he was not at this time recommending abolition of the 10-per-cent sales tax.

The 15-per-cent excise tax was a "luxury" tariff which had a depressing effect on the automobile industry. Its removal would result in a 10-per-cent increase in employment in the industry and would create $71,000,000 worth of new purchasing power.

SOME WOULD RETURN

However, the government would not lose the full $71,000,000 by removing the tax. At least half of it would find its way back into government coffers in tax payments on consumer goods other than cars.

The excise tax was outmoded and unrealistic and should have been removed years ago.

"The tax is a major hardship on consumers in the low and average income tax groups," he said. "It is an arbitrary and artificial penalty imposed on persons wishing to purchase automobiles."

Total tax paid on purchase of a modest family car now was about $400, including an excise tax of more than $250 and a sales tax of about $150 to $160. A tax of from $150 to $160 was a fair amount to exact from the purchaser of a car.

Carp Slowly Invade Waters Of West Canada

REGINA (CP)—Carp, imported to North America from Europe more than 180 years ago, are slowly invading the waters of western Canada, threatening to force out big game fish.

First found in the west on the Red river at Lockport, Man., the prolific breeder now menaces the waters of the Saskatchewan river. George Couldwell, Saskatchewan director of fisheries, says the recent discovery of carp at the northern end of Lake Winnipeg opens up the headquarters of the Saskatchewan to probable infestation soon.

Dozens of tributaries in both Saskatchewan and Alberta would be open to the invasion unless adequate control measures could be maintained.

THRIVE IN MUD

The carp invasion in Saskatchewan has been in progress for two years. They were first discovered in the Assiniboine river near Kamsack in east-central Saskatchewan and indications are they have come farther west.

A bottom feeder, the carp is extremely hardy and able to live in stagnant water for long periods. Carp-infested waters seldom are fit for game species which they crowd out, soiling the water into diluted mud.

The fish can be kept out of smaller rivers by using screens placed at strategic places and stopped from entering watersheds if they aren't carried there as live bait.

Mr. Couldwell says live bait is the main cause of the fish's roaming habits. Minnow taken below a dam and released into the water above open up new areas for carp invasion. To stop this, regulations were passed preventing use of live carp bait in the infested area of the Qu'appelle system in Saskatchewan.

U.S. Govt. Will Appeal Decision Of Federal Judge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government announced today it will appeal the decision by federal Judge Luther W. Youngdahl dismissing a new perjury indictment against Owen Lattimore.

The decision to take the issue to the U. S. Court of Appeals was announced by U. S. district attorney Leo A. Rover.

Lattimore, controversial Far Eastern affairs specialist, was accused in the indictment of lying when he denied to a Senate committee that he had ever been a follower of the Communist line or a promoter of Red interests.

Judge Youngdahl in a decision Jan. 18 described the charges as "formless and obscure." He said that to require Lattimore to stand trial on them would "make a sham" of the constitution's sixth amendment which requires that a defendant be advised specifically of charges against him.

Pearson Says Brusque Refusal By China 'Most Disappointing'

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Canada's External Affairs Minister Pearson today said the brusque refusal by Communist China of the invitation to discuss a Formosan cease-fire in the United Nations Security Council was "most disappointing."

The Chinese refusal has tended to take the Formosa spotlight away from New York and back to London, in the rather vague expectation of some sort of lead from the Commonwealth premiers. But the hopes here are not high that any concrete Commonwealth proposal will emerge from the present meetings, which end next Tuesday.

Ever since the Commonwealth conference started last Monday there has been speculation of peace moves by the premiers, proposals for a Geneva-type international conference on Far East problems and suggestions of a joint Commonwealth appeal to President Eisenhower and China's Chou En-lai.

But the position still is, barring new developments, that no cut-and-dried Commonwealth approach has been worked out.

Meantime Canada is maintaining close contact with the Indian delegation. Pearson's engagements today included a meeting with Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, Indian high commissioner in London and sister of Prime Minister Nehru.

TURN TO ECONOMICS

Thursday's Commonwealth sessions were devoted to economic affairs, with British spokesmen reviewing the sterling area position. Prime Minister St. Laurent, in a Canadian contribution, strongly supported the idea of a collective approach to convertibility, an objective which Canada would like to see attained as soon as possible.

He also spoke of the desirability of increased Anglo-Canadian trade, of Canada's support of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, of the difficulties facing signatory countries in current GATT discussions at Geneva, and of the United States position regarding GATT.

Prime Minister Churchill also made an intervention on financial policy. He admitted himself to be no expert on economic affairs, at the same time recalling with a chuckle that he used to be chancellor of the exchequer in the 1920s.

Pearson, the prime minister and other members of the Canadian delegation are expected to return to Canada next week, leaving here Tuesday night or Wednesday morning make a full report to the Canadian Parliament the following Monday.

BRITAIN

A major international conference outside the UN to deal with the Formosa situation as a threat to world peace. The United States, Britain, Russia, India and the two Chinas were listed as prospects for the conference table.

Responsible Asian informants said Nehru believes an "unwritten" cease-fire in the Formosa strait could be arranged if the Chinese Nationalists evacuate the off-shore islands, including Quemoy, Matsu and the Tachens. This would leave an 80-mile weater barrier between the Chinese Reds and Chiang's main bases on the American-protected Formosa-Pescadores group.

British officials have not ruled out the possibility that further efforts will be made to bring the Chinese Reds to the UN for Formosa talks. But even if the Reds show up, it is felt in London, the talks would only bog down in a battle of words.

The foreign office, where Foreign Secretary Eden was a prime mover in New Zealand's proposal that the UN Security Council seek a cease-fire, termed Chou's negative reply "extremely disappointing."

British press reaction is gloomy. The Conservative Daily Telegraph says Red China's rejection of the invitation "kills immediate hopes of any lessening of tension through diplomatic negotiation."

URGES A NEW START

The Times reasons that Peiping hopes to isolate the United States from its Western allies, and suggests that "private diplomacy may take over where public diplomacy has failed."

The Commonwealth gathering is seen as one possible starting point for such an informal approach.

India's Prime Minister Nehru, who advocates a neutralist policy in the East-West conflict, already has relayed Peiping's views on Formosa to his Commonwealth colleagues on the basis of his frequent contacts with the Red Chinese.

Nehru already has under study an Indonesian proposal that the five-country Colombo bloc mediate the dispute if the UN effort fails. The Colombo powers are India, Pakistan and Ceylon, all Commonwealth members, plus Indonesia and Burma.

Used 'False Documents, Materials' Says Communist

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Communist Harvey Matusow says he used "false documents and materials" from the office of Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep. Wis.) as campaign material against several western Democratic senators in 1952.

McCarthy was unavailable for comment.

Matusow, who swore last Monday he gave false testimony that helped convict 13 Communist leaders of conspiracy, made the statement at a press conference Thursday.

At the same time he denied the Communist party had "planted" him as a witness to give fake testimony so cases of congressional investigating committees would be discredited.

CALLED A PLANT

Representative Francis E. Walter (Dem. Pa.), chairman of the house un-American activities committee, said in Washington Thursday "there's no question" Matusow was a Communist "plant."

Matusow said he gave the implication that one senator knowingly had written an article for the left-wing magazine New Masses.

The truth was, he said, the article printed by the magazine was a reprint of a Senate speech by Mansfield, published in the Congressional Record and available to anyone.

To a question whether McCarthy knew of this, Matusow replied: "Jean Kerr was in on it and Don Surine."

Miss Kerr now is McCarthy's wife. She and Surine were on McCarthy's staff.

SPOKE ON HEARSAY

Matusow recalled that he once told a congressional committee there were more than 100 Communists on the staff of the New York Times on more than 70 on Time magazine.

"I had no knowledge of either publication," he told the press conference, adding that he testified "on the basis of hearsay information."

N. Y. DEER STARVING

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP)—The onslaught of snow and cold in the Adirondack mountains this winter has brought the greatest starvation threat in eight years to the woodland deer herd. Conservation commissioner Louis A. Wehle said conditions during December and January nearly paralleled those of winters when the greatest number of deer starved to death.

RCAF Husband Too Young For Marriage Pay

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto woman, who soon will be forced to quit her job to have a baby, said today she will be forced to live on $2.58 a day because her air force husband is not old enough for marriage and separation allowances.

Mrs. Violet Watkins said she receives $80 of her husband's $98 monthly pay direct from him. She said she does not like taking so much because it leaves him only $18 a month for personal needs.

She married LAC Peter Watkins, 19, when he was stationed at Trenton in May, 1954. He now is at Gros Tonquin, France.

George Hees, Progressive Conservative member of the federal House for Toronto Broadview, Thursday night attacked the government regulation which prevents men under 21 receiving the $121 allowance. He said in the House of Commons it was like telling a man not to have any children until he was 21.

LEAVES JOB SOON

Mrs. Watkins said she will soon have to quit her $45-a-week job to have the baby. This will leave her with only her husband's pay. Family allowance, after the child is born, will raise the daily income to $2.74.

She said when her husband was posted overseas, a single man offered to go in his place but authorities would not listen. She could not go with him because he refused to enlist for another five-year period.

The woman said the couple was refused living quarters at Trenton because Watkins was under age.

First Car Not Paid For

TORONTO (CP) —Tom Devonshire, 21, said in court Thursday he needed money for his honeymoon so he traded his late-model car.

He said he received another car and $300 in cash and was married five days ago.

Devonshire pleaded guilty to a charge of false pretences.

He had neglected to mention that his first car was not paid for, police said.

Canada's Sovereignty Claims Cover Arctic Archipelago

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's sovereignty claims on the North stretch officially to the three-mile territorial waters limit beyond the northernmost island of the Arctic archipelago—about 500 miles from the pole.

Northern Affairs Minister Lesage made this clear at a combined press conference-forum. But he left in doubt whether or not Canada considers the North Pole her territory.

He told questioners that Canada claims by right of occupancy all the archipelago between Greenland on the east and the Beaufort sea on the west and as far north as Ellesmere, the northernmost island.

CLAIM NOT CHALLENGED

It is not necessary, he said, to have continuous human presence in all the vast area to claim it. And the claim had never been challenged.

But on the question of the pole itself the minister hedged.

Told that sector lines marking the Canadian boundary east and west are shown on Canadian maps as converging at the pole—in effect claiming all territory right to the pole itself—he said his department doesn't make the maps. They came from the mines department.

But he added he thought the pole question was a matter of theory—the sector theory in matters of territorial sovereignty.

THEORY EXPLAINED

Mr. Lesage's mention of the sector theory apparently referred to the principle that a country possesses all of the Arctic land north of its shores as far as the pole and bounded by the projection of its east and west boundaries along the converging meridian lines.

All other countries with claims in the Arctic—Russia, Finland, Norway and Denmark — base them either on the sector theory or on the principle that they discovered the area.

The United States doesn't recognize either discovery or sector claims, but recognizes what it terms "effective occupation." It apparently has recognized by implication Canada's claims through its applications for permission to establish defence bases there.

Mr. Lesage was questioned by reporters and guests at a meeting of the Arctic Circle, a club of scientists, research men and others interested in the North.

R.C. Charities Will Receive Bulk of Estate

NEW YORK (CP)—Roman Catholic charities of the archdiocese of New York eventually will receive the bulk of the estimated $8,000,000 estate of John A. "Fishhooks" McCarthy, former contractor and Tammany Hall leader, his will disclosed Thursday.

McCarthy, who died Jan. 23 at the age of 85, left $500.000, his five-storey Manhattan home and a life income from the residuary estate to his sister, Miss Anna V. McCarthy.

The will provides that at the sister's death, the principal will go to the Catholic charities.

He was a close political friend and business associate of the late Charles F. Murphy, boss of the Tammany machine that controlled New York city government for years.

GERMANS AND REARMAMENT

Vigorous debate in Paris, London, Washington and Ottawa on the merits and demerits of rearming Western Germany have been impressive in their solemnity and pointed in their urgency. They have, until now, been academic in character based on the assumption that Germany wants to be rearmed.

There is no great sentiment in Western Germany for rearmament. Defeat in two World Wars, bitter memories of battle, hardship and privation, and the rubble of their cities are strong arguments to the Germans against another war. Care of war casualties is a constant reminder of the awful cost of war in human suffering. Their divided country presents Germans with a problem of immediate and vital concern that is the product of war. Rapid industrial and economic progress in a climate of peace and incessant propaganda from Britain and the United States on the values of peace have added emphasis to argument against precipitating a situation in which war could develop.

Dr. Konrad Adenauer, German chancellor, and his Christian Democratic party are expected to carry the issue of rearmament when it comes to a vote in Bonn. But the Social Democratic Party, second largest in the Federal Republic, has launched a grass roots movement against rearmament. The Social Democrats are receiving the support of trade unions and 27 Protestant Church leaders.

The Social Democrats do not expect to prevent rearmament. They do hope to pick up political support from that large segment of the German population which has a sincere antipathy to the thought of what rearmament might mean.

This vast division of opinion among the Germans contrasts strongly with the almost complete accord for armament in the Canadian capital. France split almost evenly on the issue for different reasons than those being advanced in West Germany. France, occupied by German armies three times since 1870, is mortally afraid rearmament means an increased possibility of German dominance in Europe.

The necessity for German rearmament is apparent to all. It is the 175 Russian divisions in the occupied areas of eastern Europe. No one really likes the thought of a rearmed Germany, including the Germans, but recognition of its tragic necessity and acceptance of the stern measures needed to cope with the reality of Russia's war-making potential means that the western democracies, for all their fears and personal dislikes, are more afraid of the consequences of possible Russian aggression should Germany remain unarmed.

German rearmament is the lesser of two evils.

Swelling German distaste for militarism also holds out hope that the new German army will be under the control of civilian government and subject to democratic processes.

ICEBERG COUNTRY

What does an iceberg look like?

Do not answer too quickly. You might be wrong. For an iceberg, strangely enough, has "racial characteristics."

In the Arctic the iceberg is a towering pinnacle. But if you are from the South, Suh, while you are also familiar with the pinhead type of berg, the common or garden variety of iceberg comes with a flat top.

The explanation is simple. Many of the Antarctic's icebergs are sections broken away from the continental icecap. The top surface towers 100 feet above the water.

We gleaned this information from an article in the New York Times by Walter Sullivan, who is accompanying the U.S. expedition on the Navy icebreaker Atka, which is seeking a new base for Antarctic exploration. Nor, according to Sullivan, is the Antarctic landscape dreary and monotonous. Listen to this description:

"About 400 bergs were in sight. Their perspective effect dramatized the vastness of the scene. They were sprinkled across the ocean at distances of a few hundred feet to five miles to twenty miles.

"The sky was an exciting tubulence of clouds that were charcoal grey overhead and purple black on the horizon at points where snow squalls blew. The sun lurked hidden on the eastern horizon and there the sky was blindingly golden.

"Shafts of sunlight struck the eastward faces of some bergs and each was transformed into a citadel of the gods."

Not the least of the features of Canadian Pacific Airways' new route over the pole from Vancouver to Amsterdam, is the opportunity to name the weekly flights.

North Star or Constellation aircraft flying the "Polaris" or "Aurora" flights would lend an additional touch of glamor to an already glamorous operation.

A headline in the Windsor Daily Star on a report of CIO United Auto Workers executive Emil Mazey on the settlement of the Ford strike reads: "Mazey Tells Wives Strike Justified."

We would be more inclined to believe in the strike's justification if the headline read, "Wives Tell Mazey Sacrifice Justified."

Mr. Dan Maitland, well-known resident at West Lake, Prince Edward County, left his home recently to visit his daughter at "The Ridge" near Coe Hill. He is making the trip comfortably seated in a cutter and drawn by a sturdy team of horses. He will make stops along the way to visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. McElheran and family have come from Toronto to reside in this city and have taken up residence on Charles Street, north of Victoria Avenue.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Andrews, Coleman Street, an enjoyable euchre party was held Friday evening under the auspices of the Minerva Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star. Ten tables were in play and the prize winners were as follows: ladies' first, Mrs. Strachan; ladies' second, Mrs. Guy White; men's first, Mr. Robert Bourke; men's second, Mr. Charles Hyde. The event was most enjoyable and Mr. and Mrs. Andrews were cordially thanked for their kind hospitality.

Mr. Frank M. McKeown, vice president of the Belleville Liberal - Conservative Association, and a member of the executive of the Eastern Ontario Liberal - Conservative Association, will attend a meeting of the executive committee which is to be held at Chateau Laurier in Ottawa on Feb. 7.

30 YEARS AGO

The patrons of the Massassaga cheese factory met recently and appointed Mr. Ed. Simmons as president and Mr. J. Broad as secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Charles Bonisteel of this city has left to visit his daughter, Mrs. Percy Dafoe at Bowling Green, Kentucky. He will also visit relatives in Toronto and Kalamazoo, Mich.

Mr. Hector J. Poste of the Ritchie Store is in New York City on a business trip for the store.

Mrs. Edward Ling and daughter left today for St. Louis, Mo., where they will spend the balance of the winter.

At a meeting of the members of the fire committee in the city council which was held last evening, Captain William J. Brown of No. 1 Company, was recommended to be appointed chief of the fire department to succeed the late Chief William Campbell. R. Symons was recommended to fill the position of captain of No. 1 company to succeed Captain Brown when he assumes the office of chief. Captain Brown has been connected with the fire department for many years and he is in every way capable of performing the duties of chief.

The Telephone is a Wonder-Invention. From our file copy at this time in 1885 we take the following item: "A local citizen, who has a telephone in his home, was called to his instrument last evening and to his great surprise heard distinctly the notes of a piano. His astonishment was increased when he learned that the piano was being played in Port Hope. It appears that the telephone office in Port Hope is situated in the rear of a store where pianos are sold and at the time the Belleville citizen was called the piano was being played. Every note could be plainly heard here. It is within the range of possibility that conversation will yet be heard across the Atlantic Ocean through the means of this wonderful invention."

TODAY'S TALK

ART OF LIVING

That person is to be admired, and even imitated, who neglects to devote all this time to the mere thing of making money and more money. He thinks it is an investment just to loaf a little and have fun! Social demands and obligations he considers secondary.

There is an art of living as there is an art to doing anything beautifully and well, but this art reaches out and touches all arts that it may universalize itself. What is more admirable than a balanced character? Always at home, no matter where.

Bound up with the art of living is the art of being yourself, without outside interference, and with an interest in all of God's universe. To live triumphantly you have to take a great deal of time off that you may not lose track of yourself! Living gloriously is so much concerned with touching the lives of others, and learning from them. Who ever grew up or matured by living unto himself alone?

Happiness is bound up with interests and in trying to please others. Making an art out of living is radiating one's own happiness—stretching it out, reaching for places to put it! We are never our best selves until we start giving ourselves away.

We are God's creatures and we owe it to him to take care of this physical being, giving it exercise, relaxation and the opportunity for growth and happiness. We could well envy some of the idler's knowledge, he who stops to think and meditate. There is enrichment in mere stillness. I got this line from somewhere: "Study to be still."

It was Pope who said: "The proper study of mankind is man." People devote all their years to the study of many an art forgetting that the art of living is the first of all arts! And far the most important, the most revealing, and the happiest.

Letter to the Editor

Suggests Post Office Should Not Be Moved

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

May I have a small space in your valuable journal to comment on what I consider a timely topic, namely the proposed new location of our Post Office and other Federal Government offices.

As an interested citizen of this city for a long time, I feel it would be a mistake to change the location. The existing building has been there so long it has practically become a local landmark and is quite centrally located for both business and community purposes. There is also a sub Post Office in the northern end of the city and there used to be one near the C.N.R. which could be re-opened.

A few years ago the Federal Department of Public Works purchased land adjoining the present location for the purpose of extension and parking facilities. At any rate there is nothing to hinder the Department from building up skyward, which, with the installation of elevator services, would eliminate any obstacle regarding the height of the new building. Furthermore the proposed new site might become valuable soon for commercial or industrial purposes, with a considerable amount of municipal tax revenue.

There is also the consideration that when the assessable value of all Federal Government owned property reaches 4 per cent of the entire city assessment it becomes taxable on the same basis as all other real estate in the city. This might well produce the desired goal when you consider the Armouries, Government Dock and the new Entomological building on Dundas Street East. The Provincial Government already allows its properties to be assessed and taxed.

Children Grow Bigger

(Christian Science Monitor)

Children grow bigger faster than they used to. So finds a joint study sponsored by the United States Office of Education, the University of Michigan, and the National School Service Institute. That makes it official. And as for learning how much bigger, this study, perhaps, is entitled to the credit. But quite a lot of observant people have been aware of the trend for some time.

Modern adults, too, are bigger and taller than their ancestors. Many a boy, who once visualized Sir Launcelot and other champions of King Arthur's Round Table as sort of kingsized cowboys in hardware, has been in for quite a shock when he first visited one of the great museums which display suits of armor from the Age of Chivalry. A gawky 16-year-old of today has learned suddenly that the panoplies of some of the famous knights of the Middle Ages would come short of fitting him by two or three sizes. Thus have the mighty of the past fallen!

But there is a reverse twist to some of these discoveries. And from one of them we have been waiting in vain to hear a resultant explosion. It is now several years since Vassar College found that its average student of today is taller, broader, and heavier than her grandmother in the Class of 1870 or thereabouts. And that she has bigger feet! Or has the marvelous happened and she's proud of it?

Long Odds In Pacific

(Windsor Star)

A bridge player in a championship British-American tournament in New York the other day jolted officials by recalling that his 75th hand, just dealt, was the same as his 65th.

"I can tell you what cards every man around the board holds," he said.

The long arm of chance had reached out to create this duplication. Men of mathematical bent figured the odds against it were more than 1,000,000 to one.

Those are long odds indeed, but longer ones have turned up.

During World War II, for instance, two American submarines collided in the Pacific. Each was cruising at periscope depth, was 300 by 27 feet, and equipped with everything then available in protective devices. Yet in more than 64,000,000 square miles of ocean one rammed the other.

Mathematical wizards went to work on this coincidence and figured that the chance of it happening involved odds of 119,594,745,000 to one.

They make the bridge happenstance seem almost inevitable.

Gold-Plated Can Openers

(Wall Street Journal)

Could you use a jewelled, gold-plated beer-can opener? A kerosene lamp with sequins for your garden, porch or patio? Or a 1-inch ball-point pen graced with a band of pearls?

These and other gem-laden versions of strictly utilitarian items were the shining feature of the California Gift Show in Los Angeles. More than 3,000 buyers from around the country took in the displays of some 500 exhibitors.

The trend toward adorning practical gadgets with imitation jewels first became apparent within the last year or so as fly-swatters sprouted rubies and emeralds and ladies' pipes embellished with gems made their debut. Now shoppers can expect to find even bejewelled mouse-traps, whisk-brooms, lunch-boxes and drinking glasses on store counters soon.

Originals showed a heavily jewelled yardstick (retail price: $5.95) and a glittering piggy-bank (about $15) in the "functional fantasia" exhibit using fur as well to lend a rich appearance to personal accessories, with a pocket watch encircled by a band of ermine.

The beer-can openers were shown alongside ornate tooth-brush containers, pillboxes and cigarette lighters. There wese kerosene lamps to sell for $12.95 and flyswatters priced from $1.95 to $4.95, sequined featherdusters.

The glass tumblers festooned with semi-precious stones, selling at $15 for a set of four, were shown by Barry Livingston, who said he digs deep in remote mountain areas of Utah and in the California desert for rhodonite, petrified wood and other rock with which to decorate glass.

Sequined terrycloth beach towels, baskets with silver trim, pearled candles and colorful "his and hers" icebags were among the other eye-catchers at the show. A non-jewelled highlight was the display of "contemporary plastic birdhouses", of varying sizes and colors for different birds.

Exhibitors advanced several reasons for the emphasis on jewels and unique designs for household products. For one thing, they're considered sure-fire attention-getters in store windows and in shops. And the maufacturers detect an increasing demand for bright, dressy items.

Big Business Aids Colleges

(New York Times)

The General Motors announcement of a $2,000,000 program of aid to education, coming closely on the heels of news that the General Electric Company will contribute more than $1,000,000 in the current academic year, is a measure of the rapidly growing willingness of American business to carry some of the financial burden of private colleges and universities. Another measure—a survey just completed by the Council for Financial Aid to Education—shows that 300 of the largest manufacturing companies gave over 2 per cent of their entire net income last year to philanthropic causes, about one-fifth of which went to education.

The original barrier to the stream of much-needed educational dollars has now been removed. Legislation in twenty-nine states, and interpreting court decisions, have now freed such gifts from any doubt that they are a legimate use of corporate funds, and those grants already made have stirred no serious stockholder complaints. But other problems beset the corporate philanthropist. One is how to choose beneficiaries with a maximum of effectiveness and a minimum of injured feelings among those left out. Then, too, the whole movement will be put in jeopardy if there is even a suspicion of corporate curriculum control.

Two interesting, and gratifying, developments of the last few years, however, are helping to solve these problems. On the one hand, corporations are increasingly setting up their own foundations to dispense their philanthropic gifts in the fairest and most expert professional way. On the other hand, 400 colleges have organized twenty-nine state and three regional associations through which they can more efficiently seek, receive and distribute the financial support they so urgently need.

The Council for Financial Aid to Education has recently published a list of fifty-nine charitable foundations and trusts set up by leading American corporations, and it urges other companies to use this device. Such foundations have the great advantage of leveling the fluctuations in giving which direct dependence on the ups and downs of company income involve. In good years a reserve can be set up for grants when times are bad.

Personal Health Talks

ALCOHOL AND THE ARTERIES

Dr. Brady

I have examined many men past forty who had been occasional, moderate, social, steady, habitual or hard drinkres, some of them still alive, and invariably their arteries have been more or less hardened, clerotic.

This does not necessarily signify that the use of alcoholic beverages or liquors causes hardening of the arteries or, as doctors call it, arteriscleroosis. I don't know whether it does or not. It is a question of opinion and, as nearly as I can ascertain, medical authorities today are evenly divided about it.

Being a teetotaler myself, perhaps I should not give my own opinion about it, but this I must say: There is no scientific evidence that alcohol in any quantity or circumstance does a man's arteries any good.

When I mentioned that some of the drinkers I have examined were live ones, I pushed back, lit my pipe (although I usually refrain from smoking all through the working day and light up only after dinner in the evening) and tried to smoke while I thought about something. I say I tried. Trying to smoke and think is a waste of matches. I was wondering why only one of the drinkers I examined — drinkers who were not alive when I examined 'em—was a woman. Was it because in my hospital days women didn't drink as freely as they do today under the influence of the movies, television, cocktail parties and fancy bars? I wonder. I don't know. Nearly all the drinkers I examined were bums, wrecks, down and out of whatever jobs, homes, friends or respectability they had ever had.

Here's a letter from a reader:

Dear Dr. Brady:

I understand that you favor Alfalfa tea for arthritis and are supplying a pamphlet on

A question for your column: the subject . . .

.... (a news commentator) says he has discovered that bourbon whiskey retards the ossification of the arteries. As a biologist I am well aware that alcohol has a hardening effect on protoplasm. Is it possible that it softens the arteries? If so, how should it be taken by a person unaccustomed to alcoholic beverages or liquors?

...., Sc.D.

I do not favor alfalfa tea for arthritis or other ailment.

A medical man with hypertension discovered that a stiff shot of whiskey relaxed him better than any other remedy. He now occupies a crypt in Woodlawn. In his place I would have used plenty of whiskey too if it comforted me, but I should say the news commentator's notion that whisky "retards ossification" of the arteries is whacky.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Lap Laprairie who is widely known amongst Canadian construction men from Kitimat to Knob Lake as an outstanding authority on explosives has a most interesting story about Indians. When he was a young man, Lap was on a construction job far in the north where the white man had seldom perpetrated before. A construction camp was built and the crews came in and work was begun in the wilds.

The construction crews were surprised to find, here and there, snowshoes hung on trees, or bags of traps and other interesting items of wilderness gear. Even rifles were discovered, wrapped in coverings, but quite openly hung in trees. The white men promptly appropriated these goods, on the principle of finders keepers.

The white mn did not know that Indians, as a matter of course, left their property wherever convenience or necessity required, and that to an Indian it was unthinkable that anyone would disturb property that was not his own. The things they left in the woods were, of course, vital to them: the owner's existence depended upon them in most cases. The theft of them was a profound shock to the Indians.

Then the Indians perceived that the white man's principles were different. The white man took what he wanted. Therefore, he must expect the Indian to take what he wanted. And what was at first supposed to be theft by the Indians began to be noticed around the camps and on the trails and roads. But the Indians did not deem it to be theft at all: it was fair exchange, on an interesting new principle introduced by the white man.

It would be as hard, says Lap Laprairie, to make an Indian understand that he was to submit to the removal of his goods without being entirely free to remove the white man's goods, as to make a white man understand that he couldn't pick up and take away something he found hanging in a tree in the bush.

One of the tragedies of the white-man, lately demonstrated all over the world, is that when he enters strange foreign territory, he seldom stops to think.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE MATERIAL IS IMPORTANT

Do you have any moral standards?

Oh yes, you reply, I have some very definite moral standards. Such being the case, the next question is Are these moral standards made of steel or of rubber—or perhaps of butter?

Some people have mighty good theories which they never for a moment think of putting into operation when comfort or profit or passion is at stake. Many people have an adaptable type of moral standard which can assume one form in one circle of society and an entirely different form in another. Some moral standards bend like rubber, and others melt like butter when the heat of public criticism is turned on.

Stand for something! Everybody will think more of you if you do. Evnn the ones who laugh at you will secretly admire you. You may have heard this expression: "Stand for something or pretty soon you will stand for anything." Not a bad description of how some people's moral standards give way before the assaults of every tempting. This expression sums up pretty well the basis on which some hostesses entertain, some business men operate, some students seek after popularity and office.

Steel, rubber, and butter. What about the substance of your ideals? Do you have any; and if so, what are they made of?

Editor of Niagara Falls Review Completes Forty Years at Desk

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—An unassuming Scot whose quiet manner provides few clues to the adventurous spirit behind a notable career is celebrating the completion of 40 years' editorial work with the Niagara Falls Evening Review.

Editor James B. Cowan has been at various times a soldier and a flier as well as a journalist and an active worker in community organizations here.

It's a far cry from a Scottish theological college to a busy editorial desk in Niagara Falls by way of the French Foreign Legion and a distinguished career in the Canadian Expeditionary Force in the First World War.

MANY DECORATIONS

Jim Cowan earned many decorations for war service—the Military Medal, Croix de Guerre with Palms, Medaille Militaire and the Foreign Legion Medal. And in 1946 he was honored in the civilian honors list with membership in the Order of the British Empire.

Over the years his foremost activity has been to direct the editorial policy of The Evening Review, published by Frank H. Leslie for the last 50 years. Through the newspaper, as well as by his personal efforts, he has supported virtually every project he considered beneficial to the city and district.

In recognition of his 40 years' service, his editorial staff is presenting him with a gold watch and chain.

Under his guidance The Evening Review, only newspaper in this community of more than 25,000 persons, has grown to its present circulation of 13,466. The paper covers an area with a population of 60,000.

Congratulations on his anniversary have come from Prime Minister St. Laurent, W. L. Houck, Liberal member of Parliament for Niagara Falls, Arthur Jolley, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Niagara Falls, and from a host of groups, community service and veterans' organizations with which he has been associated.

EDUCATED IN SCOTLAND

He started his writing career while attending St. Andrew's University, contributing Scottish character sketches to The Weekly Scotsman in Edinburgh. Since then he has written many short stories in addition to his newspaper pieces.

For a time he was a theological student in Scotland but gave up his studies to turn to other fields.

While living in Algiers, he volunteered for the Foreign Legion.

Mr. Cowan joined The Review in February, 1915. Given leave of absence for service in the First World War, he served overseas in the 98th and 19th Battalions of the Canadian Army and in the Royal Air Force, with the rank of flight-lieutenant, as an observer officer on bombing planes. On his return to Canada in 1919, he resumed his duties with the newspaper.

During the Second World War, he served in the Veterans' Guard which kept watch over the great power plants here. At present he is liaison officer for the civil defence organization.

WIDE INTERESTS

Mr. Cowan has given much of his time to veterans' organizations.

He served two years on Niagara Falls city council; two terms as president and 15 years as a director of the Greater Niagara Chamber of Commerce, of which he has become an honorary director. He is a past president of the Niagara Falls Boy Scout Council and a former member of the board of trustees at Drummond Hill Presbyterian Church, where he has been a Sunday School teacher.

For many years he has been an active worker in the greater Niagara unit of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

A Liberal, he has been chairman of city and riding Liberal organizations.

His wife, the former Margaret Brown, was on the editorial staff of the Niagara Falls Record when it was bought out and merged with The Evening Review in 1918.

ADVENTUROUS SPIRIT

James B. Cowan, 40 years in the editorial department of the Niagara Falls Evening Review, has been a various times a soldier and a flier as well as a journalist. Decorated many times for war service in the First World War, he was for a time in the French Foreign Legion. Editor Cowan started his writing career while attending St. Andrew's University contributing Scottish character sketches to the Weekly Scotsman in Edinburgh. He joined the Review in 1915.

'Rather Tough Year on Unions' Says Director

HAMITON (CP)—George Burt, Canadian director of the United says 1954 was a "rather tough year on unions."

In his farewell speech Thursday as president of the Ontario Federation of abor, Mr. Burt attacked "the organized drive by the employer to take over 1954 as his year by using the unemployment situation as a main weapon to force a retreat by organized labor."

He told the federation's annual convention this "was nothing short of traitorous." Governments "did nothing really constructive to provide jobs for the unemployed."

Mr. Burt charged that chairmen of labor conciliation boards had openly violated the law by not sticking to the time limits in the abor Relations Act. Yet a trade union that broke the labor law could be brought into court and heavily fined.

FEAR STRIKE CAUSE?

There had been major strikes in Ontario during 1954 because employees were apprehensive that hard-won rights were going to be taken away, he said.

The employer's attempt to force a retreat by labor because of unemployment was assisted "by our employer-sponsored provincial government and sometimes through ignorance and sometimes by design by conciliation board chairmen," Mr. Burt added.

"During the year the employer was responsible in large measure for unemployment. Employers made no contribution whatsoever to the relief of unemployment."

Instead, employers used employment and "the misery of working people" to exploit the ones who were working, Mr. Burt said.

"The government sold the Canadian working people out by doing nothing to solve the unemployment program. They have allowed private enterprise to exploit our economic heritage without restriction, with a complete and callous disregard of the plight of the working people."

He said the country doesn't care too much what economic system it lives by as long as it works. abor's job was to enlighten the Canadian people as to why the present system was not working.

The trade union movement must "break through" on the political front in the next few years, he said.

"The employers are getting richer and richer, the government is getting deafer and deafer and the workers are getting less and less money. Any advance gained during the last few years has been swept away by short time and unemployment."

Mr. Burt, who recently recovered from a long illness, is not expected to seek re-lection in the federation, Ontario's arm of the Canadian Congress of abor.

Elections for officers will take place Saturday, final day of the federation 12th annual convention that started Thursday. Samuel Hughes of United Packinghouse Workers is expected to be a strong contender as leader of the 200,000 CIO trade unionists in Ontario.

Mendes-France Unlikely to Win Confidence Vote

By PRESTON GROVER

PARIS (AP) — Pierre Mendes-France's hours as French premier appeared numbered today as the National Assembly headed for a vote of confidence late tonight on his North African policy.

Mendes-France demanded the vote, on which defeat would topple his seven-month-old government, after two days of bitter debate highlighted by a rift in his own Radical Socialist (conservative) party.

The defection among his nominal followers made the prospect of his ouster so great that some of his own ministers privately voiced hopelessness.

The vote will be on Mendes-France's whole North African policy, including Tunisian home rule, an increased share in government for Algeria's Moslem majority and certain "reforms" for Morocco.

FRENCH ALARMED

But the critical issue is home rule for the Tunisian nationalists, a spectre which alarms the important French land owners and businessmen living in the protectorate.

The probability of France's 20th post-war government crisis raised the question of what might happen to the Paris accords to rearm West Germany as a member of the North Atlantic alliance.

These treaties, approved by the assembly, are still under consideration in the French Senate. However, assembly observers believe there ar other possible premirs who could successfully pilot the pacts through the remaining parliamentary stages.

Mendes-France bluntly told the assembly Thursday night that he planned to continue the African policy he launched when he visited Tunis last July, to Quiet terrorism stemming from nationalist discontent, he promised "local autonomy" to the protectorate's 3,500,000 people. So far he has been unable to conclude an agreement with the nationalists, though.

Board of Review Will Settle Major Compensation Problems

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has established a board of review, first in the province, to settle the major problem of the St. Lawrence power development project — the compensation and relocation of the 65,000 persons whose property will be flooded.

The board system will have representatives from the Ontario government, Ontario Hydro and the persons concerned. It was first requested by residents of the areas affected and worked out after repeated appeals by them.

Premier Frost said:

"This is an experimental approach to a difficult problem. This procedure has never before been used in the province and the lessons to be learned from it should be very useful in the future. It means simply that we are trying to guarantee that everyone is treated justly and adequately."

The board will have its first test Feb. 11 in Morrisburg, 35 miles east of Cornwall. It will attempt to work out a basis for compensation for the 20,000 acres of land and the thousands of buildings which will be flooded in the valley.

Planning Minister Warrender was named permanent chairman of the board. Government appointees are J. J. Wingfelder and G. L. Sayce, both of the planning department.

Harry Hustler, Hydro's chief land acquisition officer, will be one of the members. The other Hydro member and two municipal representatives will be named within a week.

If Hydro or municipal representatives are dissatisfied with a decision, the matter can be taken first to arbitration and a final appeal to the Ontario Supreme Court will be available.

Valley representatives were promised by Mrs. Frost, cabinet members and Hydro officials that decisions already made would not be used as forming any basis for the compensation formula. They said they will press for the equivalent of the replacement value of the property.

No legislation was required to establish the board since it has no power to order a price but will only act as a referee.

Prime Minister Taken to Task On Appointment

OTTAWA (CP) — George Hees said Thursday it's strange that Prime Minister St. Laurent has not named a Toronto Liberal to the cabinet.

Mr. Hees, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Toronto Broadview, did not name David Croll (L—Spadina) but left no doubt that Mr. Croll is the man he meant.

He said in the Commons that the industrial belt of Ontario, between Chatham and Cornwall and stretching some 50 miles north of the St. Lawrence river and Lake Ontario, should have a representative in the cabinet.

He described the area as "the heartland of Canadian industry."

Mr. Hees, president of his party's national association, said he finds it strange Mr. St. Laurent apparently has found it impossible to select a Liberal from that area to appoint to the cabinet.

One such Liberal was the chairman of the Commons banking committee. Mr. Croll occupies that post.

The industrial belt of Ontario needed a representative in the cabinet to impress upon the government the need for a reduction in "commodity taxs," such as sales and excise taxes.

APPLE NAMED

Charles Hammett Snow, a federal agricultural official developed the "snow" apple.

Claim People Starving Denied By Member

OTTAWA (CP)—A claim that some people are starving to death in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., was denied Thursday in the Commons.

C. E. Johnston (SC—Bow River) said a report in The Albertan, Calgary morning newspaper, quoted two Sault Ste. Marie aldermen as saying that there is "so much unemployment in this city that some persons are literally starving because they have no money to buy food."

George E. Nixon (L — Algoma West), a resident of Sault Ste. Marie, said "there is no one starving in Sault Ste. Marie."

Mr. Johnston quoted the report after charging that Canadian workers have produced themselves into soup kitchens. There was unemployment because the market was flooded with consumer goods and the government had not taken steps to create purchasing power.

Proposal to Have Distinctive National Flag Made in House

OTTAWA (CP)—Latest proposal before Parliament for a distinctive national flag is a white field with a Union Jack in the masthead and a red or green maple leaf in the fly.

One government source, who declined to be identified, said that if this proposal is not accepted by Parliament the controversial issue will be set aside for a few years.

"This is the last attempt," he said. "If it is not successful there likely will not be another for some years to come."

The newest proposal was made Thursday by A. H. Hollingworth (L—York Centre) who said he believes the design will be acceptable to English- and French-language Canadians.

He introduced a private bill in the Commons asking the secretary of state to prepare a design for "a suitable distinctive national flag" and to submit it to the government and to Parliament for approval.

There was no debate on the issue when the bill received first reading.

"I think there is a good chance of selling the design to French-Canadians," Mr. Hollingworth said in an interview. "However, if it is not acceptable to Quebec I would not want to force it on them.

"Any flag I try to promote must be acceptable to French-Canadians."

At present, Canada flies the red ensign on its merchant ships, atop federal buildings and at international conferences.

There have been various flag proposals before each parliamentary session for many years.

In 1946 a contest was held for the best design. A Commons-Senate committee studied 2,695 designs, finally recommending one from among 11 top choices: A red ensign, with the coat of arms replaced by a maple leaf in a bordered background of white. The proposal never came to a vote.

THE KILT THAT SHRANK

His name is MacRae. Last week he came down from the hills, with his sheep, to buy a new kilt. He paid a visit to the tailor and then reached into his sporran which was just bursting open with shillings and half crowns. He must have looked too long, and given too little, because you can see what has happened to yon kilt. It's cold on the legs up in the hills today, and MacRae is probably saying, "Ach, a mon gets only what he pays for".

WHOLE COMMUNITIES CHRISTIAN

"In India it is not unusual for whole communities to become Christian as the result of Christian witnessing. This mass movement does not deter individual growth in Christian Grace and it does fortify the timid number who dread to be different.

"Many national leaders are realizing that the obligation to go into all the world and preach the gospel is also a charge to the churches in India as well as the older churches. The United Church of Northern India supports a missionary to Indians in Kenya, Africa. The Church of South India has commissioned a man and his wife to Uganda. A leper colony in India, unhappy because they were falling in their Christian witness volunteered to finance two young men as missionaries. From their poverty, these lepers sought to give the riches of Christ".

Mrs. Carman Milligan gave a reading "What are we Weaving into the Tapestry of Life?"

King George Lower School Pupils Display Art Work

An interesting display of lower school art by the pupils of King George School is now on exhibition at the McCarthy Theatre. This includes cut-out work in colors, a few crayon drawings of fairy stories, kindergarten work illustrating the wee tots' ideas of ordinary everyday articles and toys, as the kiddie car; a car transport; a happy little black-haired girl in blue vivaciously wending her way along a down hill path, with one blue shoe and one red one; a sunny afternoon in wintertime showing a red cottage, with snow-covered hillside, a smiling snowman, and tall evergreen tree; a baby carriage in green with yellow trim, and a home surrounded with birds in flight.

The cut-out paper vases and ornamental jars with the faint touches of color in Mexican design were nicely done, as were the other designs of color combinations of yellow, green, orange and mauve. The black silhouette effect of an evergreen was most outstanding.

TWO-SOME HOCKEY

Grade 2 showed three little girl playmates playing amid evergreen trees, with three houses in the background; a hockey game by two lads, or a father and son, who were enjoying a two-some in the hollow with an auto and a truck on the ridge above; children sleigh riding down hill showed animation as well as imagination

Other art work by grade one showed the head of the big, bad wolf done with red jaws and yellow ears. There were also outlines of a house and houseboat done on a black background with color added—something just out of the ordinary

The Valentine figures made by red cut-out hearts, the totem poles and the skating boys in their colorful sweaters were the work of grade III, and were of merit.

STEADY PROGRESS

Grades five, six and seven showed a steady progress in detail and in imagination. These were done in crayon, showing linoleum designs in squares and fanciful shapes; a hunting scene depicting the hunter trailing tracks in the snow amid evergreen trees; and a tow truck with trailing car; a play time scene with children sleigh-riding, making a snowman, and a little girl skating.

The book covers by grade seven were well done, and included those for Nature Study, showing a butterfly hovering above the purple clover; a red breasted robin on a limb; a branch of apple blossoms . "Liberace" was depicted at the piano keyboard in forceful attitude. Others by grade seven were a geometrical design showing six elongated petals, a pink, circular ground in colors of rose, green, mauve; the "Three Musketeers"; a cowboy in fine array; a monkey hanging from a limb, and a stained glass window effect, which was most colorful, and neatly executed.

These drawings by the embryo artists deserve credit for their painstaking work, their color sense, and the fund of imagination shown.

The display will be on exhibition until next Saturday, February 12.

Mesdames Cordes and Moynes had charge of the meeting.

Mesdames Weese, Martin, and Smale held a short discussion on "Should the work in India be divided".

Mesdames Larman and Coulter led in prayer at this point. There were readings by Mesdames Walters, Kingston, Scott, Frederick and Moynes on the "Book on India."

Mrs. Cordes at this point invited Mrs. Beaul to sing. She rendered "How Lovely Are Thy Dwelling Places," which was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Cordes invited all to stay for a cup of tea.

MELROSE W.M.S.

MELROSE — The Woman's Missionary Society of Melrose United Church met at the home of Mrs. A. Reilly on Wednesday with an attendance of 12.

The president, Mrs. Morgan, opened the meeting with a few words of welcome.

Mrs. S. Demille took charge of the worship service, the theme: "The Church Universal in India."

Mrs. Charles Bates Sr., presided at the piano and Miss Bailey gave the prayers.

Business period was conducted. Thank you notes from the sick who had received cards were read. Mrs. Roy Badgely was appointed assistant supply secretary to Mrs. E. Embury. A bale of good used clothing for Korean relief is to be packed in the near future; clothing to be left at the church or at the home of Mr. Russell MacFarlane.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER

"The World Day of Prayer will be held at the home of Mrs. Russell MacFarlane, on Friday, February 25.

Mrs. E. Badgely, secretary of Christian citizenship, gave a reading, "Alcohol in the Home", and conducted the following program: Mrs. Fred Jeffrey gave a reading "The Prayer of Self".

Miss Bailey summarized the chapter of the study book, Growth of the Church in India". "Evangelism is the obligation of the Church." There are many ways, many methods by which men and women are won to Christ. This is true for India as well as Canada.

WHOLE COMMUNITIES CHRISTIAN

"In India it is not unusual for whole communities to become Christian as the result of Christian witnessing. This mass movement does not deter individual growth in Christian Grace and it does fortify the timid number who dread to be different.

"Many national leaders are realizing that the obligation to go into all the world and preach the gospel is also a charge to the churches in India as well as the older churches. The United Church of Northern India supports a missionary to Indians in Kenya, Africa. The Church of South India has commissioned a man and his wife to Uganda. A leper colony in India, unhappy because they were failing in their Christian witness, volunteered to finance two young men as missionaries. From their poverty, these lepers sought to give the riches of Christ".

Mrs. Carman Milligan gave a reading "What are we Weaving into the Tapestry of Life?"

The meeting which closed with silent prayer for missionaries in India, Miss Helen Houston, was followed by the closing prayer given by Mrs. Morgan.

The hostess served refreshments and a social time was spent.

King George Lower School Pupils Display Art Work

An interesting display of lower school art by the pupils of King George School is now on exhibition at the McCarthy Theatre. This includes cut-out work in colors, a few crayon drawings of fairy stories, kindergarten work illustrating the wee tots' ideas of ordinary everyday articles and toys, as the kiddie car; a car transport; a happy little black-haired girl in blue vivaciously wending her way along a down hill path, with one blue shoe and one red one; a sunny afternoon in wintertime showing a red cottage, with snow-covered hillside, a smiling snowman, and tall evergreen tree; a baby carriage in green with yellow trim, and a home surrounded with birds in flight.

The cut-out paper vases and ornamental jars with the faint touches of color in Mexican design were nicely done, as were the other designs of color combinations of yellow, green, orange and mauve. The black silhouette effect of an evergreen was most outstanding.

TWO-SOME HOCKEY

Grade 2 showed three little girl playmates playing amid evergreen trees, with three houses in the background; a hockey game by two lads, or a father and son, who were enjoying a two-some in the hollow with an auto and a truck on the ridge above; children sleigh riding down hill showed animation as well as imagination.

Other art work by grade one showed the head of the big, bad wolf done with red jaws and yellow ears. There were also outlines of a house and houseboat done on a black background with color added—something just out of the ordinary.

The Valentine figures made by red cut-out hearts, the totem poles and the skating boys in their colorful sweaters were the work of grade III, and were of merit.

STEADY PROGRESS

Grades five, six and seven showed a steady progress in detail and in imagination. These were done in crayon, showing linoleum designs in squares and fanciful shapes; a hunting scene depicting the hunter trailing tracks in the snow amid evergreen trees; and a tow truck with trailing car; a play time scene with children sleigh-riding, making a snowman, and a little girl skating.

The book covers by grade seven were well done, and included those for Nature Study, showing a butterfly hovering above the purple clover; a red breasted robin on a limb; a branch of apple blossoms. "Liberace" was depicted at the piano keyboard in forceful attitude. Others by grade seven were a geometrical design showing six elongated petals, a pink, circular ground in colors of rose, green, mauve; the "Three Musketeers"; a cowboy in fine array; a monkey hanging from a limb, and a stained glass window effect, which was most colorful, and neatly executed.

These drawings by the embryo artists deserve credit for their painstaking work, their color sense, and the fund of imagination shown.

The display will be on exhibition until next Saturday, February 12.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HERE'S A GIRL WITH A LOT OF QUESTIONS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a number of questions I would like you to answer for me.

How young can a girl be to start wearing light lipstick? When can she wear heels? Do boys like red nail polish on girls? Do they like girls with long hair, as, for instance, in a pageboy?

At what age can a girl do on double-dates with boys she has known for a long time? Would it be proper for two girls to accept a ride home with a boy two years older? Should a girl pay any attention to another girl who says things demoralizing the character of a boy who used to pay attention to her until I came along? — Miss M.T.

Dear Miss M.T.:

Your questions make me wonder whether you are really old enough yet to be called "Miss" anything. My guess is that you are no more than 13 or 14, at most, and I shall answer your questions on that basis.

Here are my answers, numbered according to the order in which you ask the questions:

(1) I think 14 is the youngest a girl should begin to use lipstick an then, as you suggest, only a touch of it. (2) If by "heels" you mean high ones, I would say 15 or 16 would be ample time to start wearing them, and then only on the most important "dress-up" occasions. (3) I doubt if either boys or men like nail polish of the blood red variety on the girls and young women they take out, and my advice is that you wear nothing but colorless or natural polish until you are at least two or three years older. Then stick to the more conservative shades. (4) I don't think boys care how a girl wears her hair, so long as it is a style particularly becoming to her and kept neat and attractive.

(5) Double-dates are fine for girls of any age, but until a girl is at least 15, most of her dates should be in the afternoon or early evening, with no late hours. (6) It's perfectly proper for two girls to accept a ride home in the daytime with any nice boy. (7) If a girl knows that a boy is of good character, she should certainly refuse to listen to criticism that seems based on nothing but jealousy. If she has taken away the boy friend of another girl, however, she must certainly expect to hear things she doesn't like said about herself, and also about the boy. My advice is to be careful about appropriating any other girl's boy friend. You wouldn't like it yourself, would you?

NOBODY GETS A BAD REPUTATION UNDESERVEDLY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are two fellows who just got back from overseas and the girls we used to go with are giving us a hard time. They are telling everybody that we have changed while we were away, and are giving us bad reputations.

We haven't done anything fiendish, but the girls seem to expect us to be angels, and get mad if we even want a kiss.

What should we do? Can anything be done about these old girl friends? — Joey

Dear Joey:

Only you and your buddy know whether or not you have given these "old girl friends" of yours reason to take the attitude toward you that they do. And if you have nobody but yourselves to blame for the fact that they have given you bad reputations. It probably isn't "angels" that the girls expect you to be, but merely gentlemen.

Nobody gets a bad reputation undeservedly. Your letter makes me believe that you had better do some work on yourselves if you want to be accepted as friends by nice girls.

MATERIAL SUCCESS

By ALICE ALDEN

JERSEY is still going strong even as early spring fashions make their appearance. In fact, many of the new dresses make much use of a thin, supple wool jersey weave. Grabois does a late winter dress in gray wool jersey and gives it the corselet look, feminine and pleasing when worn by the right type. Expert darting creates the line which is bisected at the bosom by a flange of gleaming black satin. The satin makes cuffs for the easy sleeves.

CANDLES ON LUNCHEON TABLE?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

As a wedding present we received a very handsome pair of silver candlesticks, which we always use when we invite guests to dinner. next month I am to have my bridge club to luncheon here for the first time. (I've just recently joined.) Would it be correct for me to use the candlesticks as table-decoration at this luncheon? I wouldn't have the candles lighted, as our dining room is a very light room. — Patricia D.

No. It's not correct to use candlesticks as decoration on a luncheon table. Candles are meant to provide light, and since your dining room doesn't need light in the daytime, the candlesticks, holding the unlighted candles, would look, and would be, out of place.

WEDDING PRESENT TO BE SENT BY BOTH

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband's secretary has worked for him for a little over four years. I have never met her, but we frequently speak together over the telephone. Now she is leaving next month to be married, and my husband and I went together to choose a very handsome wedding present for her. We haven't yet decided about how the enclosed card should be signed. Should be sign the card with his name only, or should both our names be signed? — G.S.B.

This wedding present should be sent by both . . . so both names on the card to be enclosed.

EATING SHERBET

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Until last evening I had never seen sherbet served with the main course. Isn't this sealy unusual? I quickly decided that since the sherbet was served with the main course I'd eat it with the fork served with the main course. Was that the right thing to do? — Perplexed

Yes. As you say, one seldom encounters sherbet served with the main course, although it is the custom in some parts of the country. When the sherbet is served with the main course, it is eaten with the fork. (When it is served as dessert, the spoon is used.)

"NO ASSISTANCE," PLEASE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My girl friend says it's entirely proper to help a boy put on his coat when he is leaving her house or even when they are leaving a theater after a movie. I don't agree with this, and I think boys resent this "assistance." Who's right? — Sallie.

You are!

INTRODUCE HIM TO HOSTESS ONLY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When I have been invited to a party and later I ask the hostess if I may bring a young man who was in college with me and who is visiting in town, do I, when we arrive, introduce him only to the hostess or do I take over all the introductions? — Gloria L.

You introduce him to the hostess, and then let her, as hostess, make all other introductions.

'Doris I' Wanted Hungarian Kalacs

READERS' COLUMN CONDUCTED BY MARY MOORE

REMINDER:

On Dec. 22 in this column there was a letter from Doris I. who asked for recipe for Kalacs and Kiffli, which she wanted to make for her Hungarian husband. I gave her the recipe for Kalacs but have received another one from a reader who saw mine and writes thus:

"I been a reader of your column many a year. I learn a lot from it. . . I often wonder if you are a real person or did somebody only make your column. . .you sound very much real . . . you wrote you were born here in Canada. . .not very long ago you got a recipe for Kalacs (Kalach) for a lady whose housban is Hungarian well so are we. . . the recipe you gave is all wrong. . . Kalacs is a Poppy seed roll . . .I know because I was born in Hungary and raised there . . .after 27 years is my new country I still cook 75 per cent Hungarian as my housban is also Hungarian. . .kindly overlook my spelling mistakes. . .

KALACS (Courtesy Theresa) 6 cups flour (mixed 3 c. cake and 3 c. bread flour), 1 cup sugar, 6 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 pint sour cream, 1 lb. butter (or 1-2 lb. butter and 1-2 shortening). Mix flour, sugar, butter, baking powder, salt with hands on floured board or mixing bowl, until it forms like coarse meal, then beat the egg yolks separately until they are nice and smooth, then add the sour cream to the smoothly beaten egg yolks. Now add it to the first mixture, and combine it neatly until you have a nice pastry. Form a large ball, divide it in 4 parts. Roll out 1 part of the pastry to fit a large cake pan; spread the following filling on it: jam (cooked without certo), nuts (ground), poppyseed, cooked apples, etc. (of course sweet the filling with sugar). After the first spread of filling roll out another ball of pastry and place it on the first filling, and cover again with filling, then roll out the third ball of pastry and cut in 1-inch wide strips and place on crosswise on the filling. Mix some egg whites and smear some on the top of the pastry. Bake at 375 deg. for 1-2 hour. Cut nice pieces when pastry is cold. Of course do not leave in pan but take it out on wax paper. Make and bake cookies out of the 4th piece of pastry.

"I call this cake Mom.— Theresa."

ANSWER:

Thank you so much Theresa. I did not change your description one bit because I think everyone will be able to follow who is interested. I am so glad you added that you called the cake "Mom" for a year ago reader asked for "Mom Kuchen" (a European cake with poppy seeds) and I was not able to help her. So you may have helped her—M.C. are her initals, and I am sure you will have helped Doris I.

Yes I am real. My real name is Mary Moore, my two real children are Pete and Marianne. The day before this appears in the paper Marianne will have graduated as a real nurse and Pete a real medical student will have come home for the week-end to escort her to the graduating dance, for she is an engaged young lady and her army officer fiancee is stationed 2,500 miles away. Nobody helps me write this column but interested folk like you. Thanks again. Do you know what Kiffli is? Doris I. wants that too. I nearly forgot to repeat I am Canadian-born and have lived here all but two years of my life.

Beauty

MAKE-UP FOR ELDERLY WOMEN

Older women can wear rouge and lipstick. It makes them feel younger, gayer, braver, so why not? To say that great-grandma shouldn't make herself a prettier face is just plain silly.

The old argument is that make-up accentuates the marks of age. Everything depends upon the selection of colors in rouge and lipstick, the manner of their application. Properly applied, cosmetics make a woman look younger

There is no vitue in pale cheeks and colorless lips. A delicate powder will give Grandma's complexion softness and life. She must be careful not to fluff it on too lavishly. It is better to add than subtract.

There are new peach shades that enhance a skin that has taken on a transparent quality as often happens when birthdays accumulate.

If the complexion carries a yellow cast, it is nice to have a special powder mixed at a cosmetic bar. Then rouge and lipstick must be an orange-red to form a harmonious color plan. Blue-reds are seldom becoming.

The elderly woman whose skin has retained some of the freshness of her young days should look over new offerings in make-up. She will find rouge in delicate rose shades with lipstick to match.

OTTAWA (CP)—A fine point of law involving the judicial powers of the Law Society of Upper Canada is being argued before the Supreme Court of Canada.

It is the first time since the society was formed in 1822 that one of its decisions has been challenged before the Supreme Court. The society is the administrative body for the legal profession in Ontario, the equivalent of bar associations in other provinces.

Open 14 Tenders For Seaway Job

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—An apparent low bid of $990,900 for the Robinson bay lock excavation on the St. Lawrence seaway has been submitted by Jack and Jim Maser Inc., of Brownstown, Pa.

Fourteen bids for the job were opened Wednesday by the United States Corps of Engineers, the design and construction agent for the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp.

The government estimate on the Robinson bay project, second major job in the U.S. phase of the seaway program, was $1,377,120.

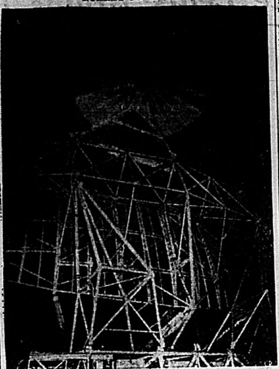
GUARDS CONTINENT



Radar antennae, such as this one somewhere in Ontario, are part of the radar chain strung across the continent along the Canada-U.S. border. The antennae whirl ceaselessly through 360 degrees, 24 hours a day inside three radar domes. In event of an air attack on this continent it would be the duty of the RCAF radar station to plot the route of the enemy planes, marshal the interceptors from the fighter bases and bring them into position where they could shoot down the attackers. (CP from National Defence).

Newsmen Get First Chance To Inspect Radar Station

Reporters and photographers have been permitted to visit a radar station for the first time. The RCAF escorted a party to a radar site somewhere in Ontario last Jan. 12. Reporters and pictures were subject to certain restrictions as to detail in order to conform with security arrangements. This story tells of the role radar will play in North America's defence.

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SOMEWHERE IN ONTARIO (CP)—This radar site is on top of a hill, high above the valleys, plains and winding rivers.

Inside the three radar domes which brood over the countryside like three enormous bulbous eyes the radar antennae whirl ceaselessly through 360 degrees, around and around, 24 hours a day.

"Will the enemy come?"

"If he does, from what direction?"

FIRST DEFENCE LINE

Here, at a place which cannot be identified because of security, 280 RCAF men and women and civilians wait and watch—and wait and watch. They are part of North America's first line of defence in event of air attack from the north.

This radar site is an integral part of the Pine Tree chain, strung across the continent along the Canada-U.S. border. For each such station there is at least one fighter squadron, Canadian or American.

Though Pine Tree is a warning chain its more vital task is control of interceptor aircraft, the long-range, all - weather CF-100 twin-engine jet.

In event of air attack on this continent it would be the duty of this RCAF station and others like it to plot the route of the enemy planes, marshal the interceptors from the fighter bases and bring them into position where they could shoot down the attackers.

TAKE NO CHANCES

Even today a similar job is carried out constantly. There are often planes in the air which cannot be immediately identified and it is necessary to send up an interceptor to make positive identification.

The cardinal rule is: "Take no chances." Every plane must be considered hostile unless it is proved otherwise.

Basically radar has not changed since Sir Robert Watson-Watt of Britain invented it before the Second World War. But there have been improvements in range, the fineness of the beam and other factors.

Simply, radar is a pulse of radio energy. The signal travels through space until it comes in contact with an object and then rebounds. By measuring how far this beam travels one can determine the distance between the antenna which sends out the signal and the object. Another similar calculation determines the height of the object.

IMPROVED EQUIPMENT

Range of the radar equipment here is secret but it is believed considerably greater than Second World War radar. One of radar's drawbacks is that it doesn't follow the curvature of the earth but shoots straight out into space. This, of course, limits its range. That is why the site is atop a hill.

What Canada and the U.S. want now is more early warning of approaching planes. That is why construction of another radar line along the 55th parallel will start soon and plans are being laid for a third line in the Arctic.

Canadian interceptors are spread across the continent but with radar control of their movements they could be brought quickly to bear at the point where they were most needed. That is the great advantage of radar as a defensive weapon.

The ranges of the radar sites so overlap across the continent that even when one site has to "off the air" for maintenance purposes, its area can be covered by the sites or sectors on either side.

This station alone cost millions of dollars (the U.S. paid for two-thirds of Pine Tree, Canada the remaining third). The amount of electronic equipment required for one site is almost incredible and this equipment is not cheap.

Speedy Action

CLINTON, Ont. (CP) — Speedy action by town constable Richard Timleck early Thursday resulted in the arrest of two men in connection with a jail break at Goderich, 13 miles northwest of here.

About an hour after the alert was sounded, Timleck arrested George Mulholland, 31, of London, Ont., and James B. McKay, 26, whose hometown was not immediately available.

Police said both were to be transferred to the Ontario reformatory at Guelph. Clinton is 33 miles northwest of London.

Princess Irene Rather Mean To U.S. Women

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Princess Irene Mdivani of what is now the Soviet republic of Georgia has come up with a succinct, albeit unflattering, appraisal of American women.

The princess, who formerly headed the Paris house of Schiaparelli, said Wednesday. "The American woman drinks too much milk. She is too preoccupied with her bust measurement. She dresses unwisely to please herself rather than a man, and she worries too much about staying young. Otherwise, she's quite nice."

POLICE SIRENS SILENCED

CHICAGO (AP)—Police commissioner Timothy O'Connor Wednesday ordered sirens disconnected on 80 traffic patrol cars to reduce accidents involving police vehicles. The commissioner reasoned that without blaring sirens policemen will drive more cautiously.

PICTON

Active Community Program Planned by Chamber Directors

PICTON.—Plans for an active program of community betterment were discussed Tuesday night, when the newly elected directors of Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce met to elect officers and committee chairmen.

Among suggested promotions were pressing for a bridge to connect the county to points east; an elaborate decoration of Main street during the Christmas season to tie in with the famed Santa Claus parade; a town and county beautification contest.

Continuation of the Fishing Hall of Fame competition, industrial and tourist promotion, and other activities, were also favored.

More frequent meetings for all members were favored with interesting programs to be featured.

An oyster supper is to be held during the week of Feb. 21st.

W. G. McLean was elected as president with Woodrow Blakely as 1st vice-president and Phil Dodds, 2nd vice-president. Wilfred MacArthur will continue as secretary-treasurer.

Heads of committees who will select their own members are, Fishing competition Nick Welsh; Business Men's committee to promote sales, store hours, holiday observance, Woodrow Blakely; roads and signs, Barney Hepburn; tourist, David Wattam; industrial and civic, Sam Gentile; agriculture, Don Taylor; memberships, past presidents and directors.

Entertainment and program, Phil Dodds, with Dr. R. F. Evans, chairman for oyster supper.

Community service, co-operation by service clubs and other groups, Major McKenzie.

Bridge and development, H. G. Blakely.

Town beautification, Gordon Campbell.

Santa parade committee, Howard Seeley, George Ward, Ken Smith, Phil Dodds, Sam Gentile, E. J. Williams, to elect own chairman.

Retiring president, Sam Gentile, expressed thanks for co-operation and urged committees whose members would be really active.

It was favored that an industrial committee be set up to assist Mayor H. J. McFarland, who has been responsible for meeting interested persons. It was felt there should be a special fund for promotion and entertainment of visitors.

President-elect McLean said that there is a definite place for a Chamber of Commerce in the community and that it can deal with many projects other groups cannot handle.

Added to the list of directors were Ken Smith, George Ward, Howard Seeley.

COLTS TONIGHT!

The Cornwall Colts, who by the time this reaches the front verandah, could be in a two-way tie for top slot with the Whitby Dunlops, are the special guests of the Memos in Memorial Arena tonight—and that, kiddies, should be a battle of the season. Should the Bouchermen unsaddle the Colties from down east, it will give them a three-way split of the top rung, providing, of course, that Clinton bowed to the Colts last night.

The Memos will have to maintain their high-gear stride to keep pace with the galloping Colts. And the Memos' record for the past eleven games is not to be sneezed at. They have won seven, tied two and lost two, four of the victories being on foreign ice. Both defeats were administered by the Whitby Dunlops.

And their record against the Colts is not bad either. The Memos have won four of the six games played against the down-east foemen, two of them being 2-0 and 5-0 shutouts. But as was said in a previous column, statistics and former records are so much water under the bridge. The Colts want that top spot—and want it badly, so you can plunk down the wife's insurance money that tonight's tussle will be a diller-thriller.

Special prizes will be given out tonight. They will be awarded through the medium of program numbers and are in addition to the regular prizes given out at the Memos' home games.

OLDTIMERS

We have not received any names of the oldtimer hockey players at yet, so please send them along, willya? They are necessary to the mailing of notices for a special meeting being held Sunday, February 13th in the Engineers' Hall, where, it is hoped, a large attendance will be on hand to reorganize the Oldtimers' Hockey Association. Rush them in to this department as soon as possible. Do it now!

WHAT A LIFE!

There were high jinks, satire, near-insults and a general letting down of hair at the Baseball Writers' annual dinner in New York a few days ago. Reports say the skits were out of this world and the typewriting laddybucks and their cohorts plus a host of special guests had a whale of a time.

One of the highlights was the presentation of a skit of the TV show "This Is Your Life," with the show's emcee Ralph Edwards there in person. Edwards primed Eddie Stanky to bring in Leo Durocher saying it was "his life" on the show and did the same with Durocher telling him it was Stanky's life.

The skit went into action with Durocher and Edwards in the spotlight, with the Lip thinking it was Stanky's life about to be portrayed. The final act went like this.

There is a blackout and a musical interlude to denote the passage of time. Then the lights hit on centre stage.

Edwards—Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to another "This Is Your Life" program.

Durocher (aside) — Eddie Stanky . . . This they call a life?

Edwards—Tonight's celebrity, as usual, doesn't know his is the story we are about to tell.

Durocher (aside) — Of all the crummy formats for a TV show . . . I'll bet its Hooper rating is not one-tenth of Jack Benny's on a night when I'm not on it.

Edwards—but in the studio tonight and ready to take the lead role . . .

Durocher (aside)—Huh, Stanky. With a bum guest it's gotta be a bum show.

Edwards—A man known throughout the baseball world . . .

Durocher (aside)—A phony no one ever heard of.

Edwards—A brilliant big league manager . . .

Durocher (aside)—I taught the jerk everything he knows.

Edwards—Today the No. 1 man in baseball . . .

Durocher (aside)—The most overrated busher in the world . . .

Edwards—LEO DUROCHER!

Big Seven

By THE ANADIAN PRESS

Montreal's Jean Beliveau scored the Canadiens' winning goal against Toronto Thursday but failed to gain much ground in the scoring race as five of hockey's Big Seven added to their point totals Thursday night.

Beliveau leads in points and goals, with 56 points, 29 of them goals. Teammate Bernie Geoffrion picked up an assist to bring his point total to 52.

Maurice Richard went pointless Thursday but remained comfortably in third place with 51 points.

Kenny Mosdell scored one goal to become the fourth Montreal sniper to hit 20 goals. He has 45 points.

Detroit's Gordie Howe could not add to his scoring total Thursday.

Sid Smith of Toronto scored his 26th goal and Montreal's Bert Olmstead assisted on his league-leading 35th in the same game to remain deadlocked with 42 points apiece.

Terry Sawchuk of Detroit leads the shutout department with 10. Boston's Fern Flaman, with 116 minutes, is the most penalized player.

Young Star's 29th Goal Gives Habs Two-Point Top Margin; Don McKenney Boston Hero

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Don McKenney is one reason why coach Lynn Patrick wants to build up Boston Bruins' hockey farm system.

McKenney, one of the hottest prospects to join the Boston club in years, is having a brilliant rookie year. Thursday night he pulled Bruins out of a jam by scoring a third-period goal that gave them a 1-1 NHL tie with the rough Detroit Red Wings.

It was the 16th goal of the 1954-55 campaign for McKenney, a 20-year-old centre who ranks high with such young Boston marksmen as fiery Leo Labine, Lorne Ferguson and Real Chevrefils.

BELIVEAU SCORES WINNER

Another young star, Jean Beliveau, was cutting up a bit in Montreal, too. He fired a third-period goal that broke a 2-2 deadlock between Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens.

McKenney caught the eye of a Boston scout before he graduated from Barrie Flyers of the Ontario junior A league and went with the American League Hershey Bears for one year.

McKenney's Thursday goal, which deadlocked the score, made him the leading rookie goal scorer, one ahead of Chicago's Eddie Litzenberger.

The second-place Red Wings appeared headed for their 30th win of the season before McKenney whipped the puck past Terry Sawchuk at the 34-second mark of the last period. Chevrefils and Labine were given assists.

Until then, Tony Leswick's goal at 11:35 of the second period looked good enough to stand up. The engagement was watched by 10,797 customers. The tie gave the fourth-place Bruins a 10-point lead over New York Rangers.

Beliveau's 29th goal of the season, scored before 14,514 Montreal Forum fans, increased Canadiens' margin atop the league to two points and the Montrealers have a game in hand over Detroit.

The victory also spoiled a Leaf comeback. Toronto, down 2-0 going into the second period, had tied it up.

Kenny Mosdell and Floyd Curry scored the other Montreal goals. Leftwinger Sid Smith, and rightwinger Ron Stewart, playing his first game since being knocked out with a jaw fracture, tallied for Leafs. Smith's goal was his 26th of the season.

Harry Lumley, leading the Vezina Trophy race, had a three-goal edge over Sawchuk going into the game but saw it dwindle to one at the end.

No games are scheduled tonight, but there will be six during the weekend. Saturday, it's the last-place Chicago Black Hawks at Toronto, the fifth-place New York Rangers at Montreal and Detroit at Boston. Sunday, Toronto is at Chicago. Montreal goes to New York and Detroit is at Boston.

50TH ANNIVERSARY

TORONTO (CP)—Wood, Gundy and Company, investment house, officially celebrated its 50th anniversary Wednesday. Although now international in scope, the company was founded in Toronto Feb. 1, 1905. Today it has offices in 15 cities throughout Canada and in New York, Chicago and London.

Kid Gavilan Mystery Man

NEW YORK (AP)—Kid Gavilan, the known quantity in so many fights, plays the role of Mr. X tonight at Madison Square Garden in his bout with slugger Ernie Durando.

Nobody knows how much the Cuban has left, whether the cement jaw that absorbed the toughest punches in 117 fights has begun to crumble. It remains to be seen if the mambo routine and the three-a-day chores of a dancing master of ceremonies have taken their toll from his legs.

Gavilan and Durando, a crude puncher from Bayonne, N.J., don't belong in the same ring if—and it's a big if—Gavilan is 50 per cent of the Gavilan of old.

The odds favoring Gavilan at 1 to 3 indicate the expert opinion still thinks they don't belong in the same ring. Still, Gavilan's unimpressive (to say the least) fights against Bobo Olson and Johnny Saxton, plus a three-month layoff, hardly justify unlimited faith in his current ability.

Ike Williams in 1948 and Carmen Basilio in 1953 are the only men who ever knocked Gavilan off his feet. He got up each time, so he never has been stopped in a career dating back to 1943.

In the latter part of the game Barbara Thrasher and Betty Musclow were the scorers for Quinte, Barbara scoring nine of Quinte's 18 points.

Quinte line-up—Alta Laing (3), Annette Ducette (2), Carolyn Hatfield (2), Betty Musclow (2), Barbara Thrasher (9), Shirley LaRue (1), Lynda Canning, Leslea Anderson, Lois MacDonald, Gladys George, Helen Ashley, Joan MacDonald.

Elevator Shoe Is a Heel, 'Pon My Soul'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Santa Claus of Basketball, Sax Elliot, didn't even flinch Thursday night when his latest gift—the elevator shoe—got the cold treatment from coaches.

Even the second straight loss to Utah by his Los Angeles State College team, 81-49, failed to depress him.

"Say what you will, the team that goes into play with the 'ripple rebounder,'" as Elliot calls his new shoe, "will have an advantage."

Elliot startled the basketball world Wednesday night by using his elevator shoes for the first time. One player wore shoes with soles six inches thick. Diablos lost to Utah anyway, 77-38.

Elliot's "ripple rebounder" add only about two inches to a player's height. The sole is cemented on a regular basketball shoe. The corrugated teeth are made of plastic rubber.

Various members of college basketball's rules committee have criticized the new shoe. Some said it was dangerous. Others said it violated the spirit of the rules or was unsportsmanlike.

Elliot revealed he may have more than an academic interest in his new type of shoe. He said he planned to manufacture them.

Canadian Football Commissioner Is Vital Necessity, Says Trafton

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Canadian professional football clubs should get together and select a league commissioner or face the prospects of serious trouble, it was said Thursday.

George Trafton, former coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers and for many years prominent in the National Football League in the United States, made the statement.

Trafton, in real estate since leaving Winnipeg in 1953, recommended Toronto sports columnist Ted Reeve as "a fine man to take charge as commissioner."

Reeve, Trafton continued, holds the respect and confidence of players and club officials alike.

Trafton, himself famous as a star of the old Chicago Bears, is no stranger to one of the major problems confronting the Canadian and American leagues — player raiding. Trafton was an assistant coach for Los Angeles Rams. When he shifted to Canada, several players followed—notably the Rams' all-NFL tackle, Dick Huffman.

"Each club up there has about 40 executives, and sooner or later most of them want to run the club and the league. No one wants to pull together. But they'd better, before they kill the well known goose," Trafton declared.

In Toronto, Reeve said he is not the man for the job.

"I am afraid I am a bit too dug-in, as it were in the older traditions of the game to be able to adjudicate fairly on the international aspects of the game," he said. "I would rather see a more contemporary sports figure take over any commissionership that may, or may not, be needed."

Littler Leads Phoenix Open

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Youthful Gene Littler, who came out of the U.S. navy a year ago to become a professional golfing leader, calmly leads a crowded field into the second round of the $15,000 Phoenix Open today.

Littler, 24, reached the 18th green Thursday needing an eight-foot putt for a birdie to finish with a 66 and take the lead from three other professionals. With the coolness of a seasoned veteran, he sank it to finish four-under-par.

That left him a stroke ahead of Walter Burkemo, former PGA champion from Franklin, Mich., Johnny Palmer, veteran from Charlotte, N.C., and Jack Fleck, the head pro for municipal courses at Davenport, Iowa.

Because greens were frosty early in the morning and the start was delayed, nine of the 150 golfers failed to finish. They'll complete their rounds today.

TOPS IN COURAGE

John Wilson, pitcher for the Milwaukee Braves, was named the "most courageous athlete of 1954" at the 51st annual dinner of the Philadelphia Sports Writers' association. Twice told that he would never play ball again, Jim, who will be 33 on Feb. 20, refused to quit, and last season posted an 8-4 record. In 1945, he suffered a fractured skull when hit by a ball and, in 1947, his leg was broken. — Central Press Canadian.

Baseball Same As Officials Experts Say

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Don't blame a hitter if he gets a three-bagger instead of a home run—the difference might be in the ball he tried to slug out of the park.

That is the view of Arthur (Dyzie) Mansfield, Universit of Wisconsin baseball coach, and Robert Francis, professor of physical education at Wisconsin, who recently completed a two-year scientific study on official major league baseballs.

"Our findings show there should be standardized specifications for baseballs designated as official," they said Thursday.

"Only two rules exist now. These apply to size and weight."

Thirty-nine of 86 baseballs were found too large, and one too sumall. Of 104 balls weighed, 25 were either too light or too heavy.

Mansfield and Francis said there were no regulations relating to resiliency, thickness or strength of leather cover, height of stitching, character of wool yarn used or rebounding performance.

MARMORA — Stirling were visitors to the Marmora arena on Wednesday and retired beaten by 4-1. It was a game which after the first period, developed more or less into shinny.

The game was evenly fought and the goalies by their good performances provided the main interest. Marmora scored half way through the first through Doyle on assists from C. Trumble and Nayler.

K. Trumble got the other goal of that period being assisted by Maynes and Leonard. Endeavors by Stirling to draw level were unavailing in this and the next frame in which Lavender added a goal on an assist from K. Trumble.

Jones raised the homesters score to four in the third period with Blute getting the assist. What looked as a probable shut out for Killian was frustrated by Whalen at 11.40 in the third as he netted on Hurst's assist.

Eight penalties were issued, six being to Stirling. The attendance was again down to a hundred.

Teams:

Stirling: goal, Carr; defence, Tanner, Pukancik; centre, Wright; wings, B. Bastedo, Stapley; alternates, Mason, McCrory, Hurst, Whalen, Wannamaker, Foster, D. Bastedo, McMurray, Hermiston.

Marmora: goal: Killian; defence, Gray, Leonard; centre, Maynes; wings, Lavender, K. Trumble; alternates, Jones, Mantle, Blute, Naylor, Darrah, Sweet, Moloney, Doyle, C.Trumble.

Referees: P. W. McIntosh, D. Free.

Plan Junior All-Star Game

TORONTO (CP)—Plans for an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A all-star game were discussed at a meeting of the junior A council Thursday night. Tentative plans call for the game to be played prior to the 1955-56 junior A schedule.

The league champions would play an all-star team chosen from the other seven clubs of the eight-team league.

The subject will be brought before the council again at the next meeting in March.

Hamilton Tigers Boss Man Favors Split Gate

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats lost $5,000 last year and stand to lose as much as $70,000 unless expense controls such as the Big Four's no-raiding pact with the National Football League are put into effect, Hamilton president Jack Gaudaur said Thursday.

Speaking at a Quarterback Club meeting, Gaudaur said Hamilton last year received $30,000 from CBC and $50,000 from NBC in return for television rights. Without these "pennies from heaven there might not have been a Big Four this year," said Gaudaur. "We don't know whether we'll have money from television this year."

Gaudaur said he felt the full measure of proposals, as agreed to by 75 per cent of the Big Four, should be adopted by the league. The split gate, he said, is just another way of preventing the rich (Montreal or Toronto) getting richer and the poor (Hamilton and Ottawa) getting poorer.

Minor Hockey

The second place Booth Radio crew pulled the upset of the midget season schedule last night when they buried the league leading Northern Electric crew under a 7-0 score. It was only the second loss of the year for the powerful Northern sextet and leaves them with a one point lead over Booths with a single game left in the schedule. Robb Royals strengthened their grip on third place with a 4-2 win over Lewis Auto Electric while Big "A" won their second game of the year, 3-2 over Stewart Warner.

Ab Wright led the Booth in their upset, scoring two goals and assisting on two others while Gary Gee tallied twice and helped on one. Garrison also netted a pair of goals with Brant getting the odd one and assists going to Buller and Boomhower.

Jack Gill was top man in Robb's 4-2 win, scoring once and setting up two other markers. Musgrove claimed one goal and one assist with Latchford and G. Green also first goal for the Auto gang on scoring. Jack O'Neil fired the a pass from Kellar while Carl O'Neil netted the second tally, unassisted.

Big "A" Company were sparked by Frank Cris as he scored once and assisted on the other two goals. Hill and Thompson also hit the hemp with Dave Coe and Rogers drawing assists. Jack Elliott and Don Cathers potted unassisted tallies for Stewart Warner.

Chico Vejar Embarks On 'Third Comeback'

NEW YORK (AP)—Chico Vejar, once a hot favorite of television fight fans, has embarked on what he calls "my third comeback" at the ripe old age of 23.

Only 2½ weeks out of the U.S. Army, the collegian from Stamford, Conn., is sporting 12 new front teeth and a reconstructed jaw as a result of a plane crash that put him in hospital for 3½ months.

The swarthy youngster doesn't look any different facially from the busy fighter of two years ago who rose to a No. 5 welterweight ranking with an aggressive style and a lion's heart.

Then he was deflated by Chuck Davey, another TV idol of two years ago who in turn was sent into oblivion and retirement by Kid Gavilan and Vince Martinez.

Vejar started his comeback last Friday with a three-round technical knockout over Riggie Alotti at Stamford. That made his record 61 victories, four defeats and one draw. He has stopped 32 opponents.

Ted Kluszewski Signs With Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Redlegs Thursday landed the big one in their 1955 contract net.

Ted Kluszewski, who already was drawing the biggest salary ever paid a Cincinnati player, signed his 1955 agreement for "a large raise."

Kluszewski's new salary was not disclosed but it was estimated at between $35,000 and $50,000.

FLYING FRENCHMAN FOR RED WINGS

"He has no shot, can't take a pass and gets too many foolish penalties, but he's wonderful," says Detroit's General Manager Jack Adams of Marcel Bonin, and rival NHL players agree. Bonin, a former weight-lifter who is 170 pounds of muscle, is credited with leading Detroit's surge to second place in the NHL. Besides such extra-curricular activities as glass-chewing and bear-wrestling, the flamboyant Frenchman has scored 25 points in this his second NHL season — 11 goals and 14 assists. The darling of Detroit fans, Bonin is known as 'one Boom." — Central Press Canadian.

GETS SECOND CHANCE TO MAKE LEAFS

An ankle injury to Maple Leaf centre Dudy Migay gives young Brian Cullen a second chance to prove himself in the NHL. Cullen, who led the St. Catharines Juniors to the 1954 Memorial Cup, had an eight-game trial with Leafs at the start of this season but failed to make the grade. Sent to Pittsburgh for seasoning, Brian got 11 goals and 23 assists in 33 games. He has been recalled from Pittsburgh and expects to see action in Leafs' next three games. — Central Press Canadian.

Sports Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) — A recent visitor to the Florida Keys, where Ted Williams has his fishing camp and devotes nearly every waking moment to making life tough for our underwater friends, says it is easy to understand why the great home-run slugger is trying to fight off the pressure being brought on him to report to Boston Red Sox next month.

"Down there," he says, "Ted is an entirely different human being from the fellow you've known all these years around the ball fields. He's at peace. If he's had a persecution complex, he forgets it when he has a rod in his hands. He talks to perfect strangers, especially about fishing, which is his one great passion in life.

"He lives by himself and takes care of his own house, even cooking his own meals. When he isn't fishing he reads a lot and plays jazz records. He has a fine collection of them. You don't have to be around him five minutes to know that he sincerely wants to go on living just as he is for the rest of his days."

Subscription TV May Be Hot Subject in Next Few Weeks

By WAYNE OLIVER

NEW YORK (AP)—The biggest battle in television's short history may break out shortly when the Federal Communications Commission begins formal consideration of subscription TV.

Fighting more heated and intense even than that which raged over color is in prospect over the proposal to put a tollgate on channels over which the public has been receiving free entertainment.

Proponents of subscription TV say it would not interfere with free programs but would enable viewers, by paying a fee, to see first-run films, hit Broadway plays and other features not now available, and they say their surveys indicate the public would be willing to pay for premium entertainment, free of commercials.

Public arguments have been raging for months over the practical and technical aspects of pay-as-see video but those points will remain immaterial until the FCC approves or disapproves. The commission is expected to take up the issue in the next few weeks.

Many complexities cloud the issue, but the overriding problem is public reaction to any change by the FCC of its historic ban on the use by any fee service of channels reserved for home listeners and viewers. It could well become a hot political issue.

Consequently, all signs indicate that it may be years before the issue is settled.

With subscription TV a station would be allowed for a certain number of hours a week to scramble its telecasts for premium type shows. Only viewers who had paid their fees and had the required unscrambling devices for their sets would be able to watch. Three companies have conducted tests of toll TV systems, Zenith Radio Corp. of Chicago, Skiatron Electronics of New York, and International Telemeter Corp. of Los Angeles, affiliate of Paramount pictures. One type of unscrambler provides for the viewer to insert coins in a slot. Another operates with a coded punch card and the viewer would buy at a corner drugstore or order by mail.

Powerful antagonists are lining up on opposite sides even before public reaction becomes articulate.

Sports promoters, who already are keeping some of the events off free TV, generally regard subscription TV as a potential gold mine. Ralph Bellamy, president of Actors' Equity, said it could be a boon to the legitimate theatre and actors. Movie companies have been noncommittal for the most part but have been eyeing toll TV with interest.

Movie theatres, on the other hand have set up an organization to fight subscription video. They fear that if it could show the same films they were running, even though a fee were charged, it would be a greater threat than free TV with its sponsored shows and old movies.

Board chairman David Sarnoff of Radio Corp. of America, parent company of NBC, also has come out strongly against the proposal.

The National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters has taken no stand on the issue, but individual telecasters soon may have to stand up and be counted.

Mayors and Reeves Suggest Govt. Have Toll Road System

TORONTO (CP) — The Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves today suggested that the provincial government consider establishing a system of toll roads to relieve highways' construction and maintenance costs and facilitate movement of traffic.

The association, in a brief presented to the government at a meeting with Premier Frost and the cabinet, asked that such roads be considered on the understanding that the toll would apply only where free-travel highways are also available.

In this way a motorist would use the special facilities by his own choice and at his own expense, the brief said.

The delegation was headed by Mayor Allan Rush of London, association president.

The association asked that the cost of education be more equitably apportioned between the provincial and municipal governments. It said the municipal contribution to education has increased three times since 1945-1946.

Expenditures of municipalities for welfare services increased 22.6 per cent in the four-year period 1950-1953, the brief added. In 1953 9.19 per cent of municipal expenditures went toward provision of social welfare and health services, "services which the association contends should not be borne so substantially at the municipal level."

The association said the present system of health unit grants requires revision to make such grants applicable to all municipalities in the province. At present the grants are made only to small municipalities.

It urged that municipalities be relieved of all costs of administration of justice, including operation of district, county and city jails.

It asked the provincial government to establish a permanent panel of two experienced officials to act as chairmen of all arbitration boards appointed under provisions of the fire departments act and the police act.

The association asked the provincial government to meet the unemployment problem and to reimburse municipalities for welfare assistance to jobless.

Must Conform

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner said Thursday imported cheese must conform to the same regulations governing Canadian-made cheese.

Gordon K. Fraser (PC—Peterborough) asked in the Commons Jan. 26 whether cheese imported from New Zealand and other countries is subject to the same inspection as Canadian cheese.

SUBWAY PLANS READY

TORONTO (CP) — Preliminary plans for the proposed east-west Bloor street subway are ready and will be considered by the Toronto Transit Commission within a month, vice-chairman Allan Lamport said Thursday. The plans will "almost certainly" involve a combination expressway and transit line, he said. If approved by the TTC, they will be put before the metropolitan board of control.

Memorial Plans For Saunders Are Released

TORONTO (CP) — A memorial demonstrating hydro power, water and light, has been proposed as a tribute to the late Robert H. Saunders, Ontario Hydro chairman who died recently from injuries suffered in a plane crash near London, Ont.

Plans for the proposed memorial were released Thursday by Dr. Richard L. Hearn, who succeeded Mr. Saunders as chairman.

The suggested memorial has a 39-foot-high parabolic arch over a 15-foot fountain. Floodlights sweeping upward from the base of the arch and continuous spiralling water would symcolize the relationship between water and light. A square stone pedestal would be located in the centre of the fountain.

The proposed memorial is subject to approval of the directors of the memorial fund.

USES HORSE SENSE

BRANTFORD (CP) — A horse showed some horse sense Thursday and walked off the job in six-below-zero weather. At 6 a.m. a dairy phoned police and told them the horse was gone. It was found 30 minutes later, standing in the lee of a building near the dairy, out of the wind and cold. The horse took along a wagon loaded with milk, too.

Song Stars Team in Romantic Film "Young at Heart."

Doris Day and Frank Sinatra, teamed romantically in "Young At Heart," Warner Bros. feature now at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre, have one thing in common.

Both sang their way to stardom. Neither of them planned on a career of dramatic acting but both are established in that field.

In fact, Sinatra, without singing a note, won an Academy Award for "From Here to Eternity," and in the new Warner Bros. picture both Doris and Frank have roles that call for a combination of dramatic talent as well as song.

Although the Hollywood rule book doesn't say you have to be a singer to become a movie star, it sure helps.

Doris had been singing with dance bands, at dusty little night clubs and on phonograph records when Director Michael Curtiz decided she would make a likely candidate for film fame in "Romance on the High Seas." Starred in her first picture, she was on the exhibitors' poll of the top ten money makers by her third year out.

Bing Crosby, Gordon MacRae, Guy Mitchell and other male stars were all recognized as singers before they had a chance to demonstrate to their followers that they could act as well as chirp.

The list of feminine stars who sang their way into dramatic roles is a long one and includes such luminaries as Ann Blyth, Peggy Lee, Kathryn Grayson, Jane Powell and Betty Hutton.

Jane Wyman, recognized by Hollywood as a solid dramatic actress who scored recently in "So Big" and "Magnificent Obsession," was once Jane Durrell, a midwest radio singer.

And Judy Garland, who recently completed "A Star is Born" at Warners, was a singing child actress before she became a bigtime dramatic star who could sing.

"Young at Heart" was directed by Gordon Douglas for Warner Bros. from a screenplay by Liam O'Brien. Henry Blanke produced in WarnerColor and print by Technicolor.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Funny thing about some bridge players. Tell them the least they must have to be sound and right away they look for excuses to do it with less. The conceit of some people's children!

If told an opening bid of one must produce five tricks they go digging for an exception that will permit them to open with four. If an opening of two says nine tricks they want to try it with eight.

Once they get away with it there is no holding them back. Then they will stick in an opening bid of two with only seven tricks. It is not enough to put blinders on them, you also need a halter.

You are dealer with the south hand shown here:

♠A K 6
♥A Q 8 4 3
♦6 2
♣A K 7

What is your opening bid with this hand? One heart. Your bid of one heart promises only five tricks and you have a count of seven. So what? Would you wreck a good partnership by starting wrong?

Because of the limited number of bidding words you are unable to describe every hand with one combination. The combination of one that does not overrate your hand.

An opening bid of one shows a minimum of five tricks. An opening bid of two in a suit shows a minimum of nine tricks. An opening of three or four does not apply to this type of hand.

So, you do the best you can with the tools you have. You then show the rest in later rounds, if possible.

You may be hit with the thought that partner may pass your one opening. So what? If he lacks the three tricks for a responding bid you are better off stopping, because no game is there.

A good bidding system is geared to responses that will help get to game. If partner has no true response to the prescribed opening, chances are they have no game. This is a good thing to remember.

Sunny-Tempered Dinah Shore Her Own Best Song Plugger

By WAYNE OLIVER

NEW YORK (AP) —Sunny-dispositioned Dinah Shore is her own best song plugger.

The honey-haired songstress reports when she sings a number on television or radio that she has done on a phonograph record the record sales pick up immediately.

Turn about is only fair, for it was through phonograph records that she got her first big break in the entertainment world.

After finishing a Vanderbilt University in the late '30s Dinah got a job on a local radio station in New York. But she had no luck with the networks until Xavier Cugat had her make some recordings with him for RCA Victor. The record company immediately signed her and NBC hired her as a sort of fill-in.

THREE YEARS WITH CANTOR

She quickly became one of the network's most popular singers and soon was on Eddie Cantor's show, where she stayed for three years until Hollywood called.

But Dinah continued her recording and radio work and for the last three years has had her own 15-minute TV show on NBC Tuesdays and Thursdays. Her radio shows currently are on Wednesdays and Fridays. Under her contract she does 24 record sides a year.

Although she says "we get a tremendous response" when she plugs one of her records on the air, she admits "I haven't had a big record hit since I've been on television."

She says that's largely because her TV and radio chores keep her so busy that she really hasn't time to concentrate on finding the right combination of tune and treatment to turn out hit records. But her records, if not in the hit class, are consistently close to the best sellers in the business year in and year out.

NATURAL, LIKABLE

The brown-eyed singer, despite years of success, remains one of the most natural, likable people in show business. She receives about 2,000 letters a week and personally answers all except routine ones such as requests for pictures, using a dictating machine her husband, actor George Montgomery, installed for her at their home in Beverly Hills.

When not giving a performance she insists on being called Mrs. Montgomery. She and Montgomery have a daughter, Melissa, 7, and an adopted son, John David, 10 months old.

NBC has chosen Richard Strauss' "The Would-Be Gentleman" for its next production Sunday, Feb. 27. Actually it's a play with incidental music. Wally Cox has been cast in the title role, which does not require him to sing.

Arthur Godfrey plans to take a vacation from his CBS shows Feb. 11-21. Replacements have not been announced.

Cannot Find Replacement For Rifle Range

OTTAWA (CP)—The defence department so far has been unable to find a suitable replacement for the Long Branch rifle range near Toronto, Defence Minister Campney said Thursday

He replied in the Commons to two Progressive Conservatives from the Toronto area who asked what steps the department is taking in view of agitation for removal of the range and for conversion of its site to civilian uses.

Mr. Campney said the range has become surrounded by growth of greater Toronto, leading to pressure on the department to move out.

One site being studied, Mr. Campney said, is Camp Borden, 60 miles from Toronto.

May Eliminate Limit Size Of Pickerel

KENORA (CP) — The Ontario government will be asked to eliminate the size limit of pickerel caught in Ontario.

A resolution approved by the Northern Ontario Outfitters Association Wednesday will be presented to the legislature's fish and game committee in Toronto March 8-9.

The resolution, submitted by the French River Resorts Association, said Pickerel under the present 13-inch size limit when caught then thrown back again show a high mortality rate.

Dr. W. J. K. Harkness, chief of the wildlife division of the department of lands and forests, said he expects the request will be granted on a one-year trial basis.

AWARDED DAMAGES

VANCOUVER (CP)—The family of James Crossen of West Vancouver, a victim of the Moose Jaw, Sask., air crash last April 8, have been awarded $40,000 in Exchequer Court, it was announced Thursday. The family sued for $600,000.

Thirty-seven persons were killed as a result of the collision of a RCAF plane over the Saskatchewan city.

IRVING BERLIN'S 'SHOW BUSINESS' MAGNIFICENT CINEMA SCOPE MUSICAL

Irving Berlin's "There's No Business Like Show Business" is an unusual and optical delight made so by the lilting Berlin tunes and the opulent settings Twentieth Century-Fox provided for them on the Cinema Scope screen in DeLuxe color. The audience at the Belle Theatre, where the picture opened yesterday, frequently broke into applause to show its appreciation of this splendid production presented by Darryl F. Zanuck. It was a happy combination of song, dance story and spectacle played captivatingly by a stellar cast headed by Ethel Merman, Donald O'Connor, Marilyn Monroe, Dan Dailey, Johnnie Ray and Mitzi Gaynor.

It is easy to understand how the film company spent millions to transfer this saga of show business to the screen. From the time the Darryl F. Zanuck CinemaScope production opens with a brief foreword about the history of vaudeville until the smashing climax in New York's famed Hippodrome Theatre the screen is alive with excitement.

The story of the trials and tribulations of a vaudeville family, which gives the picture great heart, is highlighted by 24 Berlin songs, fourteen performed completely and ten used for underscoring. Three of them are brand new numbers. Miss Merman sings one, "A Sailor's Not a Sailor 'Til He's Been Tattooed". Johnnie Ray lends his special talent to "If You Believe?" and "A Man Chases a Girl Till She Catches Him," serves as a springboard for a fantastic dance by Donld O'Connor. Other familiar songs are "You'd Be Surprised," sung by Dan Dailey, "When the Midnight Choo Choo Leaves for Alabam," by Merman and Dailey, "A Pretty Girl is Like a Melody" and "Let's Have Another Cup of Coffee".

Miss Merman plays the role of Molly Donahue with the verve and explosiveness for which she is famous, and Dailey gives his role for her philandering spouse, an exonerating charm. Donald O'Connor and Mitzi Gaynor sing, dance and enact their romance with inspired skill.

The smashing finale for this lavish CinemaScope production is something to behold. Producer Sol Siegel and Director Walter Lang who keeps the music and story beautifully balanced throughout, reserved two of Berlin's most popular numbers "There's No Business Like Show Business" and "Alexander's Ragtime Band," the International jazz piece that has held its popularity for forty-three years, for this blazing finish. This number which was the most costly ever staged by a Hollywood film company, is performed by the six stars and 300 dancers on a huge stage with fifteen levels, raised and lowered by hydraulic pressure. It's a 15-ring dancing and singing circus of show business. hpictu ko celnleae.,

Son of Betty Grable's Hair-Dresser Making Good

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The career of Keefe Brasselle is doing fine these days, thanks largely to Keefe Brasselle.

In this town of phony modesty, it is refreshing to meet a fellow who is completely sold on himself and is not afraid to admit it. Such a lad s Keefe who has done a good job of selling himself to public and producers.

The son of Betty Grable's hairdresser, Marie Brasselle, Keefe has been around show business most of his life. He did a few bits in pictures, then landed a lead in "Not Wanted." An MGM contract followed.

"I got lost at MGM," he said. "Oh, they took good care of me—top pictures and all. But they just had too many other players under contract."

PLAYS EDDIE CANTOR

The film depression trimmed contract lists to the bone, and Keefe was a casualty. But he sold himself as the actor to portray Eddie Cantor. The biog was something less than a critical triumph. I asked Keefe if he felt the film had been good for him.

"No doubt about it," he replied. "My career was at the bottom. Anything would have been a boost.

"I can't knock the Cantor picture. Although the critics didn't like it, it was one of the biggest moneymakers last year. And I think time will prove that I did the best job possible. They wanted me to play the role of Cantor off stage as well as well as on, and I did it for them."

NIGHT CLUB CIRCUIT

After "The Eddie Cantor Story," Keefe put on his dancing shoes and hit the night club circuit. At first the results were middling.

"I was trying too hard," he admitted. "Then one night during the Flamingo engagement at Las Vegas I realized that I was pushing too much. . . . So I slowed down a bit, and I've been doing great ever since."

He's got the contracts to prove it. The Flamingo signed him to a lush three-year deal. Columbia Pictures bosses caught his act, liked him, put him into "Bring Your Smile Along," want him for more. And NBC has him tied up for a TV series.

"I can thank George Gobel for that," he remarked. "His success has completely changed the network thinking. Now the young talent can get a break."

WILL SEEK EXEMPTION

KINGSTON (CP) — Kingston branch of the Canadian Legion will call for income tax exemption for pay of reserve force personnel when zone G-1 of legion meets here next month, a Kingston legion spokesman said Thursday. "They ask a man to join to serve his country and then they turn around and tax him for doing it."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was shaking her head to herself at breakfist, saying to pop, Really, William, it's aggervating.

I couldn't help it, pop said, and ma said, Oh, it has nuthing to do with you. I made up the funniest joke in my dreems last night. In fact it was so comical I woke up shaking with laffter, she said.

By gollies that explains why I felt an earthquake in the middle of the night, pop said, and ma said, And now I cant remember hide or hair of it, and I was all prepared to spring it on the gerls at the bridge game today. That's what's so aggervating, she said.

You should of woke me up and sprung it on me, and then I could of sprung it back on you when we both woke up, pop said, and ma said, Oh dear, I could just imagine their amazed faces, after they got through laffing, when I told them I invented it myself. And now it's simply dissapeered into the 7 winds, she said.

Never trust a joke that you make up in your sleep, pop said. Just to give you an example, the other night I dreemed you demanded an explination of why I was an hour and a half late for dinner, and I told you I just wanted to injoy your furious expression, he said, and ma said, William Potts, do you think that's funny?

Not at all, my dear, but I thought it was the best joke of the year while I was dreeming it, pop said. That's the point, he said, and ma said, Oh well, perhaps it's a good thing I cant remember my dreem joke. It might only be a an anty climax, she said.

And she finished her grapefruit diet looking as if she felt better instead of werse.

Little Red School House On Way Out in Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The little red school house is on the way out in Canada.

Its place is being taken by the large school unit, centrally located and in many cases equipped with the latest aids to education that some call frills but that most modern educationists consider essentials.

In equipment as well as in teaching methods and buildings education is keeping pace with the times in Canada. Radio, in some cases television, motion pictures, industrial arts and home economics classes, record-playing rooms, auditoriums and even swimming pools are part of the school structure in many parts of Canada.

FINE TOOLS

There are push-button controls linking the principal's office with a public address system in the classrooms; cooking and sewing utensils that would be the envy of any housewife; work tools better than most craftsmen have in their shops or home basements.

Color schemes have been scientifically designed; lighting combines the best that nature and man can conceive; heating, air conditioning and sound-proofing all have been taken into consideration.

This, of course, is not the story everywhere from coast to coast but a Canadian Press survey shows it is the trend that can be expected to continue. In time, the one-room school with initials of generations of students carved deep into desk tops may be only a memory.

Only the most rash student would dare desecrate the modern desk.

SMALL IN NEWFOUNDLAND

In Newfoundland, where there is denominational education, there has not been the same emphasis on the large school unit as elsewhere in Canada and most outport settlements support several one-room schools. New schools being built in the cities, however, include auditoriums, industrial and home economic classrooms.

Progress towards formation of larger school units is slow, too, in Prince Edward Island. But more than 40 per cent of the classrooms are equipped with radios and there is a gradual increase in the use of films for teaching

New Brunswick reports that the larger unit of school administration has progressed most satisfactorily there. There now are approximately 50 consolidations providing high school facilities to many students formerly denied this training.

Nearly all new schools of six grades or more have a combined auditorium-gymnasium and industrial and home economics departments are established in urban composite schools and regional schools. Radio and films are used extensively.

NOVA SCOTIA CHANGES

Nova Scotia's education finance system is under review at present following a survey by Judge Vincent J. Pottier.

In his report, likely to be a major issue at the next legislature session, Judge Pottier made proposals to increase teachers' salaries, re-assess the province to bring more equitable sharing of education costs, and scrap such frills as gymnasiums and household science labs until there are enough classrooms.

The Nova Scotia department of education has a film library with a permanent staff of eight and more than 20,000 films. About 75 per cent of the classrooms have access to radio. Television, as in most parts of Canada, is still in more or less an experimental stage.

In Quebec there is a trend towards the larger school unit especially for Protestant students in rural areas where there are teacher shortages. Grants for Protestant consolidated schools rose from $5,000 in 1915 to an average $250,000 in 1953 and in the latter year $1,458,395 was spent on construction of such schools.

SNOWMOBILES HELP

Winter transportation, once a problem, has been solved by the help of snowmobiles, big custom-built buses and a better winter roads clearing program. Transportation costs in 1953 were $179,000

Radio, films and television are not widely used except in Protestant schools.

In Ontario in the last 10 years 600 new township school areas were formed. County councils have built centralized high schools and spend much money transporting pupils to them.

Broadcasts and films are widely used. Local school authorities determine whether auditoriums, swimming pools, health centres and the like are wanted and many provide them, especially in cities.

MANITOBA TREND

There is a definite trend towards the larger unit in Manitoba and in that province, too, the modern building and equipment trend is followed. Industrial and home economics classes have been part of the educational program in Winnipeg for 50 years. There is extensive use of radio and films.

Saskatchewan has 58 large school units in 60 school areas and no area has reverted to the small school unit after the 5½-year trial period. Thirty-five composite high schools with shop courses, home economics departments and auditoriums have been built in the last 10 years.

The province has an active film and radio program with more than 4,000 classes listening to school broadcasts. There are 550 film projectors in the schools.

ALBERTA UNITS

Alberta has large school units except in the cities, some larger towns and a small number of isolated rural districts. Broadcasts are used in 60 per cent of the elementary and junior high schools while approximately 35,000 films are distributed each year.

British Columbia has completed the change-over to the larger school units and there are 80 in the province. Five broadcasts a week are heard in classrooms and films and other visual aids are distributed throughout the province.

With the exception of swimming pools, of which there are none, modern additions to equipment are not considered frills. The trend is towards the combined gymnasium-auditorium and as many schools as possible have industrial and home economics classes.

5th Thurlow

FIFTH OF THURLOW — Miss Mildred Swan spent Wednesday night with her sister, Mrs. Duanne Martin and Mr. Martin.

The regular W.A. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Yorke on Wednesday with a good attendance.

A number of men assisted in cutting wood for the church on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Gerald Swan spent Monday afternoon at the Belleville General Hospital with her daughter, Mrs. Ivan Clare, who had undergone a tonsilectomy.

The school pupils had a few holidays when their teacher, Miss Embury, was ill with a cold.

A number attended the "Vegetable Growers" banquet on Wednesday evening at Plainfield.

Mrs. E. P. Yorke is spending the week with relatives at Westport.

Sympathy of friends is extended to the family of the late Mrs. Ben Clarke.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Badgley and daughter of Cornwall, were Sunday guests at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Badgley.

Mr. and Mrs. Carman Huffman spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Swan.

Mr. and Mrs. Derek Henry of Kingston were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Clare.

Mrs. Orvil Rollins, Douglas and Glenn of Plainfield, were Sunday evening guests of Mr. E. P. Yorke and Mrs. W. Hodgen.

Sunday School Lesson:

The Unanswerable Argument

By ROY L. SMITH

It is probably safe to say that the cause of good religion is not apt to be set forward on the basis of arguments, but on the basis of results.

One may argue from now until the end of time in an effort to prove that Jesus Christ was the Son of God, but unless the argument is backed up by the fact that those who believe become different people, little has been gained.

Ephesian Experience

In the scripture of this week's Sunday school lesson the author of the Epistle to the Ephesians (we do not need to decide the question with which the scholars are so greatly concerned, as to who he actually was) declares that the Ephesian Christians had experienced the resurrection—they had been raised up from one life to a new and higher one.

To the man whose life has been made new as a result of "believing" in Jesus Christ no other argument is necessary for the deity of Jesus. The restored man has evidence within himself—in controvertible evidence.

World Authorities

There is a sense in which it can be said that every man has the right to become a world authority on the subject of religion.

The blind boy who had lain a beggar at the gate of the temple all his life and who suddenly found his sight by the gracious act of Jesus, proved himself a very wise person. He did not go outside his field, but stuck to his experience and said, "Whether this man is a sinner or not I do not know, but one thing I do know and that is that whereas I was blind now I see." In that simple position he was perfectly safe. He was talking about something he knew because he had experienced it. He was a world authority on at least one subject.

Changed Lives Evidence

A young man appeared in a Kansas City bookstore one afternoon and inquired for the manager. When that gentleman appeared the youth handed him $20 and said, "More than a year ago I began stealing books out of this store. It was easy to slip them under my coat and get away with them. But a few nights ago, in a church not far from here, I gave my heart and life to Jesus Christ, and before I could have any peace I had to come to you and pay you for the stolen books."

The bookman accepted the money, expressed his appreciation to the young man, congratulated him on his new start in life and then followed him to the door. As the youngster was about to leave the proprietor of the place said, "Just a minute, before you get away. Would you mind telling me where that church is? I think I'd like to go over there and listen to that preacher myself."

Church Will Never Fail

Let no man have any anxiety concerning the future of the church as long as it is able to produce saints and thrust them back into the life of the community.

The church is most truly and most convincingly offering its testimony which injects the most new hope, service, conscience, and moral purpose into the life of the community. No matter what our theology is, if we do not carry grace and good will into the living of the community we are heretics.

The Uniform Sunday school lesson for Feb. 6; "THE GRACE OF GOD," Luke 15: 11-24; Esphesians 2:1-10; Titus 2:11-14; 1 John 4:10.

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. William Slater in the death of her mother, Mrs. John Keeble, of Mountain View.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Tanner were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Don Brooke, of Oshawa.

U.S. SABRE JETS SHOOT DOWN TWO MIGS

Assembly Ousts Mendes-France By 319 To 273 Vote

Fiery Premier Is Defeated Over North African Policy

By PRESTON GROVER

PARIS (AP)—The French National Assembly threw Premier Pierre Mendes-France out of office early today and began a search for a less-stormy leader. But political observers predict that it will take a long time to find an acceptable successor.

Deputies toppled the fiery little premier's cabinet—France's 20th government since the Allies drove th Germans out of Paris in 1944—by voting 319 to 273 against him on a confidence issue. It was one of the biggest tallies by which a French premier has been ousted since the war.

However, the opposing votes totalled only five more than the absolute majority of 314 required of the 627 assembly members to overthrow a government.

The ballot came after a three-day debate on the question of home rule for Tunisia and quick reforms for the rest of French North Africa. But personal animosities and traditional assembly opposition to any strong leader played as big a part as any disagreement over North African policy.

Even after his defeat was announced, Mendes-France defied assembly tradition by taking the speaker's tribune to defend his policy. Most of his remarks were drowned out by deputies who shouted and banged their desk tops in protest against the speech.

At the height of the din, the defeated premier walked out of the assembly, followed by his ministers, and drove through the rain to the palace of President Rene Coty to turn in his government's resignation.

Who may succeed him is hard to say. Coty announced that he would start his consultations with parliamentary leaders this morning, but it was believed unlikely that they would come up quickly with a successor.

Among those mentioned as possible choices were ex-premier Antoine Pinay, who managed to put the brakes on inflation when he was in office two years ago, and Edgar Faure, also a former premier named foreign minister by Mendes-France only last week.

Some of Pinay's followers insist he will not accept a bid at this time, preferring to wait until another man has piloted the Paris accords on West German rearmament through the Senate.

The assembly already has approved the pacts admitting a rearmed West Germany into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but a fight is expected when they come up for a ratification vote in the Upper House late this month.

Mendes-France captured the admiration of much of the Western world through his tireless efforts to achieve his goals. His dynamism gave the Allies hope that France had found a decisive leader.

But his opposition in the assembly grew steadily in the months after he took office last June. Aside from political pique and personal animosity, many serious members of the chamber felt the premier was leading the country along a destructive path.

Farm Animals Require Love, Not Just Feed

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP)—Farm animals need love, care and attention as well as feed, says Dr. W. N. McMillen, nutrition research director for a Decatur, Ill., feed company.

Dr. McMillen told the Kalamazoo city farmers club Friday that too many farmers use automatic water troughs, fill up self-feeders and then leave their farm for the weekend.

He said farmers must recover the "lost art of herdsmanship."

"Pigs, chickens, turkeys and cattle all know whether you like them," he said.

May Take Years To Work Out Formosa Peace

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States officials believe a Formosa ceasefire may eventually be worked out through diplomatic channels if quicker means fail, but it may take several years to do the job.

New efforts by the United Nations to bring the Nationalist and Red Chinese into more-direct negotiations have not been ruled out. In fact, authorities say all possible avenues toward peace in the Formosa strait are being studied.

President Eisenhower called Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, his UN representative, to a White House breakfast conference today.

(Washington officials had no immediate comment on the air battle today over the Yellow sea in which American Sabres shot down two Russian-built MiG jet fighters. No official word had been received in Washington an hour before the breakfast conference was scheduled.

(Dulles and Eisenhower were expected undoubtedly to discuss this latest Far East development, although there was no apparent connection between it and the Formosa crisis. The Yellow sea area where the battle took place is some 500 miles north of Formosa.)

They were also expected to consider new moves within the framework of the UN in the light of Red China's rejection of a bid to join in ceasefire talks there.

American diplomats hold the opinion that in the long run Red China probably would like to end the fighting in the Formosa area. But the key question is whether the Reds want peace now on any terms which Nationalist China and the U.S. would even seriously consider.

Use of diplomatic channels has long been considered as one possible means of seeking a peaceful settlement, despite a lack of American diplomatic relations with the Red Chinese.

One plan given careful consideration at the U.S. state department would have Red China negotiate through Britain, and Nationalist China through the U.S. This might not produce any written or formal agreement, but might result in a satisfactory arrangement to stop the fighting.

THE WEATHER

However, these same southerly winds will bring snow to western regions this morning and spread it across the province by evening. Sunday promises to continue mild and unsettled, but another cold high pressure area building over the Northwest Territories threatens a return to cold weather Monday.

LEGISLATURE SESSION LIKELY TO PROVE STORMY

Road Irregularities Will Provide Fire

By STEWART ANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Solemn and traditional ceremonies will mark the opening of the Ontario legislature Tuesday but the ensuing sessions may be stormy.

Biggest storm centre will probably be the report of the legislature committee investigating irregularities in highway contracts and maladministration in the highway department.

There may be a dispute over a minority report planned by the two Liberal and one CCF committee members who left its meetings when the Progressive Conservative majority ruled against calling more witnesses.

Criminal proceedings against departmental employees and highway contractors and their firms began last January after reports about fraudulent contracts.

DOUCETTE RESIGNED

Several firms were subsequently fined and government employees dismissed. Disclosures of irregularities were responsible for the resignation of George Doucette as minister of highways.

This is likely to be the last session before a provincial general election, expected in June.

The Progressive Conservatives hold 78 seats in the 90-seat house. The Liberals have six members and are supported by one Liberal-Labor member. There are two CCF members and one Labor-Progressive.

Two seats formerly held by Progressive Conservatives are vacant; one through the death of lands minister Gemmell who was member for Sudbury; the other through the resignation of Col. Arthur Welsh as provincial secretary, liquor commissioner and member for Muskoka-Ontario.

Eight additional seats will be at stake in the next election because of redistribution which increases the number of members to 98.

This session is expected to bring some indication of government policy on toll highways, built by private enterprise. In the last two weeks two groups have asked the government to consider such a system.

Pre-session reports indicate the current trend toward a drop in revenues will continue and be accelerated. This has resulted in economy measures reported to have been ordered in all departments.

One spokesman said the government is finding itself squeezed between reduced revenues and increasing demands for grants and appropriations from municipalities, the provincial police and for unemployment relief.

Lieutenant - Governor Louis O. Breithaupt will be accompanied from his home by an armed escort of 50 soldiers and greeted at Queen's Park by an artillery salute of 15 guns. He will read the speech from the throne prepared by Premier Frost and his cabinet.

THIS MAN'S IN TROBLE

DETROIT (AP) — Edward R. Fetto, 37, was fined $120 in traffic court Friday for reckless driving after he rammed a police car injuring two patrolmen while making a left turn. Fetto is a safety supervisor for a Detroit trucking company.

Americans Back in Tachens, May Mean Evacuation Near

By FRED HAMPSON

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP)—American military observers and advisers today were reported to have returned to the Communist-menaced Tachens after having just recently left those islands off the China coast.

Maj.-Gen. William Chase, head of the United States military assistance and advisory group, did not indicate whether this means that an evacuation of the islands is imminent. He told a press conference only that the group would "aid and advise at the command level" in any operation "that might come up."

Earlier, Nationalist China and the U.S. were reported near agreement on evacuating the Tachens, focal point of air and sea actions and subject of intensive diplomatic manoeuvring since Yikiangshan, only eight miles to the north, fell to the Chinese Reds two weeks ago.

Chase did not say how many American advisers had been sent back to the Tachens. He said there had been no American casualties in the shellings and bombings there "at least up to the time of our last message."

Insofar as he knew, the situation there was "about normal."

Nationalist fighter - bombers roared out again in the pre-dawn darkness from their Formosan base today against Communist shipping 50 miles north of the Tachens in the East China sea.

Pilots claimed they sank one vessel and damaged three. The air raiders were out to slow down the buildup of Communist manpower and supplies for invasion of the Tachens, 200 miles north of Formosa.

The reports on a Tachen agreement came in the wake of a one-hour conference between U.S. Ambassador Karl L. Ranking and the Nationalist acting foreign minister, Shen Chang-huan.

Nationalist government sources said agreement was near.

The U.S. 7th Fleet meanwhile is in Formosan waters while awaiting orders to evacuate 30,000 Nationalist troops and civilians. U.S. air force Sabre jets teamed up with navy aircraft today in training exercises.

Pakistan Plans to Become Republic in Commonwealth

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Pakistan's decision to become a republic has created a feeling of despondency among some delegates attending the conference of Commonweath prime ministers.

Pakistan's intention was announced Friday night in a joint communique. Although the young Moslem country will remain a full member of the Commonwealth when her republican status comes into effect, there is still a certain concern that the link between the Crown and the Commonwealth is being weakened.

Probably the most aggrieved minister is Sir Winston Churchill, who has intense personal emotions about the relationship of the monarchy and member Commonwealth countries. It will be recalled that a decade ago Churchill said he had not become Britain's first minister merely to preside at the liquidation of the British Empire.

The remark was in the context of Indian independence, but it probably still to a certain extent betrays the nature of his thoughts on the Commonwealth.

It is understood the atmosphere at Friday's meeting of the Commonwealth ministers was somewhat strained and unhappy. It was known that Pakistan's move to republican status was in the offing, but it still came as a shock to British and Australian delegates.

Earlier it had been reported that Canada's Louis St. Laurent had headed other premiers in suggesting that the Pakistan proposal should be deferred until her new constitutinn is completed. This was denied at the time by Canadian delegation officials.

St. Laurent, Pearson Meet Eden, Nehru About Indo-China

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Canada's Prime Minister St. Laurent, accompanied by External Affairs Minister Pearson, went to the foreign office today to confer with Sir Anthony Eden and India's Prime Minister Nehru on the problems of elections in Indochina.

Canadian sources insisted that the three-power meeting had no connection with the current conference of Commonwealth prime ministers, and if the question of Formosa was discussed it would be only on an informal basis.

After the meeting, which lasted 1½ hours, a British spokesman said their main subject was Indochina, but that they renewed the search for ways of solving the Formosan problem, which Nehru Friday night called "a very great world crisis."

(The Canadian delegation's version of these events conflicted with that widely reported in diplomatic quarters. Fraser Wighton, diplomatic correspondent of Reuters news agency, said the Commonwealth leaders "went into top-secret talks . . . in search of a formula by which the Commonwealth can help ease tension in the Formosa area." Edwin Shanke of The Associated Press said they "embarked . . . on a weekend of behind-the-scenes moves to try to avert the growing danger of war over Formosa.")

Today a senior Canadian delegate emphatically denied these reports. He said it was misleading to brand the meetings as dealing with Formosa since they had been called for the specific purpose of discussing Indochina.

Canadian officials had wanted to keep the talks private for a natural reason. Poland, the third member of the international supervisory commission on Indochina, is naturally unable to attend the discussions and may well ask what the other two countries are doing behind her back.

There is a feeling here that too much is being made of Commonwealth efforts to find a solution for the Formosan problem. Ministers are certainly deeply anxious, but there are certain limitations on what they can do. For one thing, it is hard to find any joint formula to which, say, Australia, South Africa and India can all agree.

It is possible to deduce, as well, that Canadian delegates sometimes find themselves pinched for elbow room in negotiation, being aware on the one hand of the pessimistic American view about cease-fire efforts outside the UN Security Council; and on the other hand of the enthusiastic Indian desire for just such a move.

The position seems to boil down to this. All the ministers, in their own ways, are anxious to see the fighting ended. But they do not want further to complicate the situation, and the prevailing view appears to be that the best thing at the present time is to let the situation cool.

It was decided to hold the Indochinese conversations in the course of the present Commonwealth talks because of the coincidence that Eden was available along with leading representatives of Canada and India, two of the three countries represented on the Indochina commission.

Eden is a key figure in the talks because he was co-chairman at last summer's Geneva conference on Far East problems, which led to appointment of the supervisory commission as part of the general settlement in Indochina. The other chairman was Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov.

Under the terms of the Indochinese settlement, elections must be held in both North and South Viet Nam in 1956.

In the long run, the problems facing the Free World in Indochina may be just as serious as those arising from the present deadlock over Formosa, and possibly even more difficult to resolve.

'Lord Melody' Captivates Princess With His 'Much Binding in the March'

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) Princess Margaret planned to fly today to the nearby isle of Tobago.

The Princess, who has spent the last four days in Trinidad on the first leg of her month-long Caribbean tour, was to take off for the 50-minute flight to Tobago (at 9:45 a. m. EST) in a British West Indies Airways Viking.

Trinidad's Governor Sir Hubert Rance and Lady Rance, who played host to the 24-year-old Princess during her stay here, planned to accompany her to Tobago, popular resort and home for retired Britons and North Americans.

Princess Margaret spent her last evening in Trinidad listening to six of the island's top calypso players run through such current favorites as "Much Binding in the March," and a number taking off BBC broadcasts.

The Princess, who has become captivated with the island music, was delighted with the renditions by "Lord Melody" and the other players.

On the schedule for Margaret's one-day tour of Tobago were a corner-stone laying for a high school, an automobile tour of the island and a garden party at Government House.

The Princess will leave Tobago tonight aboard the royal yacht Britannia and sail for Grenada.

COMMONS GIVES FORMAL APPROVAL TO THRONE SPEECH

16 Days of Debate, 133 Talks Given

OTTAWA (CP)—After 16 days of debate and 133 speeches the Commons has given formal approval to the government's legislative program as outlined at the session opening Jan. 7.

The approval without a recorded vote Friday ended the House's throne speech debate and members immediately began study of the first of 21 government measures waiting passage.

But before the debate closed the House defeated 99 to 69 a Progressive Conservative motion of non-confidence in the government—a six-point indictment of government policies.

CCF and Social Credit groups and Paul Gagnon (Ind — Chicoutimi) sided with the Conservatives against the Liberal majority in the vote, whose lightness was apparently due to the fact that many of the 264 members had left the capital for a long weekend.

SIX CHARGES

The Conservative motion said the government had "failed" on six points: To retain and expand foreign markets; solve unemployment problems; reduce excessive taxation; end government waste and extravagance; encourage processing in Canada of natural resources; and set up a contributory health insurance plan with provincial co-operation.

Transport Minister Marler said he will make inquiries into a Winnipeg report that F. H. Keefe, general manager of the CNR's western lines, had said CNR president Donald Gordon had ordered the railway management to cut maintenance costs by $5,000,000 this year or be replaced.

Mr. Marler was replying to a question by Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre). Mr. Knowles said in a speech later that any such policy would add to the present "terrible uncertainty" among CNR employees.

Earlier, John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) said none of the cabinet ministers who entered the debate dealt with the issues facing Parliament.

He quoted government statistics on the loss of Canada's overseas markets last year and said the figures reveal "the reasons for the unaccustomed silence of ministers of this government."

Trade was one of the country's most important problems, but the government did not dare tell what happened in 1954 and what the situation is now.

Alistair Stewart (CCF—Winnipeg North) said heavy U.S. investment in Canada could put this country into economic and political bondage to the U.S. He proposed a tax to limit the "dangerous" amount of U.S. purchasing of Canadian stocks.

J. M. Macdonnell (PC—Toronto Greenwood) replied that Canadians are not afraid to invest in their own country. In eight post-war years up to 1952 foreign capital accounted for only 12 or 13 per cent of net capital expenditure.

Adversaries Rarely Forgive Success, Achievements Beat Mendes-France

PARIS (CP)—French newspapers voice deep concern at the downfall of France's government this morning, and praise Pierre Mendes-France for the job he did as premier.

Midi Libre, independent, comments that Mendes-France "probably fell because of what he has accomplished more than because of his mistakes. In politics, adversaries rarely forgive success."

Shock and depression swept Western Europe following the ousting of the premier at a time when the fate of the Paris treaties to rearm West Germany still hangs in the balance.

West Germany was particularly gloomy. Government officials were disturbed, but declined to comment immediately. However, newspapers express frank concern that the Paris treaties, still requiring approval from the French Upper House and both chambers of the German Parliament, have been endangered.

In Lebanon, the Beirut paper Al Hayat said the Arab governments had intervened with North African nationalists in the interests of moderation in response to Mendes-France's promises of greater freedom for North Africans. The non-confidence vote is considered a violation of those promises and will cause the nationalists to revert to a policy of violence, the paper predicts.

Tunisan leaders privately said negotiations with France to give greater autonomy to the protectorate should not be hampered by the crisis in Paris. They added that Tunisia was negotiating with France and not with individuals.

Communist Planes Attack Flight Over Yellow Sea

Reconnaissance Mission Not Linked With Formosa

TOKYO (AP) — American F-86 Sabre jets shot down two of eight attacking Communist MiG swept-wing jet fighters today in the biggest air battle since the end of the Korean war.

The United States Air Force, in a terse announcement, reported that the Russian-built fighters attacked a U. S. RB-45 reconnaissance bomber and its covering flight of Sabres over the Yellow sea between Korea and Red China.

The air force said no American planes were lost.

Whether the planes were piloted by Russians or Red Chinese was not immediately learned. Apparently there was no connection between the air battle and the tense situation in Formosa strait where American naval and air forces have been standing by.

REDS ATTACK

The shooting occurred over international waters.

"The other six attackers returned to Communist territory," (presumably Red China) said the terse announcement.

The air force said the RB-45 was "on a reconnaissance mission over the Yellow sea when the four-engined jet bomber was attacked by four Russian-built MiG-15s. At the same time four other MiGs attacked the escorting jet fighters flying top cover."

The Sabres, which ran up a 12-to-1 edge in claims over MiGs in the Korean war, were from the Fourth Fighter - Interceptor Wing transferred from Japan to forward bases in Korea during the present Formosa crisis.

The incident was similar to one slightly over a year ago when Sabres escorting another RB-45 over the Yellow sea shot down one MiG after a flight of MiGs attacked.

The RB-45 is a fast medium jet bomber converted into a reconnaissance plane loaded with cameras and radar search equipment.

ON REGULAR PATROL

The planes have been flying up the coasts of Korea outside the three-mile limit for more than two years, since the 1953 cease-fire. They began such patrols immediately after the Korean armistice agreement barred the Allies from flying over North Korea itself.

Today's air battle was the first such incident in the Far East command since two Soviet MiGs shot down a slower American RB-29 off the east coast of Hokkaido Nov. 7, 1954. One of the crew aboard the reconnaissance bomber was killed.

The Reds claimed the American plane, which was on a photo-mapping mission, was over Red territory. This was denied vigorously by the U. S. Air Force.

CALLS FOR PRAYER

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Council of Churches has urged country-wide prayer for resolving the Far East crisis without war. Rev. Eugene Carson Blake, council president, issued the appeal for prayer on the eve of his departure for Geneva to attend a world meeting of Christian leaders.

APE Defines Smust, Sneet Smoud, Smaze

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Residents of the Los Angeles area haven't detected much difference between old - fashioned smog and smust.

Smust, says the air pollution control district, is a new meteorological phenomenon that consists of dust blown into the area by high winds and smoke from fruit orchard heaters. Smog consists only of smoke and fog.

A wag has come up with some other combinations, viz:

Rail, a combination of rain and hail.

Sneet, snow and sleet.

Smoud, smoke and overhanging clouds.

Smaze, smoke and haze.

A.P.E., abbreviation for air pollution expert.

LESS HARMONY

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York City fire department announced Friday it was cutting its 60-man band down to 50 members to put more firemen "back on fire-fighting duty." Also, the department's glee club was cut from 17 to 16 voices. A year ago the police department discontinued its 65-man band and its 34-member glee club to use the manpower for foot patrol.

Hardwaremen's Association Is 50 Years Old

Herbert Fox, of the Walker Hardware Company Ltd. and Eastern Ontario Representative to the Canadian Retail Hardware Association, will attend the "Golden Jubilee" Canadian Hardware and Housewares exhibition and convention being held in Toronto February 7th to 10th.

The Canadian Retail and Hardware Association is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year having been formed back in 1906 when 60 dealers got together to organize. From an attendance of less than 60 at its first convention the organization has now become nation-wide and saw an attendance of over 14,000 last year.

The exhibition is an annual event held in conjunction with the convention and has grown from a small hotel show to the biggest exhibition of its kind in Canada and the second largest on the North American continent.

Latest examples of manufacturing skill in the hardware and housewares field will be exhibited; supplemented by selected imports from the United States and from overseas. Included will be modern home craftsman tools catering to the "do it yourself" trend, as well as gardening supplies, home and farm maintenance equipment.

Mr. Fox has represented Eastern Ontario on the Association for the past three years. Past presidents of the Association include Charlie Hanna, 1929; Fred Smith, 1923; and J. G. Galloway, 1940.

Pile of Wood In Basement Catches Fire

A fire in a pile of wood in the basement of the Bread Basket Bakery at 334 Front St., brought out city firemen at 2.18 this morning. The blaze was brought under control before any serious damage resulted although the basement was scorched and there was considerable smoke damage at Earl Moon's newstand next door.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance said the cause of the woodpile fire had not been determined although it apparently did not catch from the furnace. Firemen spent considerable time at the scene making doubly sure the blaze was completely out and the burned wood was tossed out of the basement.

Friday afternoon firemen were called to 55½ West Moira Street where over-heated pipes had been reported.

Light Offerings Meet Mild Trade On Local Market

Light offerings met mild trading on the local market this morning. Only one trader braved low temperatures to ply business on the outside market. Prices were unchanged.

Carrots and parsnips held steady at 50 cents a six-quart basket; potatoes were $3 a 75-lb. bag, 50 cents a basket. Turnips were 10 cents each and onions 50 cents a basket. Cabbage sold at 5-10 cents a head while white beans were 20 cents a quart.

Apples were unchanged at $3.50 a bushel for Spies and $3 for McIntosh, both selling at 80 cents a basket.

Eggs were up at 42 cents for large grades, 38 cents for mediums and 35 cents for small grades. Poultry was 45 cents for fowl and 50 cents for spring chickens.

Honey brought $1 per four-lb. tin; mustard pickles 25 cents a jar. Loaves were 25 cents each and rolls 30 cents a half-dozen.

Temperature Is Really Mean

Zero, as most Bellevillians will tell you after the past few weeks of zero temperatures, equals plenty.

They have good reason for it, particularly after the past three days.

Mean temperature in the district for the first three days of February was 1.6 degrees below zero. In comparison, mean temperature for the same period last year was 27.9 degrees above.

Lowest point reached by the mercury last night was seven degrees below at 2 a.m. At midnight it was three below. This morning at 8 a.m. it rose to seven above.

Forecast for the week-end says the weather will be overcast with snow, beginning Saturday afternoon. Sunday also will be cloudy.

Circulation of Adult, Juvenile Library Books Shows Increase

Expansion of services, increased membership and increased circulation of adult and juvenile books during 1954 highlighted the librarian's report accepted at the annual meeting of the Corby Public Library Board held Friday evening in the library.

M. M. Hackett was elected chairman of the board for 1955 to succeed Mrs. A. C. Locke. Other officers elected were L. D. Read, vice chairman; L. A. Kells, chairman of finance; A. J. Black, chairman of property; Miss Olive Delaney, secretary-treasurer.

The librarian's report presented by Miss Delaney showed that 4,226 new books were purchased for the library during 1954; that circulation rose 9,990 to 129,154 books; that 828 new members were added to the list of borrowers making a total of 3,610 adults now holding library cards, and that of the 784 new boys' and girls' memberships 334 were registered at the two branch libraries.

Circulation of books has increased 39,557 in four years. Total circulation in the last four years has been: 1951, 89,597; 1952, 105,667; 1953,119,164; 1954, 129,154.

Total adult circulation for 1954 was 83,066, a gain of 6,065 over 1953 while juvenile circulation showed a gain of 3,925 to 46,088.

Reading of non-fiction during the year showed an increase of 5,033 books with the reading of technical, fine arts, sociology and history books showing gains.

Other services provided by the library during 1954 included 58 book talks to boys and girls in public and separate schools; three talks to Parent-Teacher Associations; summer reading contest for boys and girls; addition of more than 1,000 new books to the East Hill and King George School branch libraries; film and projector service for 70 organizations belonging to the Film Council.

The library has three projectors and 90 films at the disposal of Film Council members. Special speakers during the year addressed the council on topical subjects which were illustrated on film.

Public relations during 1954 included newspaper and radio releases on the work of the film council, music library, Great Books Discussion group and book notes and reviews.

Highlight of the financial statement was the expenditure of $8,076.87 for new books from total receipts of $23,490.30. Balance on hand Dec. 31st, was $126.16.

Total book stock Dec. 31st, 1954, was 31,316 of which 4,226 had been new books catalogued in 1954.

Group using library facilities regularly for meetings included Women's Canadian club executive; film council executive and general membership South Hastings Circulating library executive; stationary engineers taking Department of Labor examinations; Community Concert Association executive; camera club, Great Books Discussion group.

Most pressing problems facing the library board and librarians in 1955 are acute lack of space, necessity of expanding the record library, and the need for increased revenue to meet the growing demands of the community for library service.

Members of the Board for 1955 are: Dr. J. W. Kinnear, J. E. Bateman and L. D. Read, appointed by city council; L. A. Kells, M. M. Hackett and Lt.-Col. E. A. Geen, appointed by the public school board; and A. J. Black and Dr. Boyd Upper, appointed by the separate school board.

Newcastle-Trenton Highway Work to Proceed This Year

Extension of the four lane highway No. 401 east from Newcastle to Trenton is on the agenda of work to be carried on by the Ontario Department of Highways this year, according to Hon. William A. Goodfellow, M.P.P. for Northumberland.

Definite assurance that the new highway has top priority in the government program for 1955 was given by Mr. Goodfellow to members of the Road Commission of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland.

The four lane road between Trenton and Belleville has already been graded although it is not yet in use. The extension of the highway from Newcastle would connect with the Trenton-Belleville section north of Trenton.

Plan Brochure Again This Year

The city council Industrial, Tourist and Publicity committee held its first meeting of the year on Tuesday at which the 1955 budget and the industrial brochure were discussed. The industrial committee, with the local Chamber of Commerce and county council last year put out the crochure covering Belleville and Hastings county and plan to repeat this year.

Don Kingdon, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce, was appointed as secretary to the industrial committee. Attending the meeting were committee chairman Mayor J. Both and Aldermen Forrester, Keegan and Tice.

Police Blotter

A 60-year-old Marmora man, Percy Yorke, suffered head cuts requiring several stitches to close when he walked into the side of a car on upper Front Street Friday evening.

Ephriam Reilly, Sidney township, driver for a local taxi firm, was northbound on Front Street when near Vandervoort's Hardware the Marmora man stepped out from the east curb and into the path of the passing auto.

Six residents, who had been imbibing a bit too freely following last night's hockey game, were rounded up by police and spent the remainder of the night in the police cells. All were charged with drunkenness.

An auto accident on Bleecker Ave. early today resulted in damage amounting to approximately $350. J. F. Ellis, Albion Street, was southbound on Bleecker when his car was in collision with a parked vehicle owned by Geo. A. M. Bradford, 298 Albert St. The Bradford auto received front end damage amounting to about $300, while the Ellis auto had about $50 damage.

CBC Technicians Ready to Talk Over Contract

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC and its strike-threatening union of technicians, jockeying for position in a contract fight, are expected to resume deadlocked negotiations here Tuesday.

Labor department informants say they understand such a meeting has been set up quietly, though each disputant has been insisting publicly that the other should make the first move.

If such a meeting has not been arranged finally, one high labor department official said Friday night "the department will bring them together."

PARLEY ARRANGED

However, he said it is the understanding of the department, which would be called into the dispute eventually, that the disputants are going to reopen talks.

The position of the CBC and the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (CIO-CCL), as made public, has been that the other should make the first approach for a resumption of negotiations.

NABET seeks a general wage boost for its 775 members employed in radio and TV with the CBC. A federal conciliation board rejected this. The CBC accepted the board report; the union refused it.

STRIKE AUTHORIZED

This week, union members authorized the NABET executive to call a strike if a satisfactory settlement is not reached by Feb. 16.

In the Commons Friday, Revenue Minister McCann, who reports to Parliament for the CBC, said the government corporation will negotiate anew if employee representatives call for it.

At Montreal, NABET officials said the union has not sought a meeting and the approach should come from CBC.

Some People Better Off As Tenants

TORONTO (CP)—While homeownership is a desirable goal, many home owners would be better off as tenants for the present at least, C. S. Robertson, president of Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation, said Friday in his address to the corporation's 100th annual meeting.

"Our concern," said Mr. Robertson, "is for the purchaser who is encouraged to buy at today's high prices with a small down payment.

"There is no cushion of equity to protect such purchasers in the event of a drop in prices and it is inevitable that many, who have blithely purchased houses and assumed large mortgages, will wish they had accumulated larger down payments before purchasing."

IN MEMORIAM

LORIMER. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ralph Andrew (Bud) Lorimer, who passed away February 6th, 1954.

His gentle, congenial manner,
His kindness towards all,
His patience in worry and affliction
In sorrowful longing, we recall.
Of his reverent humility and trust in daily prayer
Our merciful Lord and we do know.
This is our greatest consolation
As our tears in memory flow.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by wife Maude and family. F5

In the memory of a little granddaughter,
Your dear and kindly face,
Your gentle hand and generous heart

A vivid thought of Grandpa she does recall,
Later the heritage of her Holy Faith
Shall make her remember you most of all.

ASSELSTINE. — In loving memory of a dear mother-in-law, Emily Asselstine, who passed away February 4th, 1946.

A beautiful memory, dearer than gold,
Of a mother's worth that can never be told.
Alone, unseen, she stands by my side,
And whispers, don't grieve, for death cannot divide.
For deep in my heart her memory is kept
Of one I still love and will never forget.

WHITE. — In loving memory of my dear parents and brother, Frankie M. White, died February 6th, 1954; Franklin Jay White, July 22nd, 1948, and Earle White, July 22nd, 1947.

What would I give their hands to clasp
To hear their voices and to see their smiles
As in the days that used to be.
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond this toil and strife
And clasp each other's hands once more
In heaven, that happy life.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

Strong Son of God

Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
Whom we, that have not seen
Thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace
Believing where we cannot prove.

Thou wilt not leave us in the dust;
Thou madest man, he knows not
why,
He thinks he was not made to die;
And Thou hast made him; Thou art just.

Thou seemest human and Divine,
The highest, holiest manhood,
Thou;
Our wills are ours, we know not how;
Our wills are ours, to make them
Thine.

Our little systems have their day;
They have their day and cease to be;
They are but broken lights of Thee,
And Thou, O Lord, art more than they.

This very beautiful hymn is composed of several stanzas taken from the prologue of Alfred Tennyson's great poem, "In Memoriam", which the English poet wrote to give expression to his sorrow over the death of a close friend and fellow-classmate, Arthur Hallam.

It is not found in all church hymnals, but it is fine enough to merit a place in the best of them.

Most admirers of Tennyson have read "In Memoriam" and know its story. It was not published until 1850, about 17 years after Hallam's death, but it was in preparation a good while before it was given to the public.

Hallam's death in Vienna, during a postcollege continental tour, was a heavy blow to Tennyson. The two had been inseparable comrades at Cambridge University and later Hallam became engaged to one of the poet's sisters.

Tennyson was born in Somersby, Lincolnshire, in 1809, the same year that Abraham Lincoln was born in America. His father was a clergyman. The young poet-to-be was writing verses long before he finished his college career; indeed his first volume of poems was published during his undergraduate days.

In 1850, the year that "In Memoriam" appeared, Tennyson was named poet laureate of England to succeed William Wordsworth. Tennyson turned out some of his most precious poems in the years that followed, including his famous "Crossing the Bar", which also is sometimes used as a hymn. He died in 1892 and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Who Was This?

By A. A. M.

What was the name of the man, who when he was keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the wilderness, he saw the angel of the Lord in the midst of a bush? As he looked he was amazed to see that although the bush was in flames, the branches were not burned up. Therefore he said, "I will turn aside and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt."

When the Lord saw that he turned aside to see, He called him twice by his name. The man replied, "Here am I." Then the Lord commanded him,

"Do not come near; put off your shoes from your feet, for the place on which you are standing is holy ground."

Then the Lord continued,

"I am the God of your father, the God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob."

The man hid his face for he was afraid to look at God.

The message which the Lord gave to him was,

"I have seen the affliction of my people who are in Egypt, I have come down to deliver them and to bring them out of that land to a good land flowing with milk and honey. Come, I will send you to Pharaoh, that you may bring forth my people out of Egypt."

But the man was hesitant about taking this responsibility of leadership. He made one excuse after another. Finally he said,

"I am not eloquent, but am slow of speech and tongue." The Lord re-assured him,

"I will teach you what to speak.". Finally the anger of the Lord was kindled against this Israelite who fled, "Oh, my Lord, send I pray some other person." Then the Lord suggested that he take his brother along with him. The man agreed and he told his father-in-law that he wished to return to Egypt. The older man answered, "Go in Peace." Read this man's name and this story in chapters three and four of Exodus.

A Lift For Living

The Will To Be Brave

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

The will to be brave can do much. Thomas Carlyle tells of an experience in Paris, where he had been going through three weeks of almost total sleeplessness and despair.

He entertained thoughts of self-destruction. It seemed to him that the universe neither knew or cared that he was suffering. But one day he forced himself to ask himself what he was afraid of and what was the worst it could do to him.

If worst came to worst, could he endure it? He finally decided that in no event would he go through life whimpering like a coward, that whatever came, he would meet it and defy it. From that hour he dated his new birth of courage.

When a man thus takes himself in hand, he can tap hidden sources of fortitude. A number of years ago a young man joined the crew of a sailing ship. Many of his shipmates were the salt of the sea rather than the salt of the earth. Some of them laughed contemptuously when they found him reading his Bible. In the crew's quarters the lad had no privacy, and he became the victim of profane jokes. His rugged companions were physically fearless.

The young sailor prayed to God for courage. He had read the words of the Psalmist: "Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity; For they shall soon be cut down like the grass and wither as the green herb."

FOR THE PROPHETS

The young man, who later in life became a great religious leader said: "After praying to God, I decided to do something about these fellows. I weighed about 150 pounds. I said to myself, 'Alexander, remember, God is on your side.'

"The next day on deck the men began twitting me about my Bible-reading. I chose the biggest one of the lot and attacked him. With my first blow I said, 'This is for Joshua.' The next one was for Jeremiah, another for Ezekial and I used up all the prophets I'd read about in my eagerness to establish my right to worship God on that ship."

While we may secretly cheer the spunk of the young fellow, we can scarcely agree that he used the best method for inducing respect for the Scriptures, although the skipper later reported a change in the ship's morale. Instead of using our fists to gain respect for the Bible, we should use the Scriptures to keep up our courage.

A soldier who had gone through the jungles of the South Pacific in the last war was later asked what advice he would give as to the secret of sustaining courage in such perilous places. His answer was: "Familiarity with, and understanding of, the Twenty-third Psalm." Those who know the Divine Shepherd with the comfort of His rod and staff can walk more bravely through the valley of the shadow of death.

ENCOURAGEMENT

Also, if we would keep up our courage it must be reinforced by encouragement. A church organist some years ago lost his sight. Later he began to lose his touch. He was a good technician, but he could not see the reaction of the congregation. And, as so often happens, the thoughtless churchgoers never took pains to express their appreciation.

The result was that the organist's confidence in himself seeped away. We simply cannot keep up our spirits in continued isolation.

Everyone who has enjoyed the love of another knows how that love puts courage into the soul. To know there is one whose heart beats faster when your step is heard on the stair; to know that there is one who keeps tryst with you in thought when you are absent in person; to know that there is one who believes in you when the crowd is howling you down—such are the streams of thought which swell the current of our courage.

In these days of peril and fear I should like to join the "Brotherhood of Barnabas." Barnabas was called the "son of encouragement" in the Bible. May his tribe increase!

Bulletins From Birdland

ALWAYS STREAKED

The appearance of pine siskins never changes, helping us in identification. Summer or winter, spring or autumn, their bodies are entirely heavily streaked olive on a dull white ground, giving them a dark look. Both their wings and their forked tails have lemon yellow blobs.

Goldfinch-like in habits and voice, these barely five inch long birds breed in the northern Canadian woods and even in southern Canada where evergreen forests flourish. But of all the wanderers they are positively the most erratic. We never know when they may be expected, yet they could be found any month of the year. Usually only winter visitors to most cultivated sections, they are attracted by the fruit of coniferous trees; and even then, one winter hundreds might be found in a certain locality and none the following year.

Siskins travel about in large flocks that include goldfinches, redpolls, and sometimes grossbills. In unison they wheel and turn. The siskins' streaks differentiate them from goldfinches, and their darkness from pale redpolls. Individuals are seldom seen.

PENETRATING NOTE

As Siskins fly overhead we always can hear their characteristic note: a long, husky, buzzy "shreeeee", very penetrating, and rising in pitch and intensity. It is this sound even more than their looks that aids identification. Besides, they have a "clee-ip" call and a "tit-i-tit", which, though lower in pitch, reminds us forcibly of the voices of their relatives the Goldfinches.

Irregularity in nesting habits as well as winter wanderings makes siskins unique in Birdland. Neither breeding time nor place can be foretold, though one requisite is a fairly tall conifer. The nest is saddled towards the end of a branch from 10 to 20 feet high, and is generally well hidden by the foliage. Built of twigs, with grass, bark and moss mixed in, it is little more than a platform. The shallow interior is lined with down, fur, and feathers.

Another eccentricity of these birds is their mid-summer flocking behavior. Breeding individuals join bands of non-breeding siskins which have nothing better to do than look for insects, buds, tender leaves, and seeds.

However, in winter most of that summer fare is non-existent, and the happy sounding little birds seem to be quite content if they can find seeds to pick from cones with their narrow, pointed bills. If these are lacking, fallen seeds from maples and elms are substituted; and it has been reported that when spring rolls around dandelion seeds are often eaten.

TAXES SHOULD BE PAINFUL

One way to reduce taxes would be to do away with "pay-as-you-go" plans.

"Pay as you go" is supposed to be a painless way to pay taxes. It is unfortunate that this is true. to a certain degree. Taxes are painful and payment of taxes should be painful. One certain way to lower taxes is to make tax payments so painful that taxpayers demand reductions.

Wage earners should be given their total take-home pay without deductions for income tax at the source. They should pay their taxes in a lump sum to impress upon themselves the size of their payments and the percentage of their income that goes for taxes. If the taxpayer had to budget for his taxes himself, instead of having his employer do it for him, he would be much more concerned about taxes, government and the processes that determine his tax rate.

Marking each article for retail sale with the sales tax would also serve to emphasize the extent to which even this tax bites into the effective strength of each purchasing dollar.

Hidden taxes should be exposed like everything else that would like to remain obscure. Hidden taxes are hidden because it is to the advantage of the tax collecting agencies to hide them. It is not to the advantage of the consumer or the taxpayer. Governments are burdened with the task of raising funds for their administration and are in favor of doing it with as little inconvenience to themselves as possible.

Taxing bodies will always find ways to spend the money they raise. Alert and complaining taxpayers are essential for the guidance of taxing bodies to see that they do not tax unnecessarily or for projects that the taxpaver might prefer to forego in favor of lowered taxes. The creation of more complaining taxpayers is the first step towards tax reduction. Elimination of "pay-as-you-go" income tax schemes is a sure way to produce more complaining taxpayers.

CONVERSATION-KILLER

The deleterious effects of television on conversation affect the non-viewer more than the viewer.

Much has been written about the decline of conversation to monosyllabic grunts to pass peanuts and to replenish lemonade because television is a form of entertainment carried on in a dark room in which viewers are not distracted by the sight or sound of one another.

It is, of course, perfectly true.

In the course of an evening of watching television, host and guest usually exchange the superficial pleasantries of conversation during commercials but discourses on religion, life and politics necessarily suffer during the lengthy pauses to drink at the fountain of electronic elixir. While televiewing is in progress conversation is nil.

Rugged conversationalists, unnerved by the monastic silence of mesmerized viewers, continue to indulge their passion among a dwindling group of fellow syllable-shapers. Their dispair, however, is that period during the day when television is interrupted by working hours. This opportunity to re-establish communion with their long-lost brethren comes to naught when these worthies launch into conversation by discussing all the shows they have seen on television.

The silence engendered by televiewing is less of a menace to the art of conversation than the limited source of conversational material produced by constant attendance on a cathode tube.

NOT DEFINITE ENOUGH

President Eisenhower said on Wednesday that the United States has made it crystal clear that it does not intend to let Formosa fall to international Communism.

All will agree.

He added that the U.S. declaration of its decision to defend Formosa "ensures against any miscalculation by the Chinese Communists about American determination."

Unfortunately this insurance policy is not worth the paper on which it is written.

Eisenhower, at the same press conference at which he made these observations, was asked to say whether the U.S. would defend the outpost islands of Quemoy and Matsu. He refused to give an answer, saying he was not going to provide a blueprint for the Reds.

His reluctance to tell the Communists just what they can take without a fight is understandable.

But, if you refuse to provide a man with a blueprint of your intentions how can you ensure against this man miscalculating what your intentions are?

The United States has said it will defend Formosa and has refused to say that it will defend Quemoy. The Chinese Communists might interpret this to mean that the United States would not defend Quemoy. This might be a miscalculation.

The alarming part of the whole incident is that, with the peace of the world hanging in the balance, the president of the world's most powerful nation, the nation on which mankind depends for its hopes of freedom, makes a statement so ambiguous that a sixteen-year-old boy would reject it as illogical.

The Western European Union (W.E.U.), seems more likely to succeed than the European Defence Community because there is greater emphasis on the necessity of WE and U.

CARE-TAKERS

The women want me trim and slick.
On me they cast an eye
And always they are very quick
To straighten out my tie.

At me their fingers fairly fly
My collar to adjust.
They know a careless man am I
Whose garments gather dust.

At me they sadly shake their heads
And to each other say:
"So worn and frayed that hat of Ed's,
It should be thrown away."

I'm sure the care they take of me
Some way I must have earned,
Or how I look they would not be
So very much concerned.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 5, 1935.

At a meeting of the city council it was decided that for the time being deputations will be received by the city council at committee meetings on Thursday evening, but in the main deputations will be heard at the regular meetings of the council. Alderman Thomas H. Marshall had introduced a motion that no deputations be heard at committee meetings; it was, however, on motion of Mayor Tice, turned back to the committee for further consideration. Mayor Tice said in effect that there are times when it is most inconvenient for business men from out of town to be present at the council meeting on Monday night and there are times when aldermen wish to give calm deliberation to matters brought up, instead of making snap judgments, that so often occur, when a matter is sprung on them in council. He did not think that the council will abuse the privilege they enjoy and he was in favor of turning it back. The mayor's motion to refer the matter back to committee was passed. The council increased the salary of fire chief Lynch to $1,800 per year from Feb. 1st, and the salary of Miss H. Lynch as relief officer was set at $75 per month. The tender of the Schuster Company for the supply of thirty tons of coke at $9.95 per ton was accepted.

Irrational Rationality

(Montreal Gazette)

Dr. Brock Chisholm, as the apostle of rationalism, has condemned belief, religious belief, under present doctrnal concepts as "irrational." "Religionists say the subject is not one of rationality, but of faith," he said in an interview. "This apparently means freedom to be utterly irrational."

And he added that personality difficulties are "bound" to result from an attempt to mix faith with an intellectual approach to religion generally.

And yet it would seem that the trouble with Dr. Chisholm is that he may not sufficiently realize that life can never be made wholly rational, and personality difficulties are "bound" to result from any attempt not to interpret everything from the standpoint of reason.

Perhaps the common good sense of the matter was put very well some three quarters of a century ago by John Henry Newman. "While we talk logic, we are unanswerable," said Newman; "but then, on the other hand, this universal living scene of things is after all as little a logical world as it is a poetical; and, as it cannot without violence be exalted into poetical perfection, neither can it be attenuated into a logical formula."

Perhaps the excesses of Dr. Chisholm's rationality are themselves irrational.

Earth Shaking Problems!

(Milwaukee Journal)

We see by the papers that two new problems came up this week.

Senator Smith (Rep., Me.) and Representative Bolton (Rep., Ohio) discovered that the United States is the only major nation without a national flower.

House Democratic Leader McCormack (Mass.) demanded that senators stop referring to themselves as the "upper branch" of Congress. He declaimed that the House is equal to the Senate in elevation, ability and under the Constitution.

We're glad to see that these earth shaking problems are getting proper attention.

Played Host To Queen Bee

(Eganville Leader)

A beekeeper friend of ours was crossing his field when a bee lit on his left arm. Since this was a queen bee, he knew what to expect, so he simply stood his ground.

Within seconds the air around was alive with the beating of thousands of tiny wings as other bees joined their queen to make a load that was about all that his arm could stand.

However, he was not to panic. He carried his burden to his apiary and with his free hand prepared a hive. This done, he tenderly picked out the queen and set her down at the entrance and in no time at all the bees had all trooped in after her.

Our friend never suffered a sting; he never lost his head, and thereby he proved that bees can be handled safely if one knows how.

Leopard Was His Pet

(BBC News-Letter)

"And he brought his leopard into the office," said all the members of the BBC staff to their families when they reached home on the evening of the day on which James Walton called at Broadcasting House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Mr. Walton was paying a call on the BBC to discuss the possibilities of appearing with his pet on sound radio or in television and what more natural than that he should bring her with him? When the pet turned out to be a full-grown leopard called Judy, four years old, weighing two hundred pounds and with a long, sweeping tail, strong white teeth and murderous claws, it was small wonder that some members of the staff were slightly apprehensive of what might happen, particularly when Judy jumped on the Newcastle Representative's desk. But Mr. Walton never had a quaim about Judy and trusted her implicity, and he was greatly distressed when, before arrangements for television could be made, Judy developed an infection in her tail and eventually had to be destroyed.

He has been keeping animals of all kinds since he was a child and really prefers wild creatures to the human race, spending all his spare time in looking after them and schooling them with infinite patience. He has trained all types of big cat, foxes, badgers and bears with great success and believes that by establishing a relationship of perfect trust between animal and man almost anything can be achieved. He does not approve of taking unnecessary risks and says that with wild animals care and reasonable precautions must never be relaxed but, given the right handling, it is possible to bring them to an astonishing degree of tameness. They fall, he maintains, into two categories, those with good characters and those with bad. He now owns a young leopard called Punch who has a bad character and is only waiting, he knows, for the opportunity to attack him; Judy, on the other hand, had a good character, so exceptionally good that Mr. Walton loved her more than any animal he had ever had and she was also well loved by all his family. She had a cage in the stable, another bigger one in the garden and was also loose at times, under supervision. She spent every evening in the house and sat on people's knees-if they could bear the weight-lay comfortably on the hearthrug and had been known to snooze peacefully on the bed, although this left little room for its normal occupant.

Churchill Great Worker

(Hamilton Spectator)

Sir Winston Churchill has an unconscious knack of making ordinary folk feel downright lazy. In the ten years since the war, Sir Winston has been Leader of the Opposition for six of them and Prime Minister for four; enough to provide any ordinary man with a full day's work every day. However, he also found time to write his history of the Second World War in six volumes.

Now comes the report that the eighty-year-old Prime Minister has completed A History of the English-Speaking Peoples which he began before the last war. This, apparently, is in three or four volumes.

It is only when one sees Churchill's books on shelves that one realizes his prodigious industry, and, when this is set alongside his other achievements, the output of ordinary men and women seems trifling by comparison.

Work Less But Do More

(Windsor Star)

It once was the idea the longer people worked the more they did. It seemed a reasonable theory, but it has been sadly shattered by modern developments. One man now can produce twice as much, and often more, than his ancestor of 100 years ago, even if he works but 40 hours a week as compared to 70.

Industrial techniques are mainly responsible. Men now have machines to do much, or most, of the work for them. In Canada cheap horsepower derived from water replaces much of the manpower which otherwise would be required. A Canadian can accomplish as much, for instance, in a week as many people in Asia can in a year.

There also is the idea a man who works 12 hours per day, six days per week, cannot be expected to maintain the same pace as one who works eight hours per day, five days per week. Thus we constantly have increased production per man while decreasing his hours of work, though this is not to argue the trend can be continued indefinitely.

There is another aspect to the five-day week. It doesn't necessarily imply idleness on the sixth day. Many five-day week men take on extra work, for pay, on their day off. And many others do work around their own homes which, if they didn't do it, would have to be done by others.

Across the country there is a lot of work done by men on their "day off."

Cottontail Capers

(Ottawa Journal)

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to South America, the little cottontail is America's most popular game animal although one has to admit it is often a pest in gardens and young orchards. A rabbit lives a violent and dangerous life and his enemies are many. Yet like the skunk and the fox the cottontail has adapted itself to man's civilization.

Out on the countryside after a fresh fall of snow one will usually see many trails. Sometimes there is a starkly revealing story written on the whiteness—a few drops of scarlet congealed blood, small tufts of grey-brown fur, sharply-etched footprints of a pouncing fox or the blurred wing marks of an owl that swooped downward on silent wings.

Once in his lifetime the countryman has watched a rabbit ballet in bright winter moonlight. From a hidden spot among thick hemlocks he saw the Long Ears dance, leap and play in an open glade. One moment the area was empty and silent, brooding in the cold, brittle moonlight; an instant later the place was filled with a dozen or more flashing forms that performed gymnastic stunts almost faster than the eye could follow.

The rabbits raced back and forth; they twisted and turned; they leaped high, and there was one comic collision in mid-air. Some realistic-minded persons insist that animals cannot show emotions comparable to those of man; but when the rabbits are playing in the moonlight it is as if they were letting off surplus steam in the sheer joy of living.

They took long, low-flying leaps, interspersed with high jumps that reached four or five feet above the snow. Back and forth they raced in wild grace and abandon. Then, for a cause not understood by a mere man watchng a wildlife scene, the ballet abruptly ended. In a twinkling, the cottontails disappeared.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

IT PAYS TO PRAY

It pays to pray because the best in a person is then exampled. And the baser elements in his make-up are blotted out, at least temporarily. Prayer pushes aside all fear, too. Renewed confidence is created, for when we are in the presence of God our own nature becomes humble. We pray for courage, strength and to be guided aright.

Stevenson once wrote: "A generous prayer is never presented in vain; the petition may be refused, but the petitioner is always, I believe, rewarded by some gracious visitation." Nothing but good can come from prayer, and the language of it doesn't matter. It's guage of it doesn't matter. It's what comes out of the heart that is sure to render back to us a fruitful experience.

All great leaders in this world have been praying—men and women. Nothing so cleanses the heart as prayer. The effect is felt almost at once. I recall a very successful business man, in Chicago, whom I greatly admired because of his cheerful outlook and genuine Christian beliefs. The effect of his prayers was evident. He seemed to be good for all about him. I have thought of him time and again though he has probably gone to his reward long ago. To me he was an example of a man who never dies!

Most great military leaders have been praying men—Foch, Washington, MacArthur, Cromwell, Patton, and endless others. Lincoln put himself into the hands of God as few men ever have. He was rewarded with courage, patience, understanding and enriched faith.

It has been often said that more is wrought by prayer than anyone realizes. There are more men and women who habitually pray than any of us know about. The sincerest prayers are uttered in silence and alone. It is easy to pick out the praying people for they are the most confident, devout and cheerful!

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

DON'T MAKE A FEDERAL CASE OF IT

Dr. Brady

From the continuing high mortality which tonsillectomy maintains in Yankeeland—a statistical tabulation of the fatalities from this atrocity, mostly young children, if one had the time or the inclination to record them, would appall sentient parents, might even cause some to put off the proposed tonsillectomy till next summer or autumn — when, likely as not, "those bad tonsils" the everready operators insist "must come out without delay" will have shrunk to normal anyway. That is, if the kids are permitted to play outdoors as much as they wish, rain, hail, warm, damp, snow, blow, cloud or sunshine.

Ay, there's the rub. Few parents know enough (about hygiene) to give their children free reign about this. Either they regard their children as idiots incapable of knowing whether they are comfortable or they go along with the medical authorities — holdovers from the nineteenth century — who still imagine simple everyday "exposure" to cold, dampness, draft, change, etc., accounts for whatever illnesses they are unable to diagnose accurately.

Every day I thank God for blessings bestowed on those I love and ask for the wisdom and patience I need to make doctors and folks understand the difference between tonsilectomy and tonsillotomy.

Tonsillectomy means an attempt to remove every bit of tonsil tissue from the throat. I say the attempt because nine times out of ten more or less tonsil tissue remains after the operation.

Tonsillotomy means snipping off the obstructing portion of tonsil, instantaneously.

Upon non-recognition, unawareness, ignorance of the histology and pathology of the tonsils the businessmen of medicine have developed their peculiar belief that it is tonsil tissue (lymphoid, round cell, adenoid) tissue in itself that injures health.

If tonsil tissue were malignant extensive dissection of the throat in the attempt to eradicate it, as in tonsillectomy, would be rational treatment. Perhaps the most convincing evidence that it is not malignant or harmful in any way is the everyday observation of odds and ends of tonsil which remain intact long after tonsillectomy.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

SPEAK OUT!

"What can just an ordinary person like me do about it?" It is so easy to excuse ourselves from doing anything on the grounds that our tiny efforts would have no effect on a great issue.

Many years ago in a little New England town, a successful religious discussion took place in Sunday-school. The leaders thought it a very worthwhile discussion, and after some consideration, they embodied it in a small pamphlet which was printed and circulated.

In the course of time a copy of this pamphlet came to the great Russian writer Tolstoi. The contents made a profound impression on him, and led him to write a book which became very well known: The Kingdom Of God Is Within You.

But this is only the beginning of the story. Tolstoi's book was soon translated and read everywhere. And down in South Africa, an Indian lawyer named Ghandi read it. According to his later statements, that was one of the chief forces which led him back to free his countrymen and change the course of history for India, England, and the world.

The words of two or three people in a little-known community altered the lives of millions and the destiny of nations. Don't stifle your next impulse to speak the right words—you never know how far and magnificently they may be echoed.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

On Sunday, I took a fine brisk walk up and down and across the streets of one of these new housing developments that have spread out far and wide around the perimeters of most Canadian cities and big towns. What I was looking for were grandmas and grandpas. And except for five elders who were obviously visiting only for the afternoon. I saw not one.

It was a beautiful winter day. I saw any number of small children playing in the snow outside their pretty little homes. Quite a number of young parents were out walking or playing with their children. In the picture windows of the smart little bungalows, I caught glimpses of several people, men and women: but they were all young. Not one elderly woman stood watching out of a window. No elderly man, with the easy proprietorial appearance of a resident of the neighborhood, did I meet pulling a grandchild's sleigh or strolling along for the air.

The only old people I saw had their hats and coats on, either just arriving or just departing.

The question is: with this powerful trend towards smaller homes, with their one, two and a half bedrooms, what becomes of the elder generation?

If you are familiar with the older streets of a city, you know that the vast majority of the houses are two-generation homes: they have room, even in the old modest districts as well as in the more fashionable sections, for more than just a young married couple and their small children. You can prospect around a city and see streets built in the eighteen-eighties. Not very expensive homes, many of them semi-detached, but with six, seven, eight rooms. You can follow the growth of a city by its streets: the nineties, the early nineteen hundreds. Decade by decade, you can move forward into the twenties.

And then the bungalows began.

Today, they don't even call them bungalows. They are popping up, a hundred at a time, a thousand in a year, in the new suburban subdivisions.

But there is no room in them for semi - detached grandparents. Grandmas and grandpas are being detached.

Investor Necessary

(Bowmanville Statesman)

It is strange that people who will cheerfully accept a loan for personal requirements and agree to forfeit whatever articles they have put up as security in the event of their being unable to repay it, will resent bitterly any recompense being given to a man who lends money to provide equipment with which they may earn their living and who only expects a return in the event of a profit being made.

Let's not be greedy about this. The investor serves a necessary purpose to industry and to everyone engaged in it.

ALFRED JAY BRYAN JAY

Student Personalities At Albert College

A weekly feature of interesting facts revealed in interviews with those young undergraduates who hail from countries beyond the seas.

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Approximately eight years from now, a big reception will be held in a well-appointed home in Hong Kong.

The guests of honor will be two young members of a well-known Chinese family. Greeting them will be proud parents, six brothers and a sister.

Barring incidents, it will be the first reunion of Mr. Kai Chu Jay, prominent Hong Kong banker. Mrs. Jay and their six sons and daughter with the two elder sons Bryan and Alfred over the period of eight years, if present plans materialize.

The treasured possessions of the two older sons will be their diplomas from a Canadian university that will mark them as doctors of medicine.

Alfred 18, and Bryan, 16, immaculately garbed in the latest western style told this reporter of their plans and ambitions at Albert College where they are studying in their first year in a Canadian educational institution.

COURAGEOUS JOURNEY

These keen-eyed intelligent Chinese youths, who speak fluent English have embarked on a courageous journey that will take eight years to complete before they attain the goal of their ambition.

It is their first time away from home and their first year in a western country. They will not see their parents and brothers and sister, until those medical degrees are safe in their hands.

"What will you do during summer vacation time?" they were asked.

Alfred smiled. "We will get jobs. We like it here and the people are very nice. We are not lonely for there are other Chinese students here while the Canadian boys and girls treat us fine. They are very nice to know."

Bryan and Alfred are Hong-Kong born. They learned to speak English at LaSalle College in Hong Kong before coming to Canada.

The Jay family was forced to flee Hong Kong before the Japanese invader. They spent several years in the interior, five of them at Chunking. Intermittent periods found them in different centres in the provinces.

The Jay brothers heard about Albert College and its fine educational recreational and residential facilities from Bill Wong, a former schoolmate and now a student at the college. They decided to study at the Canadian school.

CAME BY PLANE

Their father arranged plane reservations for the boys to fly from Hong Kong to Canada. Bryan and Alfred who had had a more or less secret yen to see England, especially London, decided this was their opportunity. So it was arranged that they fly to England via India. They eventually arrived in London where they spent an enjoyable two-weeks holiday before proceeding to Canada and Albert College.

Eight long years of study and hard work loom ahead. But these courageous youngsters are unafraid. They have determined "to achieve an early boyhood ambition, even if it means years of separation from their family.

GET DIPLOMAS FIRST

Asked what Canadian university they preferred for medical study, Alfred and Bryan said "Queen's, but if we cannot secure entry to the medical school there, we shall go to McGill."

Where will they practise if and when they secure their medical diplomas?.

"That is a question for the future to decide. We do not know yet whether we shall return to Hong Kong for good. or remain in Canada".

And Alfred added, his ayes twinkling, "We must not forget. however, that first we must get those diplomas.".

Quinte Secondary School News

Crescimus Omnibus Discendo.

Quinte Secondary school was officially turned over to the school board on Tuesday of this week. All the work has been completed and now the students and teachers are responsible for the building.

CREST CONTEST

A contest to select an official school crest has been running for some time. The three finals were submitted by Paul Millard, Paula Mitas and Margaret Armstrong. It was left to the students' council to pick the final winner and they chose the crest submitted by Paula Mitas. Paula will receive the prize of $5 given.

This week's assembly was presented by C10A (Form master Mr. Hayman). Esther Juby C11B played the piano for the opening exercises.

The program opened with a piano solo by Hazel Lloyd, who played "In a Monastery Garden."

Next, C10A presented a skit called "The Bug House" or Room 7 at 3:50. Many members of C10A were in the cast. These included, Sunny Choy, Lois Wright, Shirley Ackerman, Gladys George, Shirley Kilpatrick, Helen Ashley, Betty Cross, Marian Kelly, Helen Kelly, Lois Lucas, Joan Dickey, Brenda Briscoe, Shelba Jean Lott, Barbara Henderson, Ruth Parks. It was a very humorous skit and the cast certainly did a fine job.

The assembly closed with "The Queen."

BOYS' JR. VS. STAFF

Quinte's historic game was played on Tuesday between the boys' junior basketball team and the staff team. The bleachers were packed with enthusiastic students. Mr. Reid, principal of Quinte, started the game with a toss between Bill Dickey and Mr. Wright. The first casualty of the game was Mr. Wright, who was put out of the game with an injured knee. The first basket for the staff was secured by Mr. Sisson, boys' physical education teacher. At the end of the first half the boys were leading 15-12. Both teams speeded up in the last half and the final score was 28-28. The scorers for the staff were: Mr. Sisson 10, Mr. Roland 7, Mr. Hayman 7 and Mr. Tierney 4.

The scorers for the boys were: Dickey 13, Elliott 4, Walmsley 4, Musgrove 3, Pierce 2 and Beeby 2. The officials were Mr. Beech and Eric Moody.

Since the game was a tie the boys challenged the staff to another game in two weeks time. The staff accepted the challenge.

GIRLS' SPORTS

The girls' junior basketball team played two games this week.

The first game was played on Tuesday in Bancroft, against the Bancroft high. This was a very close game but Quinte managed to stay a few points ahead and win the game 18 to 15. High scorer for Quinte was Barbara Thrasher with 9 points.

The second game was played on Thursday against O.S.D. at Quinte Secondary School. This was also a very close game and again Quinte managed to take the game 15 to 11.

Scorers for Quinte were: Hatfield 7, Canning 5, LaRue 3, and scorers for O.S.D. were: Garnett 6, Drury 5.

The Quinte girls' juniors have now won two out of three games.

Tariff Board Ready to Report On Textiles

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Harris is expected to make public within the next two weeks a tariff board report on the wool cloth tariff situation.

Indications are that any action taken as a result of the lengthy report, prepared after three months of public hearings, may depend on what happens at the Geneva conference on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The board, it was learned Friday, has completed its report and will turn it over to Mr. Harris next week.

The board hearings resulted from a request of the Canadian wool cloth industry for higher tolls against competing imports from the United Kingdom. The industry charged that low-priced imports have put it in jeopardy.

PRESENTS ARGUMENTS

It is understood the board makes no recommendation as to whether tolls should be raised, but summarizes arguments from both sides of the Atlantic, adding a detailed survey of the Canadian industry to show the cause of some of its economic weaknesses.

The British industry argued that any crisis in the Canadian industry is not due to British competition but partly because consumers are switching to synthetic materials from wool cloth.

It said any tariff boost would eventually hurt Canada. British dollar earnings would decline and this might cut sales of Canadian wheat.

Textile towns and workers supported the Canadian industry's bid for higher tolls. Canadian farm groups sided with Britain, urging that there no increases.

More Canadians Travelling South By Plane Says City Travel Agent

Oh to be in Miami now that winter's here!

The above take-off on the poet expresses the fond longing of many Bellevillians, who currently shivering in zero temperatures, willingly would take-off on any mobile device if they had the opportunity of going to ground 'neath the shade of the sheltering palms.

Most of us must needs stay where we are because needs must, shivering over blue feet and sweating over Red China. But the lucky ones, not only content with going there, actually are showing a preference in the mode of their transportation south.

According to Milton Davison, of Davison and Davison, local travel agents, there appears to be a definite trend toward air travel among those heading south for the winter. So much so that it is becoming increasingly difficult to book plane passages.

"The number of people travelling south by air is gaining all the time," Mr. Davison said.

SAVES TIME

Major reason for the trend towards air travel is the time factor. It now is possible to board a plane in Toronto at, say, 10.20 a.m. and reach Tampa, Florida, at 2.40 p.m.—just over four hours later by direct flight.

This contrasts with a train journey of about 48 hours, Mr. Davison says. Expense-wise, he claims the overall cost compares favorably also, the cost of meals and berths on the train journey practically offsetting the lower rail fare scale.

In addition to this the airways are competing on a more tangible scale by the introduction of reduced-rates systems.

Canadians on their way to Miami now can travel with two members of their family at a reduced rate by taking advantage of the family plan. This entails an indirect flight from Toronto to Miami, via New York, where a stop-over must be made to change planes.

Along the same line there also are day and night coach fares, which parallel the same systems on the railroads. This involves slower travel with more frequent stops and less of the trimmings of first-class travel.

One disadvantage to air travel is that a traveller only can take a stated amount of luggage. One fact against, however, Mr. Davison points out, is that going by air, the traveller does not need winter clothing.

"You can step out of a train in Toronto, into a car and out again at the plane and fly directly to the south," he says.

He also claims that the penchant for air travel also is making an impression on those tourists who usually motor south. This in itself involves a journey of four days or more, he says, again pointing up the time factor. One reason why motorists take their cars along is that it makes touring and sight-seeing on the resort location a great deal more comfortable. However, if money is no object, there are always the drive-yourself cars available.

SOME FEAR AIR TRAVEL

Greatest attraction of air travel is its breaking of the time-barrier, while the greatest drawback appears to be a psychological one. Some people have a phobia about air travel and are nervous about going in a plane. But even that appears to be diminishing.

"Some elderly women to whom we have sold train tickets for the same place year after year, now are going by plane," Mr. Davison said.

Air travel seems to be of particular benefit to the tourists with only a short holiday of ten days or so. The time chipped off their journey by plane allows for a longer stay at their resort.

"If they can leave this zero weather and get out on a beach for a sun bathe four hours later, I don't blame them," he said.

Rail Employees Lose Leader, Harry Chappell

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's biggest transport workers' union—the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees (CCL) — has lost its leader in the sudden death of national president Harry A. Chappell, 51.

Mr. Chappell, who rose from a Winnipeg office boy to become head of the 35,000-member union in 1952, died unexpectedly at his home here Friday five minutes after completing some union business with a colleague.

He had been resting up from an earlier heart attack but had told associates he was going back to his office desk Monday.

Jolted officers of the CBRE—Canada's largest union without an international affiliation — immediately made plans to name a temporary successor pending the CBRE's September triennial convention, which will elect a president for the next three years.

ELECTED IN 1952

The Winnipeg-born Mr. Chappell, an unobtrusive but hard-working union man who exerted his strong influence largely behind the scenes, was precipitated into the CBRE presidency in September, 1942, during a tough internal battle between then president A. R. Mosher and opposing elements.

Mr. Mosher, who founded the CBRE in 1908, won the scrap but resigned to become honorary president, remaining also as president of the Canadian Congress of Labor. Mr. Chappell, a quiet, friendly man without a known enemy, was made president.

Mr. Chappell was an ardent CCF follower, being a longtime friend and disciple of the late CCF founder J S. Woodsworth.

Dr. F.G. Robertson Praises V.O.N. For Work in Public Health

TRENTON (Special) — At the 36th annual meeting of the Trenton Victorian Order of Nurses here last night Dr. F. G. Robertson, parliamentary assistant to Hon. Paul Martin, Minister of National Health and Welfare, said that Canada has every reason to be proud of the V.O.N.

The Liberal member for Northumberland county disclosed that nurses of the order made 1,000,000 calls across Canada last year. He praised the service and spoke of the great contribution the public health nurse was making to better health conditions in the country.

He revealed the various ways the federal government was aiding the trained nurse.

"There has been an important change in the hospital grant," he said, "whereby assistance is given for extending training facilities and training schools."

FINE TRADITION

Dr. Robertson said the public health nurse was the spearhead of the Dominion government's public health campaign. The V.O.N. exemplifies the highest degree of nursing service. The Canadian nurse has built up a fine tradition of loyalty and conduct.

"I believe the opportunities for nurses are better than ever before," he said.

Dr. Robertson stressed that whereas the nurse of 100 years ago was confined to a limited field her prospects were numerous today and nursing offered an interesting career in aviation, specialized services and in other fields.

The guest speaker was introduced by Rev. A. S. McConnell, M.B.E., who disclosed that Dr. Robertson was born in Belleville. The vote of thanks was tendered by His Worship Mayor Ross Burtt.

During the meeting president-elect Samuel Mowbray reported to the members. Reporting for the treasurer, vice-president elect Roly Whitley noted that the Trenton V.O.N.'s healthy bank balance totalled $5,850.57. Mrs. Ann Larry, assistant to nurse Mrs. Marion Dixon, read the nurses' annual report for Mrs. Dixon who is on holidays.

James Utley proposed the toast to the V.O.N. for Senator W. A. Fraser, unable to attend the dinner because of important business that detained him in Ottawa. The secretary's report was read by Mrs. C. E. McColl.

In the afternoon Dr. Robertson visited the Trenton Memorial Hospital. He was conducted on a tour of the building by superintendent Mrs. V. J. Carson.

Addressing members of the hospital board later Dr. Robertson congratulated everyone who had a part to play in building the hospital.

"I have seen many hospitals in Canada in the last year and I say that your hospital compares with any of them," Dr. Robertson said.

He commended the board for having the foresight to build a hospital when the cost per bed was between $7,000 and $8,000.

"Cost of building hospitals today runs at $12,000 a bed and you saved your community a lot of money by building four years ago," he declared.

Dr. Robertson was welcomed to the hospital by past chairman W. H. Ireland, leader in the movement to furnish funds to complete the building.

Joseph Howe

"No public man that ever lived in British America and few that have ever lived in the world, within the range and sphere in which they moved, exercised such a far-reaching influence." That is the consensus written some fifty years ago of Joseph Howe, editor, publisher, member of parliament, and Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia.

Joseph Howe was born at Halifax on December 13th, 1804. His father, an ardent Empire Loyalist, infused in his son a deep regard and attachment for the Empire. In spite of Joseph Howe's devotion to the principle of self-government, the attachment to the Empire lasted throughout his life. Joe Howe was first employed at the Royal Gazette. This newspaper apprenticeship lasted for ten busy years.

At the close of 1827, he purchased the Nova Scotian, an ambitious and widely circulated newspaper, and for the next seven years devoted his time toward making it the first and chief newspaper in Nova Scotia.

Using his paper to promote self-government, he began to write on political topics and to publish legislative reviews. Both Upper and Lower Canada, at this time, were in conflict with the privileged classes, and Joseph Howe through the policy of his newspaper became their champion.

These were turbulent years for Howe. In 1835, he published a letter which, among other things, openly accused the magistrates of filching some thirty thousand pounds sterling from the people. The accused magistrates sued Howe as publisher of the letter for libel, that through Howe's hoped-for downfall, the Nova Scotian would also be destroyed.

Alone, Howe won his case! His was the greatest address ever delivered in a Canadian court. This forensic masterpiece occupied six and one quarter hours and has been compared to the orations of Burke and Webster. He had fought for the freedom of the press and won.

To this maker of history, self-government was the only foundation upon which happiness, contentment and prosperity could be built. As a torch-bearer of freedom, Joseph Howe was loved in thousands of homes throughout Nova Scotia. He was to the people of Nova Scotia the symbol of freedom.

In the month of May, 1873, Joseph Howe was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, but the glory was short-lived. He died in June of the same year.

The Malay Peninsula

Is a strip of land forming the most southerly portion of Asia, the extreme length of which is 750 miles and the width 200, about one-third the size of Ontario minus its lakes, but Malaya is only a few miles north of the equato. Politically it is a mixture of Colony, of the Straits Settlements, the Federated Malay States, the independent Malay state of Johor and non-federated states under British protection.

There is a bewildering and interesting mixture of races who seem at present to be living in harmony with the exception of a few bandits who have an unpleasant way of disturbing the peace, so much so that it was deemed unwise for me to go into certain sections near the jungle.

The Portuguese were the first Europeans to colonize the section in order to get a share or control of the spice trade which centred in Malacca. Later the Dutch came but the employment of slaves and forced labor and the competition of the East India Company led to their fall. In the service of the East India Company was Sir Francis Light who leased Penang, an island on the west coast from the Sultan of Kedal and it was transferred to Britain.

The British officials came as traders and desired a small secure area where a factory could be built and where the ordinary affairs of commerce could be attended to. The Portuguese came also as viceroys, regents, missionaries and conquerors while the British wanted only to be traders with no more interference with local culture and custom than was consistent with the maintenance of law and order. That was the origin and strength of the British Empire.

FOUNDED SINGAPORE

In 1819 Sir Stamford Raffles founded Singapore, a key position that had been recognized as such by many generations of pirates. It has always been Britain's great glory that she was the first to establish the freedom of the seas. The ports were made free. Raffles drew from Burke the idea that colonies were held in trust and that the welfare of the inhabitants was a major concern of the governing power. To that end can be understood Raffles' profound interest in the people, in their language and their customs and his great knowledge of the flora and fauna. So it was with something more than a tourist's interest that I made up my mind to learn as much as possible about Malaya and was grateful to be able to accept the kind invitation of English friends to Malacca. Of Singapore I have written in another article.

From there I went by plane to Malacca and it seems to me that one gets a very good idea of the trees of a country from a plane. At that height, not so very high, you could see three marked storeys, the highest reaching 150 feet with a very dense canopy and requiring full light; below that the crowns are 50 feet from the ground and the lowest is the Bertram palm which they seem to consider a sort of weed.

Some of the trees were loaded with white flowers and from above seem to be snow laden, not that a Malayan would know what snow is. It is impossible to describe the color of the country. It is always green but of many shades from the violent shade of the new rice in the nurseries, the yellowish shade of the coconut palms and the dark olive of the rubber trees. Three-quarters of the country is forest so thick that visibility is never more than thirty yards and that makes a splendid hide-out for bandits and is one of the reasons why the present "emergency" is lasting so long.

There are about 30,000 square miles of commercial forest and about 2,000 known species of trees, more than recorded from all British India and Burma. It is not unusual to find a single acre of forest carrying more than a hundred species of trees, but mostly small size and of no present economical value.

PLEASANT SIGHT

The coconut palm takes up about one-fifth of the cultivated area but the holdings of mixed cultivation providing tapioca, pineapple bananas, tobacco, fruits and vegetables make a picturesque mosaic effect that is pleasant to look out on. When you realize that the decay of vegetable matter that has been going on for centuries accounts for the marvellous growth of trees, bushes, trailers, ferns, bamboos, orchids and good hard wood timber it is easier to believe that here is the most intensive agriculture in the world. It is remarkable what can be produced from the many holdings of only six-tenths of an acre.

Before the era of tin and rubber all transportation in Malaya was by river and in 1870 there was not a single mile of road. Most of the fishing is carried on from small sailing or rowing boats. The higher reaches of the quick little streams require the unsinkable bamboo rafts of shallow draft. The bamboo poles are tied together with rattans and the rafts are polled down the river and discarded at the end of the journey, the bamboos are saved and the return journey is made on foot.

The building of small craft continues and I had the good fortune to be taken by my hostess to the yard by the shore where a man and his son were making a rowboat, to learn something of the skill and ingenuity that went into its building and to admire the beauty of the lines the wood assumed by well managed steaming. No doubt when the memory of the temples' gilt and carvings has faded from my mind, that small house on its high stilts by the edge of the road between it and the sea, with the tall palms sheltering it, with the dark forest in the back ground and the men with the most primitive of tools fashioning after ancient design a small but perfect sample of river craft that scene will stay with me.

VERSATILE WOMEN

To fill quite full my measure of happiness my hostess gave me several water color paintings she had done in nearby surroundings. Just how those English women can find time to manage a household, supervise the education of their children, belong to all the necessary clubs and social activities, do sewing for the family, learn the weird languages they are confronted with and still find time to dawdle along the shore picking up shells or just sitting, having enjoyable times at cocktail parties and yet find time to set up an easel and paint a landscape is beyond my comprehension. I was almost forgetting to say, and be lovingly hospitable and greatly curious about all the other quarters of the globe. This list is not really complete but I must get back to some of the many boats of all kinds that the Orient has evolved.

Much of the travel is in low flat dug-out canoes; many are fast and narrow, long and low in the water and those that are built of hard wood can stand the terrific pounding that they meet with in the monsoon period. Often close to the houses or placed under them for protection when not in use (for the houses are high enough off the ground to permit that) can be found one called "koleh" that provides livelihood, transport and recreation. It can be sailed, rowed or paddled, the oarsman stands facing the bow leaning on the oars with his whole weight. Most of the paddles I noticed were not like ours but long poles with a round flat disc at the end.

It was a delight to see the bright colors with which they are painted and more interesting to see that as eyes are considered necessary for boats they are painted on the prows to search for fish and to warn of rocks. They were very big, primitive and impressive eyes.

USEFUL BOATS

The Chinese junks are used to carry cargo and seem clumsy but certainly are efficient and have been unchanged for hundreds of years. In Hong Kong three of us were taken over to the opposite shore in a sampan, a light boat propelled by sculls over the stern and with the centre and after part covered with an awning to shelter us from rain or sun. We sat comfotablyq in wicker arm chairs, spotlessly clean—perhaps the word comfortably should be modified for I did not feel happy as I watched one of the women working with her baby tied to her back, a very small baby that seemed to be at ease while the little mother did the sculling. On getting out of the unsteady light craft the few steps up were made easier by the aid of some youngsters who not only offered to help but did so efficiently and gayly, so poor, so poor and so gay.

We were on our way to have dinner at a houseboat restaurant where we chose our lobster and fish from the net of the fisherman who came alongside. We had the satisfaction of having both perfectly cooked though it was difficult to keep one's eyes off the thrilling craft on the river, and keep one's mind on the excellent food, and listen to our host's talk about the Communist China he was forced to leave.

Tabernacle W.A. Hears Address On 'Fellowship'

The regular meeting of the Tabernacle W.A., was held in the Sunday school room, on Thursday and took the form of a pot-luck dinner.

The president, Mrs. L. Johnston, presided.

Mrs. J. Wardner asked the blessing and after everyone had enjoyed the delicious repast, the meeting was opened.

Miss Johns conducted the worship service, which was based on "Friendship", giving much food for thought.

The Scripture readings were from St. Luke 10 and St. John 5.

Mrs. Lent introduced the speaker, Mrs C. Holmes. Her topic was "Fellowship." She brought to attention how important both friendship and fellowship are, in the homes and in different group activities and giving quotations from several authors and magazine writers.

She also stressed how important it is to be kind and understanding, to cultivate tolerance in sharing and considering the ordinary problems of today.

By so doing one would be trying to practise Christ's teachings and so be ready to help all those in need of assistance.

The W.A. was also reminded that the home is the most important institution.

Mrs. Davidson thanked Mrs. Holmes for her fine address.

It was decided that the W.A. give $50 as a burrary to an Albert College student.

A joint meeting of the W.A. and W.M.S. will be held in June.

Youth Groups Conduct 'Operation Friendship'

"Operation Friendship," a week during which the young people of the churches put special emphasis on their unity in Christ, ends this Sunday. The youth groups, many of whom are conducting special services in their own churches Sunday evening, will meet in the Sunday school rooms of St. Andrew's church at 8.45 p.m., for a special fireside program prepared by the Presbyterian Young People's Society.

Rev. Keith Daniel of Victoria Avenue Baptist church, will tell the story and sing the spirituals of the colored people of the South. Jack MacMurray, a student at Albert College, will be the guest speaker and Miss Donalda Day will give a brief outline of the Youth for Christ Movement.

There evenings of Interdenominational Firesides are sponsored by the committee of Young Peoples Work of the Department of Christian Education of the Canadian Council of Churches. The purpose is to promote fellowship and a fuller understanding of the difficulties and common problems encountered in young peoples work, and while this council has no direct authority it does offer a means of co-operation. The 1955 project of this committee is to raise $500 for financial support to youth training courses in Nigeria.

Things to Know About Hotels

By SHIRLEY AND BOB SLOANE

If your going places calls for stopping at hotels, here are some things about them you may not know, but ought to.

The echelons of hotel management start with the general manager or managing director, whom you may never see and who may not even be in the house most of the time. So if you've got problems, don't ask for him; you'll probably never get to see him anyway.

Next in command is the resident manager the most active top executive, but you won't want to bother him either unless it's something deadly serious. The officer of the day in most hotels is the assistant manager, who has authority to adjust all the minor problems that may concern you, such as extending your check-out time, adjusting errors in your bill, and cashing personal checks.

You'll do most of your business, however, with the room clerk, the guy behind the front desk. He assigns your rooms and changes it if you don't like it. He also sends the man to fix the plumbing or light fixture. Usually, too, it is his job to make reservations if they are for the same day on which they are requested. For future reservations, you ask for the reservations clerk.

MATTER OF POLICY

Any matters of policy or management which may concern you while you are a guest usually are first called to his attention. He may or may not refer you then to the assistant manager.

Requests for service—sending for your car, room service, getting someone to run errands for you—all should be directed to the bell captain, or superintendent of service. For clothes cleaning or laundry, you ask for the valet.

If you need something from the drug store, liquor store, or other business firms most hotels have situated in their lobbies, you can usually phone them direct for delivery. The hotel probably has a direct wire, which means you won't be charged for an outside call.

DAY STARTS EARLY

In making reservations, remember that the hotel day begins at 6 or 7 a.m., not midnight. If you arrive any time prior to 6 or 7, the arrival date is that of the previous day. To avoid confusion, also name the day of the week in your reservation request, particularly if you are arriving between midnight and 7 a.m.

Checkout time is any time from 3 to 6 p.m., depending on the city. What time you arrived has no bearing. If you arrive at 6 a.m. and stay till 6 p.m. the next night—36 hours—you're still charged for only one day, just as you would be if you arrived at midnight and checked out at 8 a.m.—only one eight-hour night.

If you have to stay in town an hour or two past the checkout time, the hotel almost invariably will permit it if you ask. If you're leaving much later than the checkout time, they'll suggest you check your bags in the lobby checkroom (free for guests and anyone else, usually) so they may assign the room.

The lobby check room is handy for all travelers. For a small tip you can leave bags there while you are in town for a few hours, even if you're not stopping at the hotel. Another free service of hotels is holding mail for anyone who wants it sent there, guest or not.

EARLY TO RISE

Should you have to check out in a hurry when your day's visit is done, it's wise to rise a little earlier, pack and check your bags in the checkroom, and pay your bill, advising the cashier you want the room held for you until you plan to leave.

When leaving your room for any time, it's wise, too, if you're living out of a suitcase, to have everything packed and locked to discourage theft either by employees or sneak thieves.

Speaking of theft, the "do not disturb" sign on the inside of the doorknob, or in the top desk drawer, is a silent ally. Once your room is made up, hang it outside even if you're out. Potential thieves will assume you're in and stay away.

Leave the sign on your door at all times when you're in. It will keep away the endless stream of maids who—invariably without knocking—are always trying to get in to see if the room is in order. Sometimes the frightening sound of the key in the lock will wake you at the crack of dawn, as the first maids start their rounds.

Be sure to put on the night latch when retiring; if you don't the house detective may wake you in the middle of the night to do so as he makes his rounds.

THE BLANKET SEARCH

If you don't find a blanket on the bed, it's in a bureau drawer or on a closet shelf. If you don't find a bed, you're in a studio type room and you summon a maid to uncamouflage it.

Should you need a maid for any

Should you need a maid for any reason—to straighten up an unmade room, supply stationery or missing towels, the telephone operator—ask for "linen room" or "Housekeeper." Leave the chambermaid a couple of dollars if your stay is long.

To replace light bulbs, repair plumbing, and other maintenance problems, you ask for "engineer." If you're planning to have visitors in your room early in the day, there's a card in the desk drawer to hang on the doorknob, indicating to the maid you want the room in order early.

In using the shower for the first time, turn it on and off while standing outside of it. The hot water may take 16 turns and the cold one-sixteenth of a turn, (or vice versa) letting yourself in for a a bone chilling while turning it on and a scalding while turning it off, if you're not familiar with the shower's eccentricities.

Keep track of your phone calls; errors on the bill are very common and the hotel will take your word for it if you say you were overcharged.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU DON'T OWN A PERSON BECAUSE YOU LOVE HIM

It's a very unfortunate thing that many people seem to feel that being in love means complete ownership of another person.

There's the girl who goes into hysterics if her fiance spends five minutes talking to another girl at a party; who throws a conniption fit if he makes an admiring comment about some beautiful blonde they pass on the street; who makes a scene if he wants to spend an occasional evening with other friends, instead of sticking by her side every night in the week.

And—but I don't think quite so often—there's the young man who gets jealous if the girl he's going with happens to chat a few minutes with some old admirer she runs into accidentally; if she wants to keep up with the group of girl friends who've been meeting around at each other's houses once a week ever since they graduated from high school; if she wants to go to a symphony concert without him, even though he hates any music but jazz.

The sooner two young people in love realize that over-possessiveness wrecks more marriages than it holds together, the more chance they'll be giving themselves of a long and happy married life.

That's the suggestion I'd like to pass on to a girl who has written me a very distressed letter because her fiance went out on a "blind date" without her, having been asked to be a last-minute substitute for a sick friend.

The girl says he made it perfectly clear to his unexpected date "that he was engaged and very much in love with me and planning to be married shortly."

She doesn't have to take her fiance's word for this, because she went to the girl herself—which was too bad, I think—and found out all about it. And the girl told her the circumstances quite frankly, saying the boy had told her he had been "coaxed" to go out on the date, and adding that his fiancee had nothing to worry about.

Aside from this one episode, everything is apperently very happy between the two young people.

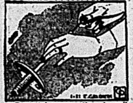
"He is so wonderful to me," the girl writes, "and does everything in his power to make me happy . . He comes to see me every night, and I'm always so happy when were together. He says we will be the happiest married couple, and we do get along very nicely."

Now, of course, it would have been better if this young man had told his fiancee that he had been requested to fill in on this occasion, and asked her if she would mind if he obliged his friend. For it would have given her the opportunity to show him that she was not the jealous type, and that she wanted him to have a reasonable amount of freedom, which would have done a lot to help in developing the adult relationship between them that would make for a happy marriage. On the other hand, if she objected—which I think, however, would have been a mistake—he would have abided by her wishes and avoided the possibility of hurt feelings on her part.

Still, my own feeling is that the girl is making a mountain out of a mole hill, and that she was very foolish ever to give the thing a second thought, particularly to the extent of going to the young woman in the case. Perhaps her fiance did make a mistake in going out on a date. But, from all indications, it was a very harmless one, and her description of his remorse, when he saw how badly she felt, certainly gives the impression that the most he was guilty of was thoughtlessness.

Altogether, I think the girl had better get a little more perspective on their relationship, or as time goes on, she'll be involving the two of them in a lot of emotional scenes, which will be very bad indeed. And the time for her to get the perspective is right now. Let her learn the difference between what's important and what is unimportant in a personal relationship. Let her cultivate a sense of humor, and let her realize that no two people, no matter how much in love they may be, are all-sufficient for each other. Each one needs to get away occasionally and keep up other interests, otherwise wholly exclusive companionship may grow stale, and in time become completely unpalatable to either one, or even both.

Wife Preservers



Be sure to keep your coffee maker well cleaned. If you use a percolator, be careful to keep the tube through which the water circulates to the coffee, free of finely ground coffee or it will not operate. A very long, fine brush (from the dime store) may be run through it to clean it out.

INNER LINE

By ALICE ALDEN

FASHION hands out a new line and lingerie must perforce follow. Skirts are mostly narrow, in fact many of them are very much so, with just a low placed godet for ease in motion. So, under the slim lines, goes a slim slip, such as the beauty shown here. It is fashioned of nylon Alencon lace, the sculptured bodice net lined. The skirt is very gently flared and has a scalloped hemline, edged with Val lace as is the neckline.

ANSWER:

I have mailed the "Oven Meals for Two" release.

TUTTI FRUITTI

In the old days this was started with a pint of brandy in a stone jar, and various fruits were added fresh when they were in season such as pineapple, strawberries, cherries, raspberries, apricots, peaches, and as fruit was added an equal quantity of sugar was added. It was kept covered and refrigerated. Nowadays a heavy sugar syrup is made in proportions of 2 cups each sugar and water and fruit is added fresh, with additional dry sugar, and the whole is flavored with almond or kirsch or sherry flavoring. Almonds may be added as sauce is used.

QUESTION:

I should appreciate any recipes you may have for bar or pan cookies taht are nourishing and not too rich . .have you any made with peanut butter or dried fruit filling such as date. . . your column is helpful and has up-to-the-minute food news. — E. L.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

PROBLEM OF DIFFERING CUSTOMS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I recently moved to this city, to which he was transferred by his company. Now that we are settled we would like to do some entertaining, but we are perplexed how to go about it. About two weeks ago, an associate of my husband's and his wife gave a charming late-Sunday-afternoon party for my husband and me. We had a wonderful time meeting their friends, and thought that at once we would receive invitations by some of the guests, at least to "come to call." But absolutely nothing has happened, and we don't know whether we are supposed to wait for some development or we are expected to make the next move. What do you think?

— Newcomer

Well first I think your worrying is a bit premature . . . two weeks isn't a very long time, and also, in the first weeks after the busy holidays, there's often a social let-up. It's true, of course, that in most communities, the idea is that the newcomers wait for hospitality-gestures to be made to them. But since you would like to take a social step at once, I suggest that you and your husband invite the hostess and her husband to dine at your house, and then perhaps during the conversation you could discover a "lead" you could follow for further entertaining.

NO GOING-AWAY PRESENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Bill and I have been good friends for over two years; just good friends, not engaged. Last Christmas we exchanged presents, but although he knew that my birthday was just after New Year's, he didn't give me a birthday present. Now he has just received word of his transfer to a much better position with his company in another city, some distance from here. Would it be proper for me to give him a going away present, or wouldn't you advise this?

— Marie Z.

I wouldn't advise this, because I think it would be a rather forced gesture. My suggestion is that you write him a friendly note of congratulations and best wishes. Or, if you know his new address, you might send him a telegram timed to arrive just before or just after he has arrived, as an assurance of your friendly thought and good wishes.

TO TAKE GIFT OR TO SEND IT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have been told that we are to be invited to a large party of relatives and friends and at this party the announcement will be made of the marriage of friends of ours. This marriage took place three months ago and is just now being announced. Should we take the couple a wedding present? — Ursula M.

This is such an unusual plan that it might be a good idea if you could perhaps find out what other guests are planning to do, and follow this. Otherwise I should think that, if you particularly want to give a wedding present, it would be better to send it before the party, or, if the announcement is supposed to be a surprise to most of the guests, send your present after the party.

For Parents Only

Children Need 'Face Savings'

By NANCY CLEAVER

Did you ever meet a mother who was not eager to talk about her child? There is no subject of conversation which is of more inerest to mother. Usually they proudly comment on their son's or daughter's clever sayings, or success at school or in sports.

But occasional an ambitious mother confides in a friend her disappointment in her child's actions. If she does this in Junior's presence, naturally he dislikes being pulled to pieces. He wants to appear in the best possible light. Why, of all people, should his mother not remember his need of "saving face"?

Have you not heard comments something like these and been aware of the inner misery of the child who was being painted in an uncomplimentary way?

"Tommy has been so disobedient lately. I've told him not to touch his father's car but this morning I found him in the front seat pretending to drive. I don't know what has got into him!"

"Helen almost failed to pass into the next class this year Her older sister was so clever! She always was near the top of the class."

"Johnny has been picking up the most undesirable words from the older children whom he plays with on the street!"

SELDOM HELPED

Disobedience, low grades at school, bad language, are seldom helped by discussing them with a caller. Matters like these should never be talked about in a child's hearing. A child needs to know that mother and daddy love him, and are trying to help him overcome his faults or difficulties. Mothers do well to speak of a child's good points rather than his failings if they feel they must speak of their youngster when another mother calls.

"Losing Face" at school is hard for a child from a happy home but it is poison for an insecure boy or girl from an unhappy family environment. If trouble with the law, or scandal, or divorce have caused his parents to be in the public eye, it is the worst time for him to be scolded in public.

A young man in a reform school told his counsellor that his parents never spoke well of him and it was the last straw to his self esteem when he was expelled from a Boy's Church Club for misbehavior. Fortunately, a great many patient and wise mid-week youth leaders and Sunday School teachers have lessened the juvenile dlinquency in many areas and kept boys out of tangles with the law.

A teacher in a Sunday School offered to teach a class which had acquired a particularly bad reputation because there were so many problem children in it. The former teacher had only made matters worse by "making an example" of each child who was saucy. The new teacher was really interested in her scholars. They felt her understanding and desire to help them. She praised whenever she could.

FORCE FOR GOOD

As the weeks passed, she got to know the children who had been labelled "incorrigible". Together they planned a hike and picnic supper which was enjoyed by everyone.

Gradually this teacher found out about her pupils' home environments. Without exception, the difficult child came from a broken home or a home where the parents were constantly quarreling. The children felt uncertain of love at home and they were sensitive that their family life was different from other peoples.

Because she loved them and believed in them, and knew enough to "save their face", this teacher was a real force for good in the lives of every one of her pupils. She believed in the old Scottish proverb: "Give a dog an ill name and he will soon be hanged."

Teachers, parents—anyone who has anything to do with children should be particularly careful not to destroy a child's good opinion of himself. This does not mean that bad habits or wrong doing must be ignored. No—a child should be helped to face his wrong habit or misdeed. He likely needs help in breaking a bad habit by replacing it with a desirable one. The small boy who will not share his playthings, must learn through experience that if he refuses to share, other children will not want to play with him. Mother will "save his face" by talking this over with him when the two of them are alone.

Beauty

BEAUTIES KEEP BUSY

There are women who are industrious, gay of spirits. There are women who are selfish, lazy, self-indulgent, good for nothing. Maybe inheritance plays a part in these characteristics. So does early training. Maybe the ductless glands have something to do with it. Who knows?

Active women, finding life interesting and zestful, never seem to grow old. They have fun. Beauty griefs don't seem to catch up with them. Work is stimulating; idleness is a sedative.

There is a difference between work and drudgery, of course, but the difference is in one's state of mind. Some women don't grumble about washing dishes because they have a feeling of pleasure when dishes are put away neatly and the kitchen is in apple-pie order. It's all in the viewpoint.

It's a satisfaction when one goes to bed at night to know that one has accomplished something. Perhaps you have gone through that pile of mending that has been staring you in the face for ages. Or have visited a lonely invalid, cheered her with your merry gab and gossip. Or written letters that you should have written long ago.

Women who are just killing time are bored to tears, if they would tell the truth. Boredom casts unbecoming shadows on the face.

From a psychological point of view, work is good hygiene. The woman who has to get out and hustle for a living has little time for emotional sprees.

Disappointments aren't as dreadful when one is busy as they are when time lags and the day offers no useful tasks to be accomplished. Letting the mind dwell on past grievances is the best possible way of cultivating wrinkles and a lemon-like disposition.

ATTACH NO BLAME

KITCHENER (CP)—A coroner's jury Thursday night attached no blame to anyone in the death Jan. 24 of Mrs. John Dietrich, 52, hit by a train at the Aster street crossing. The jury recommended that trains be required to whistle at all crossings in the city.

All France Lacks in Africa Is Money, Might and Policy

By PRESTON GROVER

ALGIERS (AP)—The problems arising from a divided and almost immobile French National Assembly are complicated by a conflicting two-way policy for North Africa. At the same time that France is trying to graft Algeria onto herself, she is agreeing to early home rule for Tunisia and, later on, for Morocco.

If Tunisia gets home rule first, will the nationalists in Algeria sit quietly by?

Just to make France's problems more difficult, the Communist radio in Budapest and the pan-Arab radios in Cairo, Beirut and Karachi bombard North Africa with daily broadcasts inciting nationalist demonstrations and terrorism. Even Franco's radio in Spanish Morocco takes a daily kick at her.

Aside from petty party squabbles in the assembly itself, the government is heavily influenced by hundreds of thousands of French colonists in North Africa. They have little sympathy with the nationalist yearnings for self-rule. They admit they have a privileged position and intend to keep it if they can.

They have brought high-quality farming to North Africa which the Arabs are not likely to have produced. The increased yields coming from French farming provide much of the food for the increasing Arab population. And the more Arabs there are, the more they cry for a share of the land the French are farming.

It is a problem calling for money, might and a clear policy. France is short of all three.

As you wander through these three North African territories, so isolated from Paris and yet so heavily involved in its petty internal squabbles, you begin to sense the hopelessness felt by many Moslems, and by many French.

You see the naked and abandoned columns of ancient Roman cities and you begin to wonder if you aren't witnessing another "decline and fall."

It isn't that bad yet. It isn't as bad as was Indochina, but there are many of the same unsolved problems and contradictory situations, the same bewildered local populations waiting to see which way to jump. The time to act won't be there forever.

Early Detection Most Important In Cancer Control

The goal of the Canadian Cancer Society is to save lives according to a statement issued for National Health Week. In order to do this the Society presses a vigorous program of education (it also sponsors research and welfare) designed to help people recognize the early symptoms of cancer and seek immediate medical advice.

This early detection is of the greatest importance because of the nature of tumor growth.

Cancer is described as the uncontrolled, unregulated growth of cells. All human growth begins as one cell. This cell divides and redivides to form millions of cells. When these cells have formed tissues and organs the cell reproduction process is slowed down to take care of normal development and replacement only. The cells use the nourishment brought to them by the blood stream to carry out their proper functions in the body.

CRIMINAL CELLS

But for some unexplained reason some of these cells — in the stomach, skin, breast, intestine or elsewhere — may begin to grow again without any regulation or control. They use all the nourishment brought to them for growth rather than function.

These wild, criminal cells form what is known as a malignant tumor. This tumor may grow rapidly or slowly; it may remain where it began or it may spread (metastisize) through the blood and lymphatic system to other parts of the body.

The only hope is to locate this tumor early and either destroy the cancer cells with radiation (x-ray, radium, radioactive liquids, cobalt 60) or remove them entirely by surgery.

INTENSIVE PROGRAM

By means of an intensive program using pamphlets, films, radio, television, panel discussions, talks, dramatizations, magazines and newspaper articles the Cancer Society stresses the importance of early diagnosis and adequate treatment and urges people to seek medical advice when any change from good health occurs, including:

1) Any sore that does not heal
2) A lumb or thickening in the breast or elsewhere
3) Unusual bleeding or discharge
3) Any change in a wart or mole
5) Persistent indigestion or difficulty in swallowing
6) Persistent hoarseness or cough
7) Any change in normal bowel habits.

The results of this program are apparent. Dr. Ivan Smith, director of the cancer clinic in London, Ontario, stated recently that . . . "Each year more and more people are presenting themselves for treatment when their tumors are in Stage 1 and most responsive to treatment." Other clinicians across the country have come to the same conclusions.

BAD ONE!

The Memos passed up a glorious chance to split the top position in the senior "B" group last night, when they fell apart in the second period after coming up with a gallant effort in the opener. The Colts played perfectly and their four goals without a return in the disastrous second spelled the margin of victory. It was a clean game with both teams dead-eyed on the puck and Referees Moe Walsh and Ted Topping had a comparatively easy time. The Memos' defence looked bad, albeit Bob Wilson and Hub Macy were two of the team's stars.

WHAT AGAIN!

The Kansas Kockerel is crowing again.

Wes Santee, the American miler, and the nation's best braggadocio, is shooting off about what he would have done had he ran in the "Miracle Mile" at Vancouver last year against two of his peers, Roger Bannister and John Landy.

Sprouting his tail feathers in an aura of hot air, the Kansan told friends, he boasted, "That if I met Bannister and Landy I would make it a point to run between them. That is, Landy would set the pace as usual, and I'd stay at Bannister's shoulder but in front of Bannister."

And the Kockerel crowed: "In the race at Vancouver Bannister put on a tremendous drive in the stretch to win. If I'd been in, I would have gone past Landy and Bannister, would have to pass us both. He couldn't have done it."

That, kiddies, is not sour grapes, it's a stinking vineyard. The trouble with Mr. Santee is, that any thunder and hero homage that would have come his way had be been the first to run the mile, outdoors, that is, was taken by the Ole Jolly Roger. Mr. Landy also came in for some of the glory, albeit was anti-climactic. Mr. Santee, if he can stop bragging long enough, and start doing something, can only achieve the somewhat secondary honor of breaking Landy's world's record.

But as far as beating Bannister in the Miracle Mile, Santee whose best thus far is 4.06 would have been so far in the ruck the crowd would have left before he finished.

The Kockerel ruffled his wattles, opened his beak and forecast he would beat John Landy's mark of 3.58. That, as the Irishman said when he was told the statue of Liberty would mambo down Broadway, "I must see."

Again we reiterate Dan Parker(erudite New York Mirror columnist, "Why doesn't Santee stop blowing and do something about breaking the record."

RELEASE SMALLER FISH

Ice fishing is fast growing in popularity and each year more and more fishermen are heading for ice-covered lakes with chisel and tackle to try their luck. Lake trout have, in the past, been the greatest attraction to ice fishermen and in some areas still are tops in the popularity poll. Lake trout are proably the most vulnerable to angling of all the salmonoid species and are becoming scarce in many of Ontario's inland lakes, according to officials of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests.

"To retain this important species of game fish in our local inland waters, anglers are urged to return all small lake trout caught in winter angling to the water, since more small trout are taken in winter angling with bait than are taken by trolling during the summer, months," says District Forester James Ruxton, of Tweed.

Miz Clementine Named to Race In Handicap

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Miz Clementine from the Calumet farm heads a field of 11 mares and fillies named Friday to race in the $37,000 Santa Margarita Handicap at Santa Anita Park today. Thirteen Derby hopefuls were entered in the $29,600 San Felipe Handicap.

The double-feature bill is expected to attract 50,000 race fans.

Miz Clementine was to carry 130 pounds, spotting from nine to 23 pounds to her rivals.

A pair of Irish imports, Robert S. Howard's Mab's Choice, and Alberta Ranches' Blue Butterfly, weighted at 120 and 121 pounds, appear the leading threats to Miz Clementine.

Might Be Premature Move But Only Matter of Time Before He Learns Tricks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brian Cullen, one of junior hockey's most sought-after and highest-scoring players, is back in the big league.

The move into the National Hockey League still might be premature for the 21-year-old centre but it's only a matter of time before he picks up those important tricks of the trade.

Toronto Maple Leafs brought up Cullen, their prized rookie, in time for last Thursday's game against the league-leading Montreal Canadiens. Toronto lost 3-2 and Cullen only got an assist, but he showed so much improvement since he was demoted to the American League Pittsburgh Hornets that Leafs decided to keep him for a while.

How long, nobody knows. Says coach King Clancy:

"He might be able to stick with us this time. We can't tell yet. It's not fair to judge the boy on that one game against Canadiens. He certainly improved in the minors, though."

There's no doubt about Cullen's future in the NHL. Even Clancy says that. It's just a question of experience. And Brian doesn't mind going to the minors as long as he's playing.

He was with Leafs for eight games earlier this season and was sent to Pittsburgh for seasoning. Cullen looked at it this way: "It's better to get a regular spot with Hornets than warm the bench for Leafs. A guy learns that way, you know."

GOOD HOCKEY HEAD

Cullen, who scored 35 points in 35 games with Hornets, was called from Pittsburgh as an emergency replacement for the injured Rudy Migay. Rudy is back now. Leafs made way for Cullen by sending centre Bob Bailey to Hornets.

"Cullen has a smart hockey head on his shoulders," said Leaf general manager Hap Day. "I figure he'll get us some goals we need."

But Clancy cautions that the five-foot-ten Cullen will have to find more speed. The dash he had in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League when he scored 68 goals and 93 assists in 59 games with St. Catharines TeePees in 1953-54, isn't good enough.

Cullen is being used mainly on power plays. Tonight he'll go against the last - place Chicago Black Hawks, whom the third-place Leafs entertain in Toronto. In two other engagements, the fifth-place New York Rangers are at Montreal and the second-spot Detroit Red Wings take on the fourth-place Bruins at Boston.

Three games are scheduled for Sunday night. Canadiens are at New York, Leafs at Chicago and the Wings at Boston.

Three Rinks In Running For Grand Aggregate

By GEORGE FRAJKOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP—The championships of four near-the-top trophies in the 42nd Quebec International bonspiel were decided Friday night and the race for the Grand Aggregate Trophy, one of the bonspiel's two most important, tightened into a three-rink race.

Huntley Ferguson's Bathurst, N.B., rink, skipped by Charlie McArdle, walloped Justice D. P. J. Kelly of Toronto Granite 11-6 to win the Omega Trophy, ranked with the Chateau Frontenac Trophy as second only to the Aggregate and the bonspiel championship Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy. Justice Kelly won the Chateau Frontenac in 1953.

Friday night the Chateau Frontenac went to Nazaire Lemelin of Quebec's Etchemin Curling Club who upset Sam Gunn of Brantford, 10-4.

The third-ranked Francois Jobin Trophy, was won by another Bathurst rink, skipped by Robert Archibald, who beat Summers (Sam) Wilson of Sudbury, 13-7.

FIRST APPEARANCE

Dr. C. G. (Ted) Teskey of Kitchener, playing in his first Quebec International, won the fourth-ranked Holt-Renfrew Trophy with an easy 14-7 victory over Quebec Jacques Cartier's Pierre Amyot. Teskey in an earlier game racked up the first eight-point end of his life and the sixth in the International's history.

Ferguson, in winning over Mr. Justice Kelly, stretched his winning streak to seven games against one loss and leads in the standings for the Grand Aggregate.

Ranks that reach the quarter-finals of the Chateau Frontenac, Omega and Francois Jobin events qualified for the Lieutenant-Governor's playoffs.

Lemelin led from the start in his match against Brantford's Gunn who was playing for the first time in the International. The Etchemin rink had Gunn shut out 8-0 until the 10th end.

Archibald's win over Wilson paid off the Sudbury rink for knocking Archibald out of the Lieutenant-Governor's playoff in the second round. It also spoiled Wilson's chance to win two major prizes.

Until the loss to Archibald, Wilson could have won the Grand Aggregate and the Francois Jobin.

Oarsmen Need Best Equipment Says Guest

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Jack Guest, Sr., of Toronto, president of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, said Friday night Canadian oarsmen cannot hope to compete in international events unless they have the best equipment available. He urged that a committee be set up immediately to raise funds for the purchase of shells and oars for Canadian international crews.

Speaking to the St. Catharines Rowing Club's ninth annual captain's dinner, the former Diamond Sculls winner said English and European crews are given new shells immediately they are chosen for international competition. Canadian clubs have to buy their own boats if their crews make the grade and are to represent Canada.

He said the CAAO has enough money right now to help with such a project and stressed that it would be a continuing fund in that the shells could be sold at little loss following the events for which they were purchased.

Bilts Continue To Head Tee Pees In Junior 'A'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Eddie Bush of Guelph Biltmores in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league had a good hunch Wednesday.

After Biltmores had lost three straight Eddie figured the team would be "all right now."

"We're starting to hustle again," he said.

Friday night the Biltmores proved him right with a shattering 9-2 victory over Galt Black Hawks at Guelph.

The win kept Guelph in first place, with 54 points, two ahead of St. Catharines TeePees who defeated Kitchener - Waterloo Canucks 7-1 at Kitchener Friday night. In the league's other game Hamilton Cubs beat Barrie Flyers 4-3 at Barrie.

Toronto St. Michael's Majors are third with 49 points, four ahead of Toronto Marlboros. Hamilton has 40, Galt 36, Barrie 28 and Kitchener 16.

Billy Graham led Biltmores' attack with three goals. Bill McCrary counted twice and Bill Sweeney, Tom McCarthy, Roy Burmister and Ken Murphy added the others. John Sleaver and Floyd Smith counted for Galt.

Centre Hank Cisla and Ab McDonald sparked TeePees with two goals each. Ciesla also collected four assists. Cec Hockstra, brother Ed and Chester Warchol counted the others. Al Duncan scored Canucks' only goal.

The Cubs took the lead in the first period and made it 2-0 in the second.

Ken Stenlund counted twice for Hamilton. Gary Sharp and Bill Binnie added singles. John MacDonald scored twice for Barrie and Bill Loveday added the third.

In tonight's games Barrie is at Galt and Marlboros at St. Catharines. In the Toronto doubleheader Sunday Kitchener is at St. Michael's and Guelph at Marlboros.

Big Four Owners Meet to Quell Revolt in Own Ranks Before Reaching Pact With NHL

MONTREAL (CP) — Big Four Football League owners meet today to quell a revolt in their own ranks before drawing up a pact to end their player war with the National Football League.

Cast in the rebel role are the Toronto Argonauts, who want to build their 1955 team around players raided from NFL teams. Trying to bring about a peace are the other three clubs—Montreal Alouettes, Ottawa Rough Riders and Hamilton Tiger-Cats — who want to see a no-raiding clause agreed to between the two leagues.

The session is a continuation of the league's annual meeting, where the no-raiding clause was adopted, over the objections of the Argos.

SAY EIGHT SIGNED

The Argos claim they signed reached with the other teams the ruling but they have announced only three names—Bill Albright and Billy Shipp of New York and Gil Mains of Detroit.

Pre - meeting speculation was that a compromise would be reached with the other taems agreeing to let Argos keep two or three of the players. Ralph W. Cooper, new league president, also was expected to be asked to make Toronto show its hand by requesting all teams to hand over a list of players they have signed who are under contract or option in the NFL.

Meetings between NFL commissioner Bert Bell and Big Four officials have been stymied by Toronto's insistence on keeping the NFL players they have signed. Bell said in effect that the Big Four should get its own house in order before arranging any further meetings.

Memos Fail To Make Three-Way Tie Losing To Cornwall By 9-6 Score

Fall Apart in 2nd Period When Colts Score Four Goals; Dugan, Macy Best for Losers

By GEORGE H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

The Belleville Memos fell apart in the second period of a wide-open senior "B" tussle here last night, and the Cornwall Colts galloped into first place, after handing them a 9-6 defeat before nearly 1200 customers.

The victory gave the Colts a two-point lead over the Whitby Dunlops with the Memos holding down third position, one point ahead of the Kingston Goodyears.

The Memos looked like winners in a hard-fought first period when they scored two quick goals to a single from the Colts. The Cornwall team capitalized on a more or less disorganized Memos squad in the second heat, ramming home four goals without a return.

The smooth-skating, hard-checking Colts met the Memos' wide-open play in the third chapter when both teams scored four goals in a free-wheeling exhibition. The Memos looked weak on defence but they roared back with an effort that was too little and too late. Devanney in the Cornwall nets, was the hero of the piece as he threw back the Memos' goalmouth efforts time after time.

THIS LINE GOOD

The Connelly-Batten-Savard line was the striking power for the Colts. Connelly was good for three goals with Savard getting one and four assists. Batten racked up a pair of helpers. Belmore helped himself to a couple of goals as did Payette with Marshal getting the odd one.

Arnie Dugan, who has been playing the best hockey of his Belleville career, came into his own last night as did Hub Macy. Arnie scored the first two Memos goals while Hub clicked for another pair. Bob Wilson, the best defenceman along with Hub, the Memos had out there last night, was good for another Johnny Muckler getting the odd one.

The game was clean for a top spot position was at stake. Referees Maurice Walsh and Ted Topping kept a close tab on the teams but it was not necessary. Both Cornwall and the Memos played the puck and the result was but six minor sentences, none of them damaging, which were split by the teams.

The Memos, stunned by the savage four goal drive of the Colts in the second period flew back to the attack in the final heat. But while they did match the Colts as far as scoring goes, it was evident they were off their stride. On the other hand the Colts plays were clicking perfectly and they deserved their win

MacDonald broke up a close-checking first period at 4.51 when he got the gate for holding. Three minutes later Arnie Dugan climaxed a sustained offensive by banging home the puck on a rebound off the boards. The Memos continued their drive closely checking the Colts forays. Peter Jones broke into the clear but Devanney in Cornwall nets out guessed him after being deked out of position.

Dugan came up with his second goal of the period on a three-man drive with Peter Jones and Bob Wilson. The Colts roared back and with less than three minutes to go, Belmore drove a screened shot past Barclay.

Henri went off for slashing at Bettiol at 18.14 and Bingley followed him a minute later, seconds before the period ended.

The Colts drove all out in a sustained offensive in the second. They fired home four goals to grab a 5-2 lead without a return from the Memos. The Boucher crew were out-classed and appeared disorganized although Devanney in Colts' net was superlative at times. Connelly tied the score at 4.05 on a drive with Savard and Marshal. The latter player gave the Colts the lead four minutes later and Belmore made it 4-2 at 12.14.

The Colts' offensive was clicking neatly and the Memos defence looked bad. Connelly scored his second goal with Savard and Batten at 14.36 and the Colts were playing it cosily at this point. The Memos drove hard but their attacks were not organized while Devanney was a tower of strength in the Cornwall net.

The third period saw both teams go all out. The Colts to protect a substantial lead and the Memos to cut down the margin.

Payette scored in less than two minutes to increase the Colts' lead, then Johnny Muckler fired one from the blueline that had Devanney beaten all the way.

Cornwall's Payette got that one back as the teams went all out in goal-seeking glory. Eight goals were rapped in this period with the teams splitting the honors.

The Memos roared back, it is true, before what they called 1200 spectators, but the Colts matched them goal for goal with Payette hitting for a pair in minutes. The Memos ripped in to cut the lead when Macy after dipsy-doodling his way through the Cornwall team, let go a bouncer that hurled its way into the net.

The Colts struck back after that, scoring two quickies by Connelly and Savard. Then the Memos hit their best late-period stride, firing home two goals by Macy and Bob Wilson as time ran out.

The teams:

Cornwall — Goal, Devanney; defence, Marshall, Bingley; centre, Savard; wings, Batten, Connelly; subs, O'Brien, Payette, Morris, Gould, Mario, Henri, Belmore.

Belleville — Goal, Barclay; defence, Wilson, Macy; centre, Doran; wings, P. Jones, Dugan; subs, Goyer, Muckler, Ed. Duncan; Bettiol, DeGray, D. Jones, MacDonald, Day, Hull.

Referees—M. Walsh, T. Topping.

Johnny Palmer Leads Phoenix Golf Tourney

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Dropping a 40-foot putt on the final hole, Johnny Palmer took the lead at the 36-hole midway point in the $15,000 Phoenix open golf tournament Friday with a 135, five under par.

Al Balding of Toronto, only Canadian entered in the tournament, was eliminated with 154.

The veteran from Charlotte, N.C., carded a 68 Friday to edge past Bing Littler, Palm Springs, Calif., first round leader, who added a 70 to his 66 of Thursday for 136.

While Johnny was one of the tournament favorites, another Palmer, Arnold (no relation) surprised by carding a 68 for 137.

Gavilan Gets Nod Over Durando But Cuban Keed Has Slowed Up

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—How much does Kid Gavilan have left? The first returns are in now.

After his split decision over Ernie Durando Friday night at Madison Square Garden, you'd say the Cuban Keed still can take a bombing punch on the chin by a slugger. He still can flash an eye-catching flurry to win votes and start arguments in the balcony.

Maybe Gavilan still has enough left to win back the welterweight title he lost to John Saxton, Oct. 20.

Maybe, but not for sure. It will take more than one fight to tell, after a three-month layoff.

There were times when Gavilan, weighing 152½ to Durando's 160¼ pounds, revived memories of his early days. There were times, in the first and third rounds, when he reminded you of his fights with Saxton in Philadelphia and Bobo Olson in Chicago, nights when his reflexes were blurred and his pace slowed and labored.

Referee Mark Conn gave Gavilan only three rounds, to Durando's seven. Both judges had Gavilan on top, but not by too much. Judge Bert Grant saw it 6-4 and judge Artie Aidala 5-4-1.

Gavilan owed his decision to the left hook that won so many of his 118 pro fights since 1943. At one stage in the seventh, he drove home 10 consecutive hooks, accompanying each with a grunt.

Detroit Lions Lose McCord To Ottawa

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit Lions learned Friday their No. 3 draft choice, Darris McCord of Tennessee, has signed with Ottawa of the Big Four Football League.

The club also was still in the dark about the plans of quarterback Tom Dublinsky who has been offered a contract by Toronto.

"Dublinsky talked to us after he talked to them," a club spokesman said, "and we made him a counter-offer. He said he wanted to talk it over with his family and would let us know by today. But we haven't heard a word from him."

McCord was due here today to discuss terms with the Lions. A representative of the club called him at Knoxville Friday and was told the player had signed with Ottawa Thursday.

Pat Oleksiak, Tennessee halfback who was the Lions' 18th choice in last month's draft, said Thursday he has signed with Winnipeg.

Since the end of the season the Lions also have lost Gil Mains, a defensive lineman, to Toronto.

Canadian Teams Pose Major Threat To Redskins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Offers from Canadian teams for two recent Washington Redskin acquisitions pose a major threat to the club's rebuilding program but coach Joe Kuharich said Friday he has every reason to believe the men in question will wind up here.

The two are Ralph Guglielmi, Notre Dame's all-American quarterback who was the Redskin's No. 1 draft choice last week, and Lavern Torgeson, top-ranking linebacker acquired in a trade from Detroit Lions.

Torgeson said he is weighing an offer from Vancouver Lions while Guglielmi's "business manager" said he foresees trouble in the Redskins' efforts to sign the Notre Dame star.

Statements that Guglielmi would be tough to sign, Kuharich said, "are pure conjecture." He added he would go to South Bend to talk with Guglielmi next week and that "we should have a very interesting discussion."

Women Stage Indoor Track Meet in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP)—A field of 15 agile young women from the United States and Canada compete in tonight's national AAU senior women's indoor track meet.

During the meet at the University of Chicago six special events will determine the U.S. team for the Pan-American Games at Mexico City March 12-26.

A Canadian contingent from Toronto includes entries in the 440-yard medley-relay events and winsome Jackie MacDonald, Canadian shot put record-holder. The Canadians can try for American titles, but won't compete for Pan-American team berths in this meet. The Canadian team for Mexico was announced in Vancouver earlier this week.

Solunar Notes

Odds and Ends on Sports

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables.)

Never will I cease wondering over the things that some people do in the outdoors in the guise of "sport." Around home, probably, and at the office or the plant, they are normal, every-day people, but put them in the outdoors, gun in hand, and something happens to them.

On the grounds of two clubs hereabouts are enclosures wherein tame deer are kept. Within the past 18 months two little buck deer, tame as house dogs, have been shot while walking around in their pens. One of these offenders was caught, the other, unfortunately, has not been apprehended.

Now you tell me why, in the name of common sense, anybody would shoot a tame deer inside a wire enclosure.

For several years an albino doe roamed the woods near Clearfield, Pennsylvania. She was well known to the folks of that area and was quite a curiosity. During the buck season of 1953 she was shot and left to die in the woods. Doe deer were not legal game at that time, and the man who shot her could not bring her out. He made no attempt to cut out some of the meat. He simply shot her and left her lying there.

ALBINO BUCK

Until December 1954, an albino buck had his range in the woods During the last deer season this deer was shot. To be sure, he was legal game, but he was a pure albino, all white with pink eyes. As such he was a rarity and not, to my way of thinking, meat for the table.

I have talked with three men of that area who knew of this deer and had allowed him to pass unharmed when, within the law, they could have shot him. They knew his range, had watched him feeding, and were well acquainted with his habits. They could have killed him many times. The excuse of the man who brought him in was not a good one. "If I hadn't shot him," he said, "somebody else would have." Moreover, he posed for a picture which was published in the local newspaper.

In Wisconsin last fall two men shot other hunters in the mistaken belief that they were shooting at bears. Not only were these fellows careless but signally lacking in regard for consequences, as the bear season was not in progress at the time.

SHOT SHEEP

In a pleasant valley, through which an excellent trout stream flows—also not many miles from my house—a farmer of my acquaintance had put his flock of sheep to graze in a hillside pasture near the road. A man stopped his car, stood beside it and killed seven of those sheep with a high powered rifle. Then he drove away before the farmer could get the number of his car.

In Pallisades Park, New Jersey, two young men were arrested a few years ago. Their offence? shooting a beautiful bull elk that was on display in a wire enclosure.

One day a warden friend of mine was following another car along a narrow road in the mountains near my home. To his surprise, the driver stopped his car, shoved a rifle through the window, and started shooting, one shot after the other, at something on the opposite hill.

The warden walked up the road and stood beside the marksman. The fellow merely glanced at the warden and kept right on shooting. "What are you shooting at?" inquired the warden. "Not sure," was the reply; "I think it's a bear." The bear season had been over for more than two weeks. Of course, the warden arrested this one on several counts.

SOME SOLID CITIZENS

And so it goes, on down through the years. Not all of the offenders are willful lawbreakers. Some of them are solid citizens in their normal walks of life. Yet give them guns, put them in the outdoors, and, as I say, something happens to them.

My warden friend has a name for this malady—"hungry" he calls it. Evidently game, legal or illegal, represents to these hungry ones merely so much meat for the table. Again, maybe it is buck fever. Call it what you will, I still can't find the complete explanation.

FISHING TOURNAMENT

Once again the Metroplitan Miami fishing tournament is now in full swing. This is its 20th year.

An angler needs to put down no entry fee to compete. All he must do is to go fishing in the designated area and, once there, comply with the tournament regulations in order to enter his prize catch at one of the official weighing and checking stations. Should the catch be an outstanding one, he or she, stands to win a substantial prize or trophy when the tournament closes on April 17th.

The tournament Board of Directors will spend this year approximately $20,000 on this annual contest. It is run beautifully and fairly and the prizes are very much worthwhile. So, if you are in south Florida this year, by all means register your good catches. You can be proud.

KLAMATH RIVER DAMAGE

No doubt about it, the conservationists of this country have a constant war on their hands to save what is left of our great outdoors. Not only must we fight the big-dam builders and the governmental agencies who are all too prone to favor certain private interests—granting contracts for the bulldozing of our streams; granting mining and grazing claims and privileges, and so on, ad nauseum, but also must we be on guard constantly to check the activities of private firms who insist upon cutting corners to make a "quick buck."

Now word comes from the west coast that the famous Klamath River is being seriously harmed by logging operations. They tell us that the big companies are not to blame in this. They float their logs during high water. But small operators are damaging the fish habitat by cutting right to the water's edge and then taking their logs downstream regardless of water level.

At times of low water, naturally the riffles are shallow and incapable of floating logs. So these fellows use winches to drag the logs over the shallows. They might just as well use bulldozers. The bottom is unstabilized, the water is muddied, winter holes are being filled in, and silt is being deposited on a river bottom which normally is silt-free. In addition, boating is made hazardous because of floating logs and bark.

Obviously steps must be taken to control such logging operations if the Klamath River is to remain one of the world's famous fishing streams.

And you know when such steps will be taken—not until the sportsmen and the conservationists of the area, and for that matter, of the nation, make things so hot for the law makers that they no longer can ignore the situation. Until then the Klamath will continue to suffer the abuses to which it is now subjected.

BULLDOZER DAMAGE

The calm way that the powers-that-be go about the planned ruination of our streams and rivers these days is a thing which makes—at least, it should make—the conservation-minded angler sit back and take notice. They think no more of granting permits for bulldozer operations—ostensibly for flood control—than I do of hiring a man to mow the lawn.

An important part of the administrative system of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is its Department of Forests and Waters. The function of this body is exactly what the name implies—to safeguard for posterity our woods and waters. That is their duty to the taxpayers.

Before any work can be done in a stream the man undertaking this work must have his permit from Forests and Waters. So he submits his application. Sometimes this is made out by an individual. Often it is made out by a township supervisor, named with a petition signed by several riparian owners who wish to avail themselves of "flood control."

SLATED FOR RUINATION

These applications are submitted to the engineers attached to the Department who give them their consideration. Eventually the permits are issued and with each permit one more section of trout stream or river is slated for ruination. I am sorry to report that the present time a deplorably high percentage of our streams which flow anywhere near highways or habitations are reduced to the status of second-grade drainage ditches.

Within a quarter-mile of my house flows one of the world's loveliest trout streams—Loyalsock Creek. For years we have been fighting to preserve this stream from the depredations of the bulldozer. Mostly we have been successful but now and then a permit slides through and damage is done.

The last one was a heartbreaker. A channel was cut through an island below the bridge at Loyalsockville. Not only are two good riffles and an excellent pool put out of business; also the creek bottom is sufficiently unstabilized so that the famous Pig Pen Pool, one of the last good winter holes in the lower stream, will undoubtedly be filled in and rendered useless — a good half-mile of top-grade trout water ruined.

Pennsylvania is not unique in these abuses. Other states are suffering as well. How long, I wonder, are the anglers of the nation going to stand for this sort of thing? Obviously a few key men can't fight the whole fight. Think it over. Nothing speaks in such deafening tones as a letter to your congressman or senator. If he gets enough such letters you can bet that he, too, will get into the fight.

Marauders Drop Close Decision To Queen's

HAMILTON (CP) —McMaster Marauders Friday night almost managed to score their first win of the Senior Intercollegiate Basketball League season. They were close all the way and ahead part of the time but dropped a 64-61 decision to Queen's.

The score was close, but the game was not good. Both teams were miles off on their shooting, couldn't get the rebounds and missed miserably on free throws.

Paul Feder was the pick of the winners as he collected 17 points, nine on free throws.

The Queen's team arrived in town just minutes before the game time which according to coach Frank Tindall may have accounted for some of their tired play.

Haydon was next in line for Queens' honors with 10 points.

Lineup

Queen's (64)—Miller 9, Anglin 2, Donnelly 8, Latimer 4, Purcell 5, Millikan 4, Fedor 17, Hayden 10, Summers 5.

McMaster (61)—Jackson 15, Baillie, Raphael 4, Munroe 4, Darragh 4, Wooley 12, Johnson 7, Lindores 8, Brown 6, Pelch.

Blues Remain Undefeated In Hockey Loop

TORONTO (CP)—University of Toronto Blues remained undefeated in this season's Senior Intercollegiate Hockey League by defeating Quebec's Laval University 5-4 here Friday night.

Toronto now has seven wins and one tie for 15 points, seven better than second-place McGill University who have played only five games. Laval has yet to pick up a point, losing all seven games this season.

Ring Doctors Will Come Under Commission

NEW YORK (AP)—Julius Helfand, chairman of the New York state athletic commission, announced a new policy Friday which will place all ring doctors under the jurisdiction of the commission.

In the past doctors assigned to examine fighters have been licensed by the state but paid by the promoters. Now they will be paid from a commission kitty and rotated among the arenas.

The commission also voided a contract which Jackie Labua, a middleweight fighter from New York, held with managers Al Lamotta and brother Jake, the former champion. However, the commission, deferred its final verdict for a week so that Al Lamotta could appear.

Labua acknowledged that he signed a secret five-year agreement with the Lamottas in 1953 but had done so without knowing it violated commission rules. Al Lamotta's managerial contract was said to have expired.

AT THE McCARTHY

One of the highlights of "Down Three Dark Streets," new United Artists suspense thriller opening on Monday at the McCarthy Theatre, is the film's authentic, inside view of the criminal-catching techniques of the FBI.

"Down Three Dark Streeets," an adaptation of "Case File' FBI," best-selling novel by the Gordons, co-stars Borderick Crawford and Ruth Roman. The large supporting cast is headed by Martha Hyer, Marissa Pavan, Casey Adams, Kenneth Tobey, Gene Reynolds, Harlan Warde, Jay Adler and Suzanne Alexander.

Arthur Gardner and Jules V. Levy produced "Down Three Dark Streets," and Arnold Laven directed from a screenplay by the Gordons (husband-and-wife team; Gordon Gordon and Mildred Gordon) and Bernard C. Schoenfeld. Joseph Biroc was chief cinematographer, and music was composed and conducted by Paul Sawtell.

No expert on the crime-fighting techniques of the FBI had to be specially hired as a consultant on "Down Three Dark Streets," for the simple reason that Gordon Gordon is himself a former G-Man. He spent the war years as a special agent of the FBI, chasing down enemy spies and working on exciting cases involving native-born criminals.

One of the most interesting and least-known of the scientific methods of the FBI is employed as a central part of the plot of the film. This is the use of semantics —the science of words — to catch the picture's murder-in-chief. It is the proved contention of the FBI that word patterns — both written and spoken — can be as effective as fingerprints oin crime detection.

Lloyd Bridges and Simone Silva are featured in "Deadly Game," the added attraction.

Red Skelton Coming Back After Series of Disasters

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Groucho Marx calls him one of the world's great clowns, and most would agree. But harnessing his talents to the monster medium of TV has been a problem.

I'm speaking of Red Skelton, the pixy redhead from Vincennes, Ind., whose TV career has been an up and down affair.

Red's first shows were humdingers and he won the TV Academy's Emmy.

He kept up the pace for a season or two, then a series of disasters followed. This year he bounced back with two new sponsors, a new producer (Doug Whitney) and director (Jack Donohue), a good Tuesday night time slot and a wealth of enthusiasm. The result is a show which is drawing praise and building to a good rating.

NEVER LOST FOR GAGS

I dropped by CBS to check up on the new Red and found him in good form. He was a trim 195 pounds and looked happy.

Red kept up a steady stream of gags, making notes of those he thought might be usable on his show. He said he was working on a new product. "It's called instant money," he explained. "Little green stuff you drop in a glass of water and it becomes a five dollar bill."

He added: "Have you heard the definition of an alcoholic—someone you don't like who drinks as much as you do."

In a more serious vein, Red said he was happy with the way the new show was going.

He has played a wide range of characters, but it has always seemed to me that the funniest of all is a character named Red Skelton. I suggested he should play himself.

"I can't," he replied. "Red Skelton himself isn't funny."

A lot of his friends will argue with him on that.

Man Accused Of Threatening Champion

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and postal inspectors Friday seized a man they accused of sending threatening letters to heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano.

The man was identified as John Joseph Hannigan, 23, of suburban Glenolden. He was arraigned shortly after his arrest and held in $5,000 bail for a further hearing Monday.

The FBI said the arrest of Hannigan climaxed a months - long search and investigation which began when Marciano received the first of three letters, threatening his wife and child with bodily harm unless he lost his crown to Ezzard Charles in a title bout last June 17 in New York. Marciano won a 15-round decision.

REMEMBER WHEN

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bill Smith of the Great Lakes naval training station, former Ohio State star, set a world swimming record of 50 seconds for 100 yards 11 years ago today. The mark was lowered to 49.2 seconds in 1952 by Richard Cleveland at Columbus, Ohio.

No Owner Lined Up for Galt

GALT (CP)—Directors of the Baseball Association in Galt said Thursday night they still have not lined up a new owner for a team in the Intercounty Senior Baseball League but this was no indication that the city would not be in the league this year.

The directors got together to talk over the situation and said there is little change. Said association president Walter Reid:

"It would be foolish to say we are withdrawing our entry at this time, with the baseball season still more than three months away.

Your Horoscope

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

For Sunday, Feb. 6, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—If your course of action is carefully chosen and you include religious services, you should have a happy, interesting and hopeful day. All honest duties are honored.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Not hard to find right path and a productive return for today. First attend to your soul's needs, family's happiness, then other interests as obligations demand. Recreation encouraged.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — Encouraging aspects for good deeds, intelligent management of house or necessary matters. But your first duty should be God. Rest, recreation, helpful reading favored.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—God-given talents should be developed and used constantly for own betterment, for edification of family and the glory of God. We must give account of our stewardship every day!

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Cheerful period and we hope you are in good mood properly to enjoy them. Be enthusiastic for right interests and activities. Enjoy your church, family, worthy friends, yes, and socials.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Why not really take this day off from usual tasks, make it a pleasant Sunday honoring God, having happy associations with family, worthy friends. Indulge a diversion for a change.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Heed advice to Taurus and Gemini now. Day can be satisfying, depending largely on how you handle things on whole. Don't worry but do your best. You usually do a thorough job.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Many new ideas, avenues which could lead to fresh advancement, advantageous connections for future benefits. But do not do work that should wait for a week-day. Pay tribute to God now.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Could be pleasing productive time for urgent conferences, referring to books, study. However where work is not essential, don't force it. Enjoy religious and neighborly interests.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — FIRSTS should come first, and if you properly allocate your schedule you should be able to make room for necessary matters, wholesome recreation. Prayer, good deeds really count.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Today has the lasting, finer elements, spiritual development, higher education, true charity, concern for children and their needs. You should be a vital part of all these.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Intriguing, enterprising rays. You can have a happy time also give comfort and pleasure to family, friends, others. Do not work at cross purposes with wise elements.

YOU BORN TODAY are logical, unassuming, more talented and capable than you realize. There may be a tendency to indecision, lack of incentive, and a willingness to follow lead of others. These traits can be corrected by YOU now. Take advantage of your assets, strike out confidentially for achievement, and shun any associates not of fine principles, or who are wasters. Technical and skilled mechanical matters probably interest you. Alert yourself to the great possibilities before you, all of us, these progressive times. Birthdate: Christopher Marlow, Eng. dramatist; Sir Henry Irving, actor; Ramon Navarro, singer, actor.

MANY SNIFFLES

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — St. Catharines schools are suffering a siege of sniffles. School officials reported Friday 16 per cent of the city's student population absent. Some 1,308 pupils from public, secondary and separate schools are home. Many of the remaining 7,200 still at school have mild colds.

PAYMENTS FOR VICTIMS

TORONTO (CP)—J. W. Wakelin, secretary of the $5,000,000 Ontario Hurricane Relief Fund, said Friday fund directors hope to complete disbursement operations by Feb. 20. In a statement, Mr. Wakelin said compensation is being made under seven responsibilities. Included are annuities in the form of regular monthly payments to dependents of persons who lost their lives; payments for property and farm damage based on on-the-spot appraisal; payments to individual business operators and institutions and for loss or damage of cars, trucks and trailers.

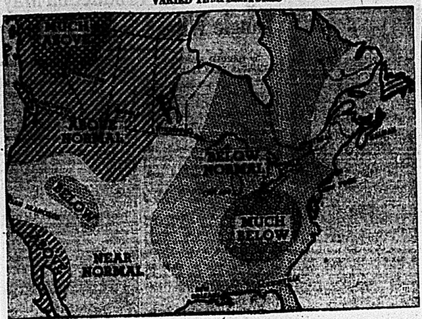
VARIED TEMPERATURES



Temperatures in much of Eastern Canada are expected to be below normal for the next 30 days while a big part of Western Canada is expected to have above-normal temperatures. This map, based on the long-range forecast of the United States Weather Bureau, shows that near-normal temperatures are predicted for the Maritime Provinces and part of eastern Quebec. The belt of below-normal temperatures will extend from Montreal to the head of the Great Lakes. Eastern Manitoba will be near normal while from the Manitoba border west temperatures are expected to be above normal. (CP Photo).

Garden Notes

The Gardener's Calendar

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Having a plan saves time and confusion. So, let's make a garden calendar to take care of the garden chores through the year. Holidays give us a few extra free hours and these can be used for really big chores. Other items can be worked in on week-ends and evenings if you follow a plan and do not allow too many jobs to pile up. Here is a suggested list which will help you get started, and as you look around your garden you will find other things to list.

Send for seed catalogues. Look over old catalogues and discard useless ones, but comb them carefully. They often contain valuable growing hints and garden lore.

Start a garden note book. List the catalogues you ordered and make an index of garden hints and where to find them in your magazines and catalogues. File your catalogues.

TENTATIVE SCHEDULE

February 14th, Saint Valentine's Day. Spread fertilizer on the lawn. The melting snow, and spring rains will carry it down to the roots. Reseed bare spots if they are not covered with snow. Prepare a cold frame and plant tuberous rooted begonias in pots.

March 1st—Plant cold frame tomatoes, cabbage, cauliflower, green sprouting brocolli, asters, marigold, zinnias, petunias, snaps, pincushion flowers, and nasturtiums. Put these in small pots.

March 17th St. Patrick's Day—the very best day to plant sweet peas, they do say. Dig a trench at least a foot deep. Fill in six inches with well-rotted manure, or a mixtures of humus, complete plant food, and good top soil. Plant the peas and as they grow fill in with good top soil. Many gardeners declare they must be planted in rows running north and south to bloom freely.

April 1st—All Fool's Day—Plant lettuce, peas, radishes, Dutch set onions, or multipliers, and seedling onions, beets, carrots, and spinach.

April 15th—Transplant old perennials, buy new ones, plant gladiolus, transplant into larger containers and tender plants from the cold frame.

SUMMER PROGRAM

May 1st—Set out petunias, asters, zinnias, marigold, pincushion flowers (scabiosia) Start in pots or pails of soil. Dip first in warm water and dust with rootone to stimulate rooting. Cannas can be treated in the same way. Plant your first planting of green beans. Set out early cabbage, cauliflower, and brocolli.

May 24th, Empire Day—Set out all bedding plants, tomatoes, peppers, tuberous begonias, dahlias, cannas and plant cucumbers and melons.

July 1st. Dominion Day—Last planting of bush beans, green and wax beans, beets, carrots, winter radish, Chinese cabbage, and corn.

August 1st. Plant pansy seed in a cold frame or in open ground to be covered later with straw and boards when final freezing is at hand. Fertilize lawn.

Sept. 1st, or Labor day—plant radish and lettuce seed in cold frame.

Sept 15th—dig cannas, gladiolus, and dahlias if frost has blackened the tops. Cut off tops and dry before storing.

October 1st, or Thanksgiving Day—make final planting of bulbs, or prepare beds for bulbs and plan to get them in soon.

October 31st Hallowe'en—complete garden chores, burn rubbish, prune shrubs and loose, or wayward branches and canes from trees and vines.

November 1st — Clean and oil tools and put them away for the winter.

Book by Vancouver Writer Evokes Wide Paper Comment

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—"British Political Parties" by R. T. (Bob) McKenzie of Vancouver, a book examining distribution of power within the Conservative and Labor organizations, has evoked wide newspaper comment.

All praise his work. Most agree with his findings. Some critics have reservations about the range of his survey, contained in 600 pages and more than 1,000 footnotes.

McKenzie, a 37-year-old lecturer in political science at the London School of Economics, has two main general conclusions: That the Tory leader is by no means the all-powerful figure advertised, and that conversely the Labor party rank-and-file often fails to exert on the parliamentary group the power it is generally believed to wield.

PARTY SIMILARITY

In short, both parties are "overwhelmingly similar" in the distribution of power despite sharply contrasting origins—the Conservatives having added a mass organization and Labor having evolved from one.

McKenzie sets at rest the bogy raised in the last similar work 50 years ago, which held that the British parliamentary system was endangered by forces operating from without Parliament. McKenzie sees the chief danger now, as the Conservative Glasgow Herald puts it, lying in the "tightly-knit and rigorous effiency of the party machines in and out of Parliament."

"British political parties" is clearly a classic, says The Economist, independent weekly journal, which objects mildly to the plenitude of footnotes.

"A remarkable book," says The Observer, independent Sunday newspaper, "within (its) limits it is thoughtful, scholarly, perceptive and a 'must' for every serious student."

BRILLIANT OBSERVER

Randolph Churchill, the prime minister's son who reviewed the book for The Evening Standard, calls McKenzie a "brilliant political observer." Churchill adds:

"He has achieved one of the hardest of literary tasks, that of writing a definitive text book which shines with scholarship without being marred by pedantry."

Says the Manchester Guardian: "This thorough and well - documented work is of such evident value . . . that it is hardly necessary to stress its merits. But, "like all pioneering works, it suggests as many questions . . . as it answers itself.

"Though he does much to uncover the relationship between parliamentary leaders and the various organs in their parties, he still leaves hidden the great deposits of power and influence which lie in the subsoil of politics."

PRAISED AND CHIDED

Kingsley Martin, editor of the left-wing weekly New Statesman and Nation, says McKenzie deserves all the credit he is getting for quarrying out his elaborate book from mountains of material.

But Martin chides the University of British Columbia graduate for passing lightly over party finance, and the "fundamental question" of Labor party relations between politicians and union leaders.

"My fear is that this able book will mislead the next generation at home and abroad about the nature of the British political system," says Martin, who nevertheless foresees a "brilliantly successful career" ahead of the Canadian.

McKenzie came to Britain with the Canadian Army during the Second World War. He took post-graduate studies at the London School of Economics and returned as a lecturer serveral years ago. He is well known here as a radio political interviewer and discussion chairman.

City of London Will Honor St. Laurent

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent and External Affairs Minister Pearson Friday night attended a 1,000-guest reception held in the city of London Guildhall by the high commissioners of the eight Commonwealth countries now meeting here with Britain.

The white-tie function, biggest of the numerous social events surrounding the conference, was attended by most conference officials, a number of British cabinet members including Sir Anthony Eden, and many Canadians living in London.

Mr. St. Laurent returns to the Guildhall Monday to receive the highest accolade of Britain's oldest and proudest community—the honorary freedom of the City of London.

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning at breakfist ma looked at pop kind of funny, saying, You may not know it, William, but you talked in your sleep last night.

Well, that's intristing, pop said, and ma said, Yes indeed, you'll be serprized to learn how intristing, you said cleerly and distinctly, Oh, Daisy, she said.

Who, for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, Oh, dont look so panefully innocent. Even if there was some silly simpering Daisy, away back in the year one, before I even knew of your existents in your present form, it couldn't possibly make any diffrence, so you might as well admit it, she said.

But yee gods, there was no Daisy to admit, unfortumately, pop said, and ma said, Now William, nobody dreems of fictitious caracters with real names.

By gollies, yes, I'd completely forgotten, pop said. Well what do you know, good old Daisy with her big adoring eyes, he said, and ma said, It seems you remember her details distinctly enough.

What hair she had, what white teeth, pop said, and ma said, What color would you of expected them to be for land sakes?

We had grate sport together, pop said. She could run as fast as a boy, he said, and ma said, Do you meen the gerl was a tomboy?

Who said anything about a gerl? pop said. Daisy was the ferst dog I ever had, he said, and ma said, Now do you think that's funny?

Not at all, my dear, it's sentimental, pop said.

And he kissed her goodbye and left for his office, and I said, G, ma, do you think he really had a dog named Daisy?

Oh, how can you tell about your father, ma said.

Meening she didn't know what to think.

Statement Made In Jocular Manner Says Official

WINNIPEG (CP)—A Canadian National Railways official, who claimed remarks about cutting railway costs he made Thursday to a union banquet had been "completely misinterpreted," said Friday he intended the statement to be treated in a jocular manner.

F. H. Keefe, general manager of the CNR's western region, was quoted as telling the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen here that maintenance costs must be cut $5,000,000 and that the CNR president (Donald Gordon) had threatened to replace "the railway management" unless the budget was balanced.

In a statement Friday night, Mr. Keefe said he intended to indicate that lack of traffic had resulted in recent layoffs and further economies might be required if the business decline continued.

Mr. Keefe said he had added in a jocular way that his job might be at stake unless the western region kept expenses down to a proper level.

Transport Minister Marler, in the Commons in Ottawa Friday, said he will investigate the statements attributed to Mr. Keefe. The transport minister had been asked by Stanley Knowles, CCF member for Winnipeg North Centre, to comment on a report of the speech.

Negro Elected To National Press Club

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Press Club Friday elected its first Negro member, Louis R. Lautier, by a vote of 377 to 281.

Lautier, 56, is correspondent of the Atlanta Daily World and the Negro Press Association. A native of New Iberia, La., he has lived in the capital 33 years.

The 12-man board of governors had previously approved Lautier's application but controversy developed and a general membership meeting decided to hold Friday's ballot.

Lautier was the first Negro admitted to the White House Correspondents Association and to the Congressional Press Gallery.

Boy Could Not Escape Weather Of His Hometown

ORILLIA (CP) — A 13-year-old boy didn't get a chance to find out how to escape the 27-below zero weather in his hometown of Timmins.

Ford Page was back home Friday after hitchhiking 400 miles through sub-zero weather toward what he believed was the comfortable, sunny climate of southern Ontario.

He only got as far as this town, 90 miles north of Toronto, before local police picked him up Thursday night. He was held overnight on instructions from the boy's father who returned to Timmins with him Friday morning.

Police said the boy was "fed up with school" and wanted to get away from the frigid weather around Timmins. One constable said: "The kid was apparently going to write a school composition about his travels, judging from the diary notes we found on him."

He had only 35 cents in his pocket.

He may not have found the weather comfortable down here, anyway. Temperature readings around Toronto and other southern Otario districts Thursday night and Friday were between zero and 20 above.

Porter Admits Inspectors Asked To Cut Costs

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Porter Friday confirmed reports that district inspectors of the Ontario provincial police have been instructed to cut operating costs.

However, he denied that the order had been to reduce costs by 15 per cent. He said the OPP, as with every department, had been asked to cut costs to the limit.

Mr. Porter said the methods of economy had been left to commissioner E. V. McNeill, but that the efficiency of the force would not be affected by the economy measures.

"We are not cutting police services," Mr. Porter said. "We are saving some money by reducing the use of automobiles but they won't be any less effective because of the reductions."

School populations across Canada, increasing rapidly, pose a space problem for education authorities. The three pairs of students show gradually, the rise in enrolment since 1945, when the Canadian Education Association listed 2,121,647 pupils in provincially-controlled schools. This figure was increased by more than 500,000 to 2,645,249 in June, 1953. By 1959 it is estimated the school population will be 3,280,000. (CP Photo).

School Population Increases 500,000 Since End of War

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's school population has increased by more than 500,000 pupils since the end of the Second World War and this 25 per cent jump has posed a space problem for education authorities which they are still trying to solve.

Almost every province reports overcrowding in schools despite post-war building that has resulted in many new institutions and extensive additions to the old.

Figures compiled by the Canadian Education Association show an enrolment of 2,121,647 pupils in provincially-controlled schools in June, 1945. The figure in June, 1955, was 2,645,249 and reports from provincial authorities indicate the increase continued through the last school year and into the present.

NO EARLY SOLUTION

Education department officials in British Columbia say they do not expect school space to catch up to pupil population before 1962.

Innovations to improve the situation have included use of church basements and other halls, conversion of gymnasiums and auditoriums to classrooms and, in some parts of Canada, the staggering of school hours.

Despite space shortage, however, efforts are being made to keep classes at manageable levels and the trend is to fewer pupils in a class.

URBAN SCHOOLS JAMMED

This picture of school population and classroom space emerged from a Canadian Press coast-to-coast survey:

Newfoundland: All city schools are overcrowded and have been for the last five years or more. Outport schools generally are not overcrowded.

Prince Edward Island: Schools are overcrowded in Charlottetown, Summerside and Charlottetown Royalty. Elsewhere the situation is not acute.

New Brunswick: In several areas there is overcrowding. Classroom space is at its peak but the increase in students makes it necessary to add classrooms in many areas.

STEADY INCREASE

Nova Scotia: While schools are said not to be overcrowded, Nova Scotia is hard-pressed to keep up with increasing enrolment — about 5,000 new pupils every school term. In the last eight or 10 years enrolment has increased to 140,000 from 120,000 and the end of the rise is not in sight.

Quebec schools are overcrowded despite a big post-war building program.

Ontario: There is overcrowding, although 2,100 new classrooms were provided in 1953. The trend is to fewer pupils in classes, down from 50 a teacher to 35 in many schools.

Manitoba: Schools are all filled, some a little squeezed, but the building program has kept up with the need. Some 284 additional classrooms have been built since 1946.

BUSES ARE HELP

Saskatchewan: There is tremendous overcrowding in urban centres at the lower grades level although many more classrooms are being used. The province has been closing down rural schools and more than 8,000 pupils are transported to larger schools by bus.

Alberta: There is some lack of school accommodation in urban centres, particularly in larger cities. However, rather than permit too crowded conditions, school boards usually make use of the double shift program to a limited extent while new accommodation is being provided. The average number of pupils in a class was 27.2 at the end of the war, 28.8 in 1952.

British Columbia: Schools are overcrowded, with approximately 14,000 new students being taken in each year. This year the province guaranteed $26,000,000 in bonds for school construction. The situation is worse than at the end of the war.

'Little Tricks' Keep Father From Too Hard Work

LONDON (CP)—Mrs. Mathieu Samson, eldest of Prime Minister St. Laurent's three daughters, confessed Friday to trying "little tricks" to keep her father from working too hard.

"For instance, I am going to buy my eight-year-old son a suit over here. I've told father I could not find one, and then tomorrow, when I know my father has a little time, I can suggest he help me buy a suit."

Mrs. Samson, wife of Quebec doctor and mother of four, was commenting on the way the five St. Laurent children take turns "globe-trotting with father," regarded as a great family man.

"We think it is important for a member of the family to be with him, otherwise he never relaxes—and doctors do not allow mother to travel by air," she told a reporter.

"I tried to get him to a theatre the other night. I failed," said Mrs. Samson. She had tickets for "The Teahouse of The August Moon," but father ducked at the last minute.

St. Joseph's Oratory Has Been Made Basilica

MONTREAL (CP)—St. Joseph's Oratory, founded by a humble college doorman and now one of the leading Roman Catholic shrines in North America, has been made Canada's eighth basilica.

The official proclamation will not be made by Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger until March 19, St. Joseph's feast day, but Rev. Emile Deguire, superior of the oratory, announced the elevation of the church Friday. He said the Pope agreed to the change following a request by the cardinal.

Your Horoscope

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

For Monday, February 7, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—You active natives: heed all the sound advice you can elicit. Day stresses reasonableness in everything and minding that which needs attention, solving. Some irritation.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Beware of sliding over matters, not sufficient or proper analyzing, especially with that involving character and properties. Some obstacles, give them due concern. You can bridge them.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Word, thought without action at precise time are useless. Don't waste too much time on familiar matters. Lean out of way to promote the helpfully new, the unexpected, gain surprise results.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—The personal side of today day take upper-hand in importance and ultimate return. Your mind must be governed, likewise your acts, by thoroughly careful deductions AND FAITH.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Excellent planetary influences for you and many others today, still it won't pay to be lax or too trusting. Know details in anything worth doing. Unnecessary mistakes retard progress.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Scan quickly your day's outlook, set your schedule according to sane rules and wise desires. Don't be overconservative nor overindulge likes. Not a difficult day taken the right way.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—May find with study that underneath surface are tricky matters to unravel. But you are capable so go about it immediately. Rest during rest hours. Aim to achieve goals reasonably.

October 24 November 22 (Scorpio)—Things that intrigue mentally, dare the imagination and ambition (fitting your nature indeed) are prominent today. A real challenge, meet it, get best out of it, but don't overdo.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Be not ready to decide as always. There may be contingents that call for new methods, ideas, plans. The truly wise are always open to learning—from sound sources.

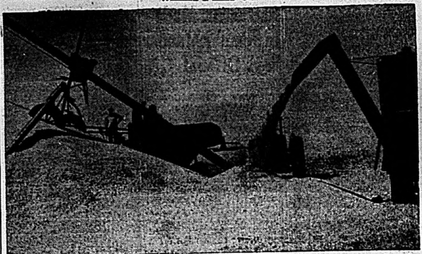
December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—There is no set pattern in day's outlook. It is sort that puts you on your own: progressive generally. Much depends upon how you control emotions, aims.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Be as alert and ready to act on short notice as possible this often changeable period. On whole, there are generous gains for the constructive thinker, the discreet observer.

February 21 to Marrh 20 (Pisces)—Not overinviting for new or untried ideas although ofttimes a day like this is helpfully challenging and will stimulate fresh achievement. Originality, initiative will bring results.

YOU BORN TODAY: Nobility, honesty, humitarianism strong points of this versatile Sign. However, you are prone to let many talents lay dormant, not using half consistently, not developing some at all. This is a shame for you can be powerful leaders for good reforms, can assist the underdog, help children and the underprivileged to find themselves and amount to something. Careful education, application and faith in the assets God gave you are your bulwarks. Pray daily; take outdoor exercise, and don't fall into a good-natured rut. This is the birthdate of: Sir Thos. More, statesman; Millard Fillmore, 13th U.S. President; Chas. Dickens, Eng. novelist.

WHEAT PILES UP



Wheat is piled on the ground for lack of storage space during harvest in Western Canada. Space may be an even worse problem in 1955. Predictions are that Canada's wheat farmers have a good chance of recovering this year from the 1954 Prairie crop failure. Canada's wheat production last year was plagued by bad weather and the worst rust epidemic in Prairie history. However, this spring there will be sufficient rust-resistant Selkirk wheat seed available to cover most of the rust-susceptible areas on the Prairies. Coupled with this will be plenty of sub-soil moisture to speed growth. (CP Photo).

Kingston May Soon Have Air Service

KINGSTON (CP)—A scheduled air service may soon be operating out of Kingston, John MacKay, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce airport committee, said today.

Preliminary plans from Vicom and Company (Canada Ltd.) have been accepted by the air transport board and it has asked for further details, he said. Mr. MacKay is general manager of Vicom.

He said Trans-Canada Air Lines has rejected Kingston as a stopover on its Toronto-Ottawa-Montreal runs. TCA says facilities it would be necessary to install would outweigh the passenger potential, he said.

The proposed schedule would meet the needs of Kingston business men, said Mr. MacKay. The flights would go to Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, and return the same day.

He said a new company would be set up called the Kingston Air Lines under the plan. It would be a limited stock company operated by Vicom.

Higher Wheat Production May Tangle Wheat-Selling Picture

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's wheat farmers have a good chance of recovering this year from the 1954 Prairie wheat crop failure. But higher production may further complicate the country's entangled wheat-selling picture.

Though production in 1954 dropped to an 11-year low, Canada still has huge surpluses carried over from previous bumper crops. On July 31 last they reached an all-time high of 594,200,000 bushels, enough to feed Canada's own population for four years.

Thus, while 1954 output was slashed by rust and bad weather to less than 300,000.000 bushels, about one-half the near-record 614,000,000 produced in 1953, Canada entered the new crop year Aug. 1 last with supplies of 893,200,000 bushels. This was not far below the peak 983,100,000-bushel supply the previous year.

WORLD SURPLUS

Federal authorities estimate exports in the current crop year will increase over the 255,100,000 bushels shipped in 1953-54. But with other big wheat-producing countries reporting heavy surpluses and the big importing nations seeking lower prices, they see no hope of matching the near-record 385,500,000 bushels exported in 1952-53.

Encouraging to farmers are predictions of the Canadian Wheat Board. It says it will be able to handle during the current crop year deliveries equivalent to all wheat available from the poor 1954 crop as well as much of the farm-stored wheat, estimated July 31 last at about 200,000,000 bushels.

All this may help stimulate a production drive.

The farmer gets an initial price of $1.40 a bushel basis No. 1 northern at the Lakehead and the west coast when he delivers his wheat to the board. But the board has been forced to set strict delivery quotas because it is loaded down with wheat.

Prospects of a step-up in deliveries to the board will help Prairie farmers whose pocketbooks were hit by the poor 1954 crop, the delivery quotas and the relatively-depressed 1953-54 export picture.

PRICE FACTOR

Increased production this year may see importers continue efforts to reduce wheat prices. The United Kingdom, the world's largest importer, wants to obtain wheat at the lowest possible price without wrecking economies of the wheat-growing countries.

Federal officials say they will fight to hold the wheat price line in 1955.

They tried to keep the International Wheat Agreement export price at the ceiling of about $2.05 a bushel when the new three-year pact started in August, 1953. But during the next half-year prices dropped about 30 cents a bushel following refusal of the U.K. to sign the multi-country price-stabilizing agreement.

Before the current agreement expires in 1956 there will be international negotiations for another.

HUGE U.S. STOCKS

Meanwhile, Canadian officials are watching developments in the United States.

The U.S. has huge wheat stocks and maintains its IWA export price at about the same as that of Canada. But it also has embarked on large give-away schemes and the sale of $1,000,000,000 worth of surplus foodstuffs for local currencies over a three-year period.

Canada has told the U.S. that dumping of American wheat in overseas markets may seriously injure this country's economy. So far the U.S. has given assurance that any wheat moved under the non-commercial disposal programs will not replace but will be in addition to normal shipments by wheat-exporting countries.

This has reassured Canadian officials but they still are watching the situation.

EVACUATION OF TACHENS WELL UNDER WAY

Britain Asks USSR To Urge Chinese Show Restraint

Hint Russia Joins Britain, India in Cease-Fire Plan

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary Eden said today Britain has asked the Soviet government to urge restraint on the Chinese Communists in the delicate situation now existing off the China coast.

Approaches were made Jan. 28 by the British ambassador in Moscow, Sir William Hayter, Eden told the House of Commons. Eden himself has seen the Soviet charge d'affaires here.

Eden refused to be drawn into a detailed discussion of the moves, saying:

"Conversations are taking place between a number of governments and diplomacy must be given its chance to do some work about this. . . ."

Eden rose in the House as news dispatches said that Chinese Communist anti-aircraft guns had fired on American carrier-based jet planes screening the Chinese Nationalist evacuation of the Tachen islands.

HOPES SHARED

Regarding this evacuation, Eden said: "The government share the hope, which has been expressed by the United States government, that these steps will contribute to a cessation of Communist attacks and to the restoration of peace and security to the west Pacific."

"It is only when cease-fire conditions have been established that we can hope to proceed to other methods of pacification." he said.

SEES NEHRU

LONDON (Reuters — Huan Hsiang, Chinese Communist envoy in London, called on Jawaharlal Nehru, India's prime minister, here today. The call was made at the request of the Chinese envoy.

It was the second meeting between the Chinese charge d'affaires and Nehru since the Indian prime minister came here Jan. 29 for a conference with other Commonwealth prime ministers.

Conference sources assumed that the subject, as at the previous meeting, was again the Formosa crisis.

LONDON (CP) — There are reports indicating that Russia, fearful of becoming involved in a Far East war, has consented to restrain the Chinese Communists.

Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov called in British Ambassador Sir William Hayter and India's P. N. Kaul for separate talks in Moscow last Friday. After cabled reports of the two meetings were studied here, British diplomatic informants hinted that Russia had joined with Britain and India in secret efforts to get the Nationalists and Reds to agree to a face-saving, "unwritten" cease-fire in the Formosa strait.

There was a week-end of diplomatic activity here chiefly involving Britain and India.

But all the Commonwealth leaders were busy. St. Laurent Sunday saw Foreign Secretary Eden and Prime Minister Nehru and later was one of the guests at a luncheon in Chequers given by Churchill.

Today's Commonwealth conference meeting may determine what part, if any, the Commonwealth can play in mediating in the Formosan dispute. Possibly the best guess is that the ministers will decide to pursue individual diplomatic approaches, fortified by the knowledge they have gained of what each Commonwealth member thinks about the crisis.

The idea of a collective Commonwealth appeal appears difficult to reconcile with the differing views on Formosa held by such countries as Australia and India.

In the long run, the outcome may be an international conference on Far East problems. Canada has already pronounced herself in favor of such a conference, failing some other formula, but the difficulties are recognized.

MANY OBSTACLES

Among the obstacles are the reluctance of the United States, which is opposed to any conference resembling that held at Geneva last summer when Communist China made her first appearance in the councils of the Free World, and the difficulty of getting two such die-hard opponents as Chou En-lai and Chiang Kai-shek around the same table.

But with the United Nations Security Council temporarily ruled out as a forum for Formosan problems, the idea of an international confeence may eventualy gain greater support.

The nine-nation conference was reported relieved that the Chinese Nationalists had agreed to pull out of the Red-threatened Tachen islands.

U. S. refusal to be more closely committed to defence of the other Nationalist-held coastal islands of Quemoy and Matsu was welcomed here.

Britain contends that all the islands the Nationalists hold just off the China mainland, except Formosa and the neighboring Pescadores, belong to the Communists but Foreign Secretary Eden has warned the Reds against any attempt to seize the islands.

Security Council Awaiting U.S. Plans on Formosa

By A. L. GOLDBERG

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) New UN Security Council moves on the Formosa cease-fire question hinged today on plans brought back from Washington by U. S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge Jr.

Delegations recessed consultations over Sunday while they waited for a clue to U. S. intentions. Lodge announced after a Saturday breakfast with President Eisenhower that the U.S. program would be made known by midweek.

Victor A. Belaunde, Peruvian president of the council this month, said the talks today and Tuesday would determine when the next council meeting will be held. He said the weekend had produced no clear agreement on what the next step should be.

25TH BRIGADE OF KOREAN WAR RENAMED FOURTH

Canada to Withdraw Troops Late in Spring

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's Korean fighting force, the 25th Brigade has been renamed the 4th, it was learned Sunday.

The redesignation of the force that left 400 dead in Korea added to feelings here that Canada will withdraw its last soldier from the Far Eastern country late this spring.

Informants said an indication that the 4th Brigade may become part of the 1st Infantry Division is the fact the brigade is scheduled to hold manoeuvres at Camp Gagetown, N.B., this summer with units of the division.

Only two of the 4th Brigade's three battalions are in Canada at present. The 2nd Battalion, the Black Watch, is stationed at Aldershot, N.S., and the 4th Battalion Canadian Guards, is at Ipperwash.

Still in Korea is the 2nd Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles. It is scheduled to come home in May, but there is a good possibility it won't be replaced.

The name 25th for the Korean brigade apparently was pulled from the air and since the army's brigades now are numbered from 1, it is unlikely the name 25th will turn up again, in peacetime.

Nine Violent Deaths Reported In East Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A double stabbing in Toronto headed the list of nine violent weekend deaths in eastern Canada, a Canadian Press survey showed today.

Traffic accidents accounted for six deaths. The other was a drowning.

Ontario led the provincial count with five deaths. The bodies of a man and woman were found stabbed to death in the woman's downtown Toronto apartment Saturday. Police said Anatos Endzekcoff 28, apparently stabbed Tivy Revko, 40, and then took his own life.

Steve Daginov and Trudy Reynolds, 17, both of Windsor, were killed when their automobile left the highway and struck a telephone pole near Thamesville. Albert Hood, 37, struck by a car near Pickering, was Ontario's other fatality.

uebec had one violent weekend death, a traffic fatality. New Brunswick had three, one drowning and two traffic deaths.

FISH WINS LONG FIGHT

WELLINGTON (Reuters) — A giant kingfish towed three fishermen in a 14-foot dinghy about Tauranga harbor for five hours. The kingfish, hooked on a 23-pound-test nylon braided line, finally towed the dinghy outside the harbor into the heavy seas, so the men were forced to cut the line for safety.

Pinay Seeks Support For 2nd Term as French Premier

By HARVEY HUDSON

PARIS (AP)—Antoine Pinay, a Conservative who once said he would "never go back into that bear cage," sought support today for his second term as French premier.

The 63-year-old owner of a small-town tannery agreed Sunday night to try to form France's 21st postwar government, succeeding the cabinet of Pierre Mendes-France. Pinay told reporters he hoped to have his list of prospective ministers ready by Thursday.

One of the longer - lived of France's numerous postwar premiers, Pinay headed the government for 9½ months in 1952. He won considerable personal popularity with his Conservative "save the franc" fiscal policy, which checked rising prices though it did not solve France's basic economic ills. Facing three confidence votes and considered certain to lose all of them, he resigned Dec. 23, 1952, and vowed never again.

Pinay tried again to form a government, however, during the record 37-day government crisis in the summer of 1953. He failed when the followers of Gen. Charles de Gaulle and the Catholic MRP, the Popular Republican Movement, would not support him.

His party and the MRP were the backbone of the last premier's opposition. When the Communists, a bloc of Mendes-France's own Radical Socialists, and some of the Guallists joined them in voting against the premier's North African policy Saturday, the cabinet fell after 7½ months in office.

There was considerable feeling that the next premier would last only a few months, being kept in office chiefly to clear up a number of urgent problems awaiting action.

Chief of these are the Paris treaties to rearm West Germany, which have been approved by the assembly but await ratification by the Council of the Republic, parliament's Upper House.

Pinay abstained in the assembly vote on the Paris rearmament treaties — which Mendes-France had negotiated—but this was attributed to his deep antagonism toward the premier rather than outright hostility to German rearmament.

Canadians Have a Lot to Learn About Southern Neighbors --Heeney

MONTREAL (CP) — Just how well acquainted are Johnny Canuck and his shrewd Yankee cousin?

A. D. P. Heeney, Canadian ambassador to the United States, said today Canadians have a lot to learn about their southern neighbors.

The U. S. often had been accused of ignorance of Canada, but in recent years Americans, alert to economic promise, have learned a great deal about this country, said Mr. Heeney.

Increasingly there is an awareness of Canada's national and international position and importance . . . in fact, at all levels one encounters expressions of admiration for our country in terms which are often embarrassing.

Mr. Heeney's remarks were contained in the text of a speech issued to the press before delivery.

In a talk to the Women's Canadian Club, the ambassador said Canadians do not make sufficient effort to understand Americans.

"I wonder whether we have not tended . . . to proceed on an easy assumption we have not really scrutinized, the assumption that all Canadians, instinctively or automatically, know and understand Americans." he said.

There were various reasons for the "unobjective" view of Canadians. One of these was that "whether conscious or not, there is among Canadians almost a 'racial' memory of the days when Americans were thinking out loud of expansion northward, of the 'manifest destiny' of their country."

Canadians know little of the "American system, of the actual workings of the U. S. public institutions, the presidency itself, the Congress, the Supreme Court—the constitution itself. These are very different indeed from our own arrangements."

Canadians know "many intimate personal details" of prominent public figures in the U. S. and "some of their senators seem as well known to us as their actresses and athletes.

". . . Because Canadians do not in general appreciate the many and fundamental differences between our systems of government, we often draw wrong conclusions as to the course of U. S. policy and misjudge the motives and intentions of Americans."

Mr. Heeney added:

"Another reason perhaps why our understanding of things American may be less perfect than we think is to be found in the sources of information. . . . The American scene is for the most part reported for Canadians by Americans, who are writing not for us at all, but for other Americans. The number of Canadian newspaper correspondents in the U. S. is increasing and will, I hope, increase a good deal more. Canadian Journalists can contribute better than anyone else to Canadian understanding of American affairs."

BARONESS WOUNDS SELF

$9 Phone Call Tells Policeman To 'Drop Dead'

BRISTOL, Va. (AP) — The telephone caller who rang up police headquarters here Friday night had a rather short but to-the-point message to pass along to Sgt. Charles Almany, who answered.

"Tell chief John Stover," said the voice at the other end of the line, "to drop dead."

"Are you drunk or something?" inquired the startled Almany.

"I'm not drunk and in perfect health. Just give my message to Chief Stover," was the reply.

Stover says he isn't acquainted with the fellow who passed along these sentiments. But the folks around the police station still are talking about it, because—

The call was from London, England. It cost $9.

Says Facilities In Court Houses Are Inadequate

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—The president of the Canadian Bar Association says facilities in some Ontario court houses are so poor they are "seriously interfering with the proper administration of justice."

D. Park Jamieson of Sarnia said Saturday accommodation for jurors, witnesses and the public "is, to say the least, inadequate except in a very few enlightened counties."

Mr. Jamieson told more than 550 delegates at the final session of the CBA's two-day Ontario midwinter meeting:

"Very few of our present court houses can be described as temples of justice. How can our new Canadians and the youth of our country have a high regard for our courts and justice when they see the surrounding and conditions under which it functions in most of Ontario?"

Mr. Jamieson said an increase in the salaries of Canadian judges is long overdue.

"In my opinion the situation is so serious," he said, "that unless remedial action is taken by the governments concerned soon, we will lose some of the best judges we now have in Canada."

NOTHING'S SECRET NOW

NEW YORK (AP) — The police department's bureau of criminal identification is photographing suspects in color. Police photographers today said the 35-millimeter transparencies, seen through a viewer, give more depth to the photos and cause identifying marks such as scars to show up more clearly.

PRIME MINISTER GIVEN FREEDOM CITY OF LONDON

St. Laurent Honored In Ancient Ceremony

By RON EVANS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent, in one of the most eventful days of his life, drove today to the Guildhall and received the rare honor of the freedom of the City of London in an ancient ceremony.

In a speech accepting the honor, the bilingual prime minister linked his own province of Quebec with the sense of history which is one of the key characteristics of the predominantly Anglo-Saxon "city."

"I was brought up in a province of Canada whose motto is 'Je me souviens' — I remember," St. Laurent said. "We are sometimes chided in a new country for this backward glance.

"But when I come here today as prime minister of Canada to accept the freedom of this great and ancient city, I feel that you and we are one in recognizing that our present and our future grow out of our histories and that we are all heirs to great traditions which it is our proud duty to remember and maintain."

2½-HOUR EVENT

The premier, accompanied by his eldest daughter, Mrs. Mathieu Samson, drove through rain-lashed London streets in a limousine to attend the 2½-hour freedom ceremony at a Court of Common Council in the Guildhall, a towering stone structure dating from the early 15th century.

Dispensing at his own wish with the usual trapping of a state drive, the prime minister had only a modest motorcycle escort for the journey from his hotel on the eastern fringe of Hyde Park to the City, the famous "square mile" into which is compressed all the complicated apparatus of a centre of international finance.

3 Bushworkers Drown in Waters Of Opeongo River

WHITNEY, Ont. (CP) — Three bushworkers were drowned Sunday night when their car missed a bridge on a road in Algonquin Park and crashed into icy water in the Opeongo river, 20 miles northeast of here. A fourth man freed himself and swam to shore.

Dead are: Lorne Lentz, 39, of Madawaska; Alex Yanovich, 59, and his son Alex, Jr., 18, both of Barry's Bay.

Silas Towns, 21, of Madawaska, was picked up soon after the accident by another bushworker.

Elvin Towns, a cousin of Silas, said the men left Madawaska Sunday night to return to work at a bush lumber camp. He said the accident occurred about 10 p. m.

Silas suffered frost bites to his hand and feet. He said he rolled down the window of the submerged vehicle to escape.

Formidable U.S. Navy Task Force Gives Protection

Reds' Torpedo Boats Seen Cruising 17 Miles Away

By SPENCER MOOSA

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP) — A formidable U. S. Navy task force stood protectively around the Communist-threatened Tachens today covering the evacuation of some 30,000 Chinese Nationalist troops and civilians, while two Red torpedo boats cruised 17 miles away.

A patrol party of U. S. marines went ashore.

The evacuation was well underway tonight. Reports from the American ships were hours behind those reaching this Nationalist capital, but they indicated there was no Communist interference.

NO ACTIVITY

There was no sign of activity on Communist-held Yikiangshan, eight miles to the north of upper Tachen island.

Associated Press correspondent Jim Becker, aboard the flagship Estes anchored off the Tachens, reported the Communist torpedo boats were spotted by air, but officers aboard the Estes said it 'is customary to see them in that area'.

WITH U. S. 7TH FLEET (AP)—Chinese Communist anti-aircraft guns today fired upon U. S. carrier-based jet planes flying at high altitude, a pilot reported. He didn't report any damage.

The pilot said the Communist guns were located on small islands north of the Tachens, from which 30,000 Chinese Nationalist troops and civilians are being evacuated.

He said the mid-afternoon gunfire came close to planes flying off a U. S. carrier. But, he added, no Communist warplanes were encountered.

The pilot said there were many ships clustered offshore from the Tachens and evidence of much activity.

SIGHT SUBMARINE

TAIPEH, Formosa (Reuters) — A report from the Tachens evacuation fleet today stated that an unidentified submarine had been sighted "in the vicinity of a convoy."

The report added that after the submarine was sighted radio silence was imposed and guns manned.

The radio silence was lifted 20 minutes later, the report added. It did not give the location of the reported submarine or specify the convoy mentioned.

Child Drowns In York River At Bancroft

BANCROFT (Special) — Frederic Burley Rollison, two years and seven months, drowned Sunday in the waters of the York River here.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rollison of Detlor, the child was on a visit with his parents to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Conlin when the tragedy occurred.

He was playing with the two Conlin children at the back of their home at the time. The ground behind the house slopes down to the York, a fast-flowing stream in that particular section.

The Rollisons were in the house when the Conlin children came crying to their mother that Frederic had fallen into the river.

Mrs. Conlin and the parents dashed down to the water's edge and saw the boy being carried downstream. About three hundred feet along the bank the body lodged in a sheet of ice.

Distraught, Mrs. Rollison ran down the bank and out onto the ice to haul the body of her son from the water.

He was rushed to the local Red Cross hospital where doctors S. S. Lumb and H. S. Johnson worked desperately on the child for four hours. Their efforts were fruitless.

Coroner Dr. O. W. Anderson said today no inquest will be held.

O.P.P. Corporal Archie Grayling investigated.

The Rollison's have one other child, a girl, younger than the dead boy.

Chiang Calls Evacuation Step Towards Attack

TAIPEH (AP)—Chinese Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek said today the evacuation and redeployment of his Tachen iland troops were "positive preparations for the counterattack (against the Red mainland) and not a negative stand."

Chiang, in a written statement said evacuation was a "painful decision," but the latest military developments had made the Tachens lose their military value.

"The most important task of the government forces is to counterattack the Communists and recover the mainland," Chiang said. "Under the present military situation our government forces, in order to conserve their counterattack potential, should under no circumstance be allowed to be dissipated at such a time and place as the enemy might choose.

"To insure victory . . . our first duty should be to consolidate Taiwan (Formosa), Penghu (the Pescadores) and the other islands that shield them, such as Kinmen (Quemoy), Matsu, etc."

After She Opens New Radio Station, Visits Exhibition, Princess May Swim

ST. GEORGE'S ISLAND, Grenada (Reuters)—The sparkling blue sea and the inviting white sands of this Caribbean island may lure Princess Margaret into a swimsuit today for the first time since she arrived in the British West Indies.

But duty will come before any sun bathing. This morning the Princess will step ashore from the royal yacht Britannia to open a radio station connecting the four Windward islands of Grenada, St. Vincent, St. Lucia and Dominica.

At Queen's Park, named for Queen Victoria, Margaret's great-great-grandmother, the 24-year-old Princess will address several thousand islanders as she declares the radio service open. The radio station will broadcast her speech.

After a Cub Scout presents her with a nutmeg brooch symbolizing one of the "rum and spice" islands' main resources, Margaret will go for an 11-mile island drive and then inspect a small agricultural exhibition showing Grenada's main produce.

Princess Margaret began her visit to Grenada with a rainbow welcome with sunshine and shower. A few hours after her arrival she was caught in a downpour at a garden party but received quick protection from a police officer's umbrella. The day ended with a Government House dinner to the music of a steel percussion band such as the Princess enjoyed so much in Trinidad.

She embarks on the royal yacht at the end of the day to sail on to St. Vincent. After that is a three-day call at Barbados, a visit to the Leeward islands, then west to Jamaica and north to the Bahamas before leaving Nassau by air for home on March 2.

Pilots Who Shot Down MiGs Say They Were Jumped by Red Patrol

TOKYO (AP) — Two American jet fighter pilots who shot down a pair of cannon-firing Russian-built MiG-15s over the Yellow sea reaffired today what the world knew for a long time, that Sabre jets are far superior.

"The MiGs will never compare with F-86 Sabre jet," said Lieut. Charles E. Salmon, 25, of Port Jervis, N. Y.

Capt. George F. Williams Jr., 31, of Austin, Tex., agreed.

Both pilots told a press conference of a dramatic five-minute battle with eight MiGs who jumped their patrol of 12 Sabre jets and an RB-45 reconnaissance plane Saturday.

The fight erupted 10 miles off the North Korean coast and 40 miles southwest of Pyongyang, capital of Communist North Korea.

Both said there was no damage to any of the U. S. planes and they saw no markings on the attaking Red planes to identify them as Chinese Communist, North Korean or Russian.

"There was no warning," Willians said. "They came from above and behind us," and started firing."

The fliers said the other six MiGs had come in higher than the two shot down in flames, made a brief firing pass at the Sabres and the bomber, then fled to the north as the two lower MiGs were hit.

The American patrol continued on south and returned to its base.

The air force said the RB-45 was on "its usual reconnaissance mission" over international waters when attacked.

Milder Weather In District Over Week-End

Eight below early Saturday morning — thirty-five above Saturday night — thirty-eight above Sunday afternoon.

That's the record of the unpredictable upswing of the temperature in the Belleville area over the week-end, when the intense cold of the past week dissipated in a wave of mild, warm air.

The week-end weather got off to a low start, with no change apparent in the zero temperatures that had gripped the district for almost two weeks previously. At 2.30 a.m. Saturday the mercury at the city pump house registered eight below. Later Saturday morning it started to climb, reaching 18 above by two p.m. It continued to rise steadily until at 9 p.m. it reached the day's high of 35 above.

No appreciable decrease was recorded Sunday, the lowest reading being 31.5 while the high was 38.2 in mid-afternoon. With the sudden rise an uncomfortable thaw set across the city, melting snow and ice frozen solid during the bout of zero weather.

The thaw continued today as the temperature hit 32 above at noon.

The weatherman predicts colder weather today but milder tomorrow. Low tonight in this area is expected to be 10 above.

MONEY "FUNNY", MAN HELD

TORONTO (CP) — Police have accused Steve Ihasz, 55, of trying to revive a lost art—the counterfeiting of coins. Ihasz was charged Saturday with "possessing the instruments of coinage" and with uttering the coins, police said. Police arrested Ihasz when a merchant received a coin that "looked funny." Molds and metals were found in a hole in the ceiling of Ihasz's home, police said.

Quinte Skaters Give Fine Display At Club's First Figure Competition

Interest in figure-skating in the Quinte area was given a fillip over the weekend when the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club held its first figure-skating competition on the club rink at Queen and Dufferin Sunday afternoon.

Nearly 30 competitors of different age groups took part in the two junior and three senior contests making up the competition. Additional interest was loaned the event by Bonnie Wallace, 14-year-old skating student from Cobourg. At the conclusion of the competition Bonnie went on to highlight the entire event by turning in a graceful exhibition of figure-skating that brought "ohs" of admiration from an appreciative audience.

The competition, first venture of its kind by the club, was a highly successful one and from all opinions probably will be revived again next year. Afterwards, president of the club John Lewis hoped that the competition will become an annual event.

Only discordant note in the day's success was a minor one and the result of the weather.

HIGH TEMPERATURES

Unpredictable weekend temperatures flipped the mercury up the scale to over 30 degrees Sunday. Mild temperatures in the afternoon made for mushy ice and rough skating. However few falls were suffered by contestants during the competition.

Among the senior entrants an outstanding exhibition was given by Lyn Punchard. A strong sure skater, she won the trophy in the senior ladies' contest. In the junior ladies' event 11-year-old Barbara Dyble came through with a smooth performance to win the trophy.

Barbara Matthews, 11, and Frances Dickens, 12, teamed together to take the junior dancing award while the senior dancing competition was won by Mary Lou Cook and Ardel Hunter.

Only male to achieve distinction was Joe Calbury, who, with a sparkling, well-controlled exhibition won the award in the senior men's contest, the only event scheduled for men in the competition.

Individual trophies were presented to the winners by president John Lewis. A duplicate of each trophy will be kept in the club house.

In presenting the trophies Mr. Lewis also make particular reference of Olivia Weese, who headed up the skating committee in organizing the event. Chairman of the club Gord Davies directed the events.

Mr. Lewis also made a special presentation to Bonnie Wallace at the conclusion of the award-giving.

Manly MacDonald Re-Opens War With Modernist Painters

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto artist Manly Macdonald has re-opened his war with Ontario's modernist painters.

He said Saturday they have kept out of shows paintings like the ones which made him a star of the current London exhibition of Canadian art.

One of his London pictures, "Sturgeon River," was rejected at a Royal Canadian Academy exhibition last year.

Another of his paintings, showing an old mill in winter, was featured on the London exhibit catalogue.

He refused to enter this picture in a Canadian show because it would have been rejected, he said. His painting of a similar scene in summer was turned down two years ago by the Canadian National Exhibition.

Mr. Macdonald said he has no dispute with the Royal Canadian Academy, only with the Ontario Society of Artists "and the modernists who control practically everything."

Sydney Watson, past president of the OSA and a member of the CNE art committee, refused comment on the controversy, but said any exhibits he is connected with "have competent judges who judge fairly."

55 Japs Plan Homeland Visit

TORONTO (CP) — Fifty-five Japanese-born men and women leave Toronto tonight on a sentimental journey.

They are first-generation Japanese-Canadians who arrived in Canada more than 40 years ago. They are going back to their native land on a three-month tour.

"We want to take one last look at our old country before we go up to heaven," said Thomas Kadonaga, 62, a member of the group.

Funds for the trip were raised through the help of their children.

Bridge Workers Accept Offer Of Wage Increase

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some 150 employees of the Dominion Bridge Company and the Canadian Bridge Company voted Sunday to accept a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase offered by their companies.

Their action averted a possible strike which would have halted construction of the first unit of the International Nickel Company's $48,000,000 iron plant at Copper Cliff near Sudbury.

The construction workers, members of local 721, International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers (AFL-TLC), voted by secret ballot in Toronto and Sudbury during the weekend. The union had been given authority to call a strike.

Five cents of the 10-cent increase will be retroactive to Jan. 1, and the rest will become effective Aug. 1. The agreement runs to April 1, 1956. Basic wag of the workers before the increase was $2.20 an hour.

Half Live in Poverty

TORONTO (CP)—J. R. Pelletier, who directed the United Nations agricultural reorganization program in Iran in 1952, says more than half of humanity lives in poverty, disease and illiteracy.

Mr. Pelletier now is superintendent of an agricultural experimental station at Ste. Anne de la Pocatiere, Que.

He said Iran was among the first countries to appeal to the UN for help in developing important industries and agriculture.

IN MEMORIAM

BIRDIE. — In loving memory of a dear husband, William Birdie, who died suddenly February 7th, 1954.

We little knew when we woke that morn
The sorrow the day would bring.
For the call was sudden, the shock severe
To part with one we loved so dear.
We wonder why he had to die
Without a chance to say good-bye.
No morning dawn, no night return
But what we think of you
God gave us strength to fight it
And courage to bear the blow.
But what it meant to lose you, Bill
No one will ever know.

—Lovingly remembered and missed by his wife Maggie. F7

BIRDIE. — In loving memory of a dear father, William Birdie, who died suddenly February 7th, 1954.

What would I give if I could say
Hello Dad, in the same old way.
To hear your voice and see your smile
To sit and talk to you awhile.
Beautiful memories are all I have left
Of a father I loved and will never forget.

—Ever remembered and sadly missed by daughter Beverly. F7

BIRDIE. — In loving memory of a dear father, who died suddenly February 7th, 1954.

Please God forgive a silent tear,
A fervent wish our dad was here.
There are others, yes, I know
But he was ours and we loved him so.
Dear God, take a message
To our father in heaven above,
Tell him how much we miss him
And give him all our love.

—Sadly missed by daughter Gwen and son-in-law Orley. F7

BIRDIE. — In loving memory of a dear brother-in-law, William Birdie, who passed away February 7th, 1954.

He is gone but not forgotten,
And, as dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of him are always near.
Days of sadness will come o'er us,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.

—Ever remembered by Jay and George. F7

BIRDIE. — In loving memory of a dear brother-in-law, William Birdie, who passed away February 7th, 1954.

God called him home, it was His will,
But in our hearts we love him still;
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.
We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.

—Ever remembered by Reta, Don and Bill. F7

COLLIER. — In loving memory of a wonderful grandfather, Frank Alexander Collier, who passed away February 7, 1954.

Loving and kind in all his ways,
Upright and just to the end of his days,
Sincere and kind in heart and mind,
What a beautiful memory he left behind.

—Rosemary and Bob. F7

COLLIER — In loving memory of our dear grandfather and great grandfather, Frank A. Collier, who passed away February 7th, 1954.

$100,000 Fire Loss in Toronto Office Building

TORONTO (CP) — Flames that smoldered undetected for four hours resulted in an explosion in a downtown office building Saturday night, causing an estimated $100,000 damage. No one was injured.

Firemen said the outbreak of undetermined origin, started on the top floor of the four-storey Day Building. Sporadic explosions sent flames 50 feet in the air as nearly 100 firemen battled for seven hours to bring the fire under control.

The first explosion knocked the rear wall of the fourth floor into the yard below.

There are 10 companies in the building including a printing establishment, a restaurant, a watch shop and an electrical firm. They were all damaged by the fire.

The building is located on Richmond street, west. Firemen assigned to investigate the fire Sunday said they found nothing to support a rumor that safecrackers with nitroglycerine had caused the explosion.

They reported that it was probably caused by the pressure and heat that had gathered in the fourth floor as a result of the smoldering flames.

New York Debut Made By Toronto Pianist

NEW YORK (CP) — Toronto pianist Beatrice Bennett made her New York debut Saturday with a recital in Town Hall.

The New York Times said Miss Bennett, who won the International Summer Academy competition at Salzburg last August, addressed herself to the music "with much application."

The reviewer went on to say: "Her playing, however, lacked focus and intensity. It was sentimental, too, and did not have the musical discipline needed for so demanding a work as the Brahms Sonata."

ATTLEE GOING TO N. Y.

NEW YORK (AP)—The League for Industrial Democracy said Thursday night Clement R. Attlee, former Labor prime minister of Great Britain, has accepted an invitation to address the league's 50th anniversary dinner here April 23. The league defines its objectives as education "for increasing democracy in our economic, political and cultural life."

Couple Huddle In Car as Hydro Lines Snap, Hiss

TORONTO (CP) — A young Toronto couple Saturday night huddled together in their automobile while broken hydro lines carrying 4,100 volts each snapped and hissed outside.

Police said Keith Robert, 20, and Margaret Auld were not injured when their trip to a movie was interrupted.

Broken, inch-thick hydro wires brushed lightly back and forth against the side of their car, police said. They said the couple "did the right thing" in huddling together after the wires burned and snapped on a mid-town intersection and surrounded the automobile. Rain-heavy air which seeped through defective insulation was blamed by Hydro men for the break.

The wires danced around the young couple's car for almost an hour while hundreds of theatre-goers watched. The two sat close to each other so they would not touch metal parts of the vehicle.

COLDER THAN TIBET

NEW YORK (AP) — Landing in New York on its coldest day in seven years, a Buddhist lama commented Thursday "it seems to be colder and windier than in Tibet." The mercury had climbed from a low of zero to 10 above by the time the priest, Dr. Geshe Wangyal, disembarked from the French liner Liberte.

Dulles Will Face Senate Questions About Far East

By LEE GARRETT

WASHINGTON (AP) — A weekend go-ahead on U.S. plans to aid in evacuating the Tachen islands posed new questions for State Secretary Dulles today as he prepared to ask Senate committee approval of a mutual defence treaty with Nationalist China.

The Nationalists announced the evacuation began Sunday night.

Orders sending the powerful U.S. 7th Fleet within range of Communist guns for the Tachen evacuation were issued Saturday amid expressed hopes for peace and a navy warning that any Red attack "will be considered as interference with the mission of the fleet."

CLOSED HEARING

Dulles, who returned Sunday night from a vacation in the Bahamas, faced almost certain questioning not only about that action but also about possible new cease-fire moves and the entire Far Eastern situation at a closed hearing before the Senate foreign relations committee.

TEST AVALANCHE CONTROL

INNSBRUCK, Austria (Reuters) The first experiments in preventing avalanches by firing explosive rockets into a massed wall of snow were made at nearby Reutte Friday. The experiments, designed to break up the wall and bring the snow down in small instalments, were said to have been a complete success.

Murder-Suicide Believed Cause Of Two Deaths

TORONTO (CP) —The body of Mrs. Tivy Beyko, 40, stabbed to death in what police said was a murder-suicide during the weekend, Sunday was released to a brother and sister from St. Catharines for burial, police said.

Mrs. Bess Nykilchuk, the sister, came to Toronto to identify the body.

Mrs. Beyko was discovered by Julian Rohr, stabbed to death by a boning knife. Nearby in the basement apartment was the body of Atanas Endzekceff, 28, stabbed three times. The knife was clutched in his hand, police said.

HAD MADE THREATS

Rohr told police he found the bodies when he came to the apartment to answer the phone for a woman who was advertising an upstairs apartment for rent. He said Mrs. Beyko, who in first reports was identified as Reyko, previously told him Endzekceff was infatuated with her and threatened to kill her if she did not date him.

Police said the man was clad only in underwear and the woman was scantily clad. The bodies were discovered about 6 p.m. Saturday but a coroner said they died about 14 hours before.

Endzekceff's body was released to George Dronoff, with whom he lived. The woman came here from St. Catharines seven years ago.

CNR Cuts Time Across Continent 12 to 14 Hours

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian National Railways today announced reductions of from 12 to 14 hours in Montreal-Toronto passenger schedules to Vancouver.

The new running times will apply to a new "Super Continental," a diesel-powered train that will go into operation April 24. The train will cut 14 hours and five minutes from the present Montreal-Vancouver schedule, and 12 hours and 15 minutes from the Toronto-Vancouver run.

The Canadian Pacific Railway announced Jan. 24 that it was planning sharp reductions in its transcontinental schedules beginning April 24. The CPR said its transcontinental schedule will be reduced 16 hous on the Montreal-Vancouver run, and 12½ on the Vancouver-Montreal run.

When the CPR announcement was made, the CNR said only that it was planning a "considerable" reduction in the running time of its main transcontinental train.

70-HOUR TRIP

The CNR's Super Continental will leave Montreal daily at 3:25 p. m. EST. For example, a Monday train will arrive in Ottawa at 5.35 p. m. That night the train will be consolidated at Capreol, Ont., with the Toronto section out of Union station at 6 p. m. EST.

The consolidated train will arrive in Winnipeg at 10:30 p. m. Tuesday, establishing a record for train travel between the east and Winnipeg. It will arrive in Vancouver at 1:45 p. m. Thursday.

Eastward, the Super Continental will leave Vancouver daily at 2:15 p. m. PST. It will be in Winnipeg the third day at 7:40 a. m., and Capreol the fourth morning at 6:25 a. m., arriving in Toronto that afternoon at 2:15 p. m., and Montreal at 5:20 p. m.

The eastward run is slower because of the sharper grades the trains have to climb after leaving Vancouver.

CONTINUES RUN

The CNR said that its regular Continental train, now in operation, will continue to run between Montreal and Toronto and the Pacific coast after April 24. It, too, will be cosolidated at Capreol and run as one train to Vancouver on an improved schedule. The schedule changes planned for the Continental will be on a reservation basis.

CAT ADOPTS ROOMFUL OF CANARIES

This is worth a second look any day of the week. A little canary, undaunted and unafraid, whispers a sweet song into the ear of attentive cat in a Paris pet shop. A strange affinity, but there it is—the exception to the rule. The pets belong to M. Roger Netter, who owns one of the best-known shops in Paris, specializing in birds and rare tropical fish. Netter acquired "Minet" the kitten some time ago, but the problem was how would Minet take to the fledgling birds which M. Netter breeds. The fear was unfounded, for Minet took to every little canary, dove, parrot and pigeon in the place. Most of her time now is spent in the cages and when she makes her rounds, there is never a squawk, squeak or a flurry of feathers.

Monks Fed Up With Tourists

LONDON (CP)—The monks of la Grand Chartreuse are fed up with prying tourists and may move their headquarters to Canada, says The Times.

"A Canadian bishop has already suggested that they should move to his diocese," says the newspaper.

The monastery stands high in the mountain behind Grenoble, in the department of Isere. Each year thousands of visitors make the winding climb up the forest road to the top of the Alpine valley to gaze at the monks as they toil near the monastery, apparently oblivious to the tourist invasion.

The monks now are considering a move, says The Times, in hope of finding solitude and silence appropriate to their strict order.

'Toonerville Trolley' Heads for Scrap Heap

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The rickety little "Toonerville Trolley" that has rocked across newspaper pages for 40 years is headed for the scrap heap. It was one of the early comic strips.

Fontaine T. Fox, 70, who originated and drew the "Toonerville Folks" cartoon for newspapers since 1915, Sunday announced his retirement.

NO PRINCIPLE IN DANGER HERE

Freedom of the press is an issue that has been a source of vigorous debate in Vancouver for some time.

The latest incident involving the fourth estate concerns the resignation of the six-man staff of the monthly magazine "Transition" because censorship deleted objectionable articles in its November issue. However, there is not likely to be a crusade to reaffirm the rights of the "Transition's" staff to express its opinions without censorship. The "Transition" is the monthly magazine of the British Columbia penitentiary. "Resignation" of the staff was made known when a convict, recently released, told of the incident.

The November issue, according to the Deputy Warden of the prison, F. C. B. Cummins, "abused" officials of the Department of Justice and the staff planned to do "the same thing" in the December issue.

This is one case where censorship appears to advantage.

One finds it difficult to imagine convicts paying Department of Justice officials tributes for their arrest and incarceration. Convicts are individuals convicted of wrongdoing after the due processes of law have been exercised. When they are committed to prison they have forfeited their rights as free citizens because, by their actions, they have demonstrated that they are not deserving of these rights.

One of the rights of free citizens is freedom of expression. Prisoners have a right to complain about maltreatment or physical abuse. They are not compelled to believe in the virtues of their captors. But they are also not entitled to "abuse" the Department of Justice.

Prison publications, authorized as "mediums of expression" for inmates, are privileges granted prisoners by the Department of Justice with the sanction of the government, and paid for by the government. Prisoners have no rights to publish anything.

Deletion of material in the "Transition" is not infringement of "freedom of the press." It is restriction of a privilege which has been abused.

SAVINGS AND DEBT—TWO SIDES OF A COIN

United States residents have the greatest volume of savings on record and at the same time are going deeper and deeper into debt.

An Associated Press report refers to "these seemingly contrary trends" as if there were something amazing about their simultaneous existence.

What is startling about them?

There is an old and familiar saying that everybody's income is somebody else's expense, or vice versa.

Every debt is somebody else's savings—and most people's savings are somebody else's debts. It may be argued that only savings which are loaned create debts, that when they are used to purchase real property or an equity in a firm their investment does not create a debt. But every dollar invested in a bond, a debenture, a mortgage, a life insurance policy or an annuity creates a debt for some individual, corporation or government.

The only economy which could be debt-free would be one in which savings are meagre—or were tucked away in a sock or placed under a mattress.

Even these hoarded dollars would, in one sense, represent a debt. They are payment received from the community for services rendered. They entitle the recipient to certain services in return. If he does not choose to accept these services immediately, if he defers spending these dollars, he places the community in his debt. The dollar bill in a sock represents a lien on a certain amount of goods. There is a debt, payable on demand, that is upon presentation of the dollar bill.

BRITAIN'S ROAD BACK

Among signs of increasing resilience in the British economy Americans will welcome the more than fourfold increase in the number of automobiles Britons will be permitted to import from the United States next year. The number is not large—650—and the value is $1,400,000. But here is one more signpost on the long road Britain has been travelling from wartime restrictions on trade to more for everybody. DOUBLE-BARRELLED "JOKE"

Mrs. Joan M. Ward, 22, Niagara Falls, N.Y., mother of three children, was killed from the blast of a 12-guage shotgun pointed at her by her husband.

"It was a joke," said her 24-year-old husband. "I had no idea it was loaded."

This is another example of the lethal qualities of "unloaded" guns. It re-emphasizes one of the cardinal rules of handling guns, never point a gun at anything you don't intend to shoot.

With the constant struggle for power in the Kremlin it seems about time to speculate on Malenkov's successor. He has had the job long enough to make enemies.

WINTER GOLFER

The winter golfer by the fire
Now plays his favorite course in par.
He grants the strokes his friends desire,
Though their demands excessive are.
The yawning traps his shots will clear,
To wiry rough his eyes he shuts.
With him no worm-casts interfere,
Since on the parlor rug he putts.

He studies pictures in the books
And imitates them, hip and wrist.
He's done with slices and with hooks.
No shot by him in dreams is missed.
While sitting in his easy chair,
Not once his shoulder ever drops.
He won't look up while playing there.
The ball he neither shanks nor tops.

I would not wake him from his dreams.
I'd rather let him doze 'til spring.
At home his game so pleasant seems,
So smooth and so correct his swing,
But this has every golfer learned
To his dismay from year to year:
That when the robins have returned
The same old faults will reappear.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 7th, 1935

The retail butchers in the city, supported by a large deputation from the Retail Merchants' Association, presented a lengthy petition to the city council last evening at its regular meeting in the council chamber, asking that the cutting up of meat for sale on the local market be prohibited. J. Livesey presented and read the petition and a number of members of the Retail Merchants Association and a few members of the council spoke on the matter. However, discussion was not necessary as Mayor George O. Tice informed the deputation that the matter had already been carefully considered in committee and that their petition would be granted. Later in the meeting a recommendation was passed "that the city solicitor be instructed to prepare a by-law preventing the cutting of fresh meat on the market."

The monthly meeting of the Presto Music Club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Houston, Pine St. The program was in charge of Mr. Glifford Templer and was devoted to the works of modern French composers.

Arrangements are under way to change the site selected for the new armouries from the hospital lot at the northeast corner of Victoria Avenue and Church Street, to the southeast corner of Bridge and Pinnacle Streets, now occupied by John C. COURAGE TO MAKE A CHOICE

The Greek philosopher Pythagoras compares life to the letter Y because in the life of practically every one of us two ways appear before us and we must make our choice of life or death.

It is as serious as that. John Wesley was one the greatest saints the Church has produced, yet he declared that all his life he felt like a man standing on a narrow isthmus between a raging sea on one side which threatened to destroy him, and a steep ascent on the other. To the very end of his life, the Apostle Paul kept speaking in anxious tones about the possibility of his falling from grace. He feared lest after he had preached to others he himself might be overwhelmed with temptation and became a derelict.

Many people refuse to look at life as the letter Y. In many college classes students are so indoctrinated with the idea of tolerance that not a few of them lose the capacity to make a definite moral choice about anything. The expression, "It all depends on the individual," has become a perfect curse to moral progress. It does, of course, depend on the individual whether we achieve life or death, but the achievement depends upon our ability and willingness to choose the good and to reject the evil.

Every one of us must make grim, moral choices. Our eternal destiny depends upon the seriousness with which we make our choice.

Elephant Remembered!

(Sherbrooke Record)

A Montreal doctor, visiting India, was watching a large elephant working in the jungle. Suddenly he realized that the animal was limping and discovered a large thorn in his foot. He found a pair of pliers and worked out the thorn.

Years later the doctor took his family to a circus performance at home. All at once a huge elephant broke from the centre of the ring, headed in his direction. On approaching the doctor the great beast gave a glad little cry.

He came close, then what did grateful Jumbo do? He lifted his erstwhile benefactor from the 50-cent seats to the dollar section.

Punishment Was Harsh!

(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

The two Scots lassies who indulged in the frivolity of tossing hunks of coke through the window of Prime Minister Churchill's official residence, have been handed a dire sentence indeed. They have to go back to Scotland and stay there at least a year. What a sentence! Any good Scot would compare it to being banned to the sunny south for one of these cold Canadian winters. Ah, weel. The Scots may take a different view of the lassies and arraign them on some other charge once they get hame. Just to think of it. Throwing away good coke like that!

Slipped Discs

(International Science Press Service)

Her story was painfully familiar to the doctor. The back pain started when she was close to forty, shortly after she had taken up tennis in a last-ditch attempt to lose weight. At first the pain was rather mild, and she could get relief by massaging her back, or lying down for a short while. Gradually, things got worse: her back began to feel stiff a good deal of the time and the pain, now much more intense, spread from the lower part of her spine to her legs.

Her family began to notice that she was getting terribly cross and irritable. Once, she dropped a spoon and, bending over to pick it up, she felt such an excruciating jab of pain that she gasped out loud.

By now, she had given up tennis. She blamed her trouble on something she called "muscle fatigue", then decided that maybe it was "nerves". Because-like most women-she did not want to go to a doctor with a mere backache, she decided to try one liniment, then another. When these did not work, she switched to, hot compresses. Finally driven to near-desperation by a gnawing, almost constant pain, she did the first really sensible thing: she went to a doctor, and then to a specialists.

• • •

Her trouble was something known as slipped disc. It results from a displacement of one of the sections of cartilage which lie between the bones of the spine. Without knowing it, she must have displaced one while playing tennis. She did not realize that her back was not a rod, but rather like a chain, made up of bone and tissue.

Fortunately, her story is a happy one. Through manipulation, the doctor managed to squeeze the disc back into normal position. This, together with several weeks of bed rest, brought a lasting cure. In many cases, however, the problem is not so simple.

Slipped disc was once considered an extremely rare condition. But today there are thousands of cases. This, combined with the fact that the condition was practically unknown until the latter part of the last century, has given rise to the belief that there has been a great increase in recent years.

This is not so. What has happened is that doctors now can recognize many more cases that in former years passed unnoticed Pains in the lower back that were once called sciatica and lumbago, today are being traced, in many instances, to slipped disc.

• • •

The earliest recorded case appears to be that of a German, who, in 1896, is said to have survived the nightmarish experience of falling almost a hundred feet. And he landed, so the story goes, in an upright position. It is easy enough to see why this man suffered a "slipped disc". Only in recent years, have doctors realized that much less violent mishaps could do the same thing.

A sudden resumption of strenuous activity by people leading a more-or-less sedentary life is a rather common cause. That is why the taking up of athletics by middle-aged persons needs to be considered carefully. Frequently, straining to lift something heavy is responsible for displacement.

The discs are plates of cartilage which act as shock absorbers for the spinal column. Each disc lies between two separate spinal bones which are called vertebrae. In the centre of the disc is the nucleus pulposus. This is something like a ball bearing, or the bubble in a spirit level. It accommodates itself to the force of gravity by shifting as we bend over, turn or twist our backs. If there is too much strain on this "ball bearing", it will literally pop out of place, taking parts of cartilage with it. And then we have a "slipped disc".

• • •

For cases that need prolonged treatment, a device recently developed in England provides new hope. The apparatus, a mechanical couch, acts by stretching the spine enough to allow a dislodged disc to slip back into position. It has already been tried on more than 450 patients at St. Thomas Hospital in London, proving effective in all but two cases. The new treatment is reported to cut down the amount of bed rest required by several weeks.

Surgery may be necessary where the cartilage is injured or defective. In such cases, either the disc is removed or replaced by a new piece of cartilage taken flom another part of the body.

Prevention is much easier than cure. Doctors have found that the number of slipped-disc cases can be reduced when men who have to lift heavy objects in their daily work are taught the tricks of professional weight lifters, such as squatting instead of bending over to pick up something heavy. In England, the doctors have asked the manufacturers of packing cases to put handles on the cases in positions where the lifting will place the least strain on the back.

Feeding Bushworkers

(Sudbury Star)

M'sieu, it's enough to make a man want to break his bean pot over the first head that pops into the shanty when he reads the like of this—Training of Logging Camp Cooks Highlight of Feeding Conference.

And the things they talked about at the Woodlands Feeding Conference held at Niagara Falls! Refrigeration, beverages in the camp menu, transportation and storage of meats, use of tea and coffee, cocoa and chocolate.

But the insult, m'sieu! The training of campcooks!

Was there ever any school-learning cook who knew just the right amount of sour belly to throw into the bean pot? Or the proper size of onion to suit the size of the pot and give strength to the beans?

And coffee! What does a book teacher know about the right kind of coffee to serve to cold, hungary lumberjacks? That weak stuff watered down to city tastes! Bosh! Give a man the coffee he can sweeten and use for syrup on his flapjacks.

This imaginative monologue must end on the note of progress that has been made in bush operations. The harvesting of the forest crop is something more than a few months of winter employment for itinerate workers. Companies have made giant strides in setting up permanent camps with all the comforts of home—including cooking that is better than many of the bush workers have enjoyed.

This is made possible through trained camp cooks who may not be able to whip up a dish of sour belly and beans but do know all about nutrition, and the care and preparation of food.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Getting tough, several of our Canadian cities have recently decided to double the fine for parking in prohibited and restricted sections of downtown streets. Doubling fines, however, won't really solve the problem, for there are people to whom fines mean nothing. And prominent among them are the big-shot businessmen who simply put their fines on their expense accounts. They never feel it personally. A few days ago, I was driven to a meeting by one of these lesser tycoons. He is a man for whom I have the highest respect as a fly fisherman and a business bulldozer. But his social attitude leaves much to be desired. He drove to the door of the building we were to visit. It was ten past 4 p.m., and the signs on the lamp posts clearly indicated there was no parking allowed after 4:30 p.m. I called his attention to the fact.

"Don't give it a thought," he assured me, as we left the car.

Our meeting lasted until well after five o'clock, and several times I reminded my friend of his car parked outside in a prohibited area.

All he did was make soothing gestures.

"Look:" he said, as we put on our coats to depart. "We go out. There's a ticket on the windshield. Five bucks! Suppose they have doubled the fine. Ten bucks! I give the ticket to my secretary. She sends a check in. And charges it to my expense account. It's charged to car operation."

"But that," I protested hotly, "is defeating the whole principle of traffic management. And besides, you are charging your fines back on the public. That's who pays your expense account, in the goods they buy . . ."

"Son," said my friend." "when you've been in business as long as I have . . ." We went outside. My friend's car was gone.

He strode up to the traffic constable at the corner and reported it.

"That?" said the constable, waving his arms to the traffic. "The police tow truck took it away about 4:45. You'll have to go out to the police garage, at the west end of the city . . ."

My irate friend telephoned aldermen, local members of parliament, several ward heelers.

They just laughed at him. It's the only way to handle lesser tycoons.

INSANITARY NINETEENTH CENTURY HOSPITALS

Dr. Brady

A little more than a century ago (1843) a young whippersnapperd by the name of Holmes published a paper on "The Contagiousness of Puerperal Fever." Doctor Holmes, Oliver Wendell Holmes was 34 years old at the time, and a poet to boot! In his essay, which must always remain a classic of medical literature, the courageous young man— thank Heaven he was a young man, said:

"I have no wish to express any harsh feeling with regard to the painful subject . . . it is as a lesson rather than as a reproach that I call up the memory of these irreparable errors and wrongs" (in the practice of obstetrics). "God forbid that any member of the profession to which she trusts her life, doubly precious at that eventful period, should hazard it negligently, unadvisedly, or selfishly."

That's the prologue for a show I wish I could have seen—but from the back row in the gallery, so I could leave hastily if it became impossible to suppress a guffaw. On more than one occasion this propensity has betrayed me.

The sheer gal of it! A callow youth pleading for asepsis (surgical cleanliness) in obstetrics! The reaction was typical. In minuscule the same thing has happened when I have informed the public of alternatives for major operation in selected cases of hernia, hemorrholds or infected tonsils.

At the same time Holmes published his essay two American obstetricians were pre-eminent. When they pronounced their views no one dared to challenge them—until the young poet stepped forward. They were Hodge, Professor of Obstetrics in the University of Pennsylvania and Meigs, Professor of Obstetrics in Jefferson Medical College.

Boy, were these big shots sore! The castigations I have received are trifling slaps on the wrist compared to the ridicule, satire, ponderous invective and abuse these autocratic spokesmen for the medical profession directed against young Dr. Holmes.

But today, Professors Hodge and Meigs are remembered, if at all, only for their blindness, while the name of Oliver Wendell Holmes is linked in medical history with the name of an even younger man, Dr. Ignaz Philipp Semmelweiss, a Hungarian, who proved in Vienna hospitals that most puerperal fever — childbed septicemia or "blood poisoning" could be prevented if the doctors, nurses and others attending women in childbirth would disinfect their hands and instruments.

The occurrence is usually hushed up for the sake of the hospital's reputation, but the truth is that from time ot time, in the top-notch lying-in institutions of the day, an outbreak of infantile diarrhea strikes and usually this is fatal to some of the new-born infants who are kept crowded together behind the plate glass window in hospitals were nineteenth century methods are used.

When the infants are chucked into the nursery as exhibits for visitors and sight-seers instead of being kept in bed or in bassinet besides mothers' bed, where mother can nurse, love, cuddle, care for and protect her baby to make sure the baby won't be mixed up with some other baby, the conditions are favorable for the spread of infection from one baby to the next, by the nurses who perform there in the show window.

It is a matter of record that such an outbreak of fatal infantile diarrhea in a Pennsylvania hospital a few years ago knocked the nineteenth century obstinacy out of the managers of a North Carolina hospital and brought twentieth century obstetrics to the institution.

Informality BBC Keynote

(Montreal Gazette)

On a recent occasion, an early morning BBC announcer startled adult listeners and delighted schoolchildren by stating that the date was November 31. This is another in a long list of anecdotes which illustrate a certain down-to-earth humanity about BBC operations which North American studios would find embarrassing.

BBC announcers with a cold, for instance, do not always follow the North American procedure of switching off the mike when they need to cough or sneeze. Instead, they pause, sneeze, and excuse themselves.

One of the better anecdotes concerns the BBC man reading the news during the blitz. Listeners could hear a thundering sound behind his voice and decided that BBC House must be hit. After several "explosions," however the announcer paused, breathed heavily, then told his audience he'd finally got his foot out of the metal waste-basket.

Despite, or perhaps because of this candid informality, BBC overseas services are easily the most popular in the world.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE NEARBY CALL

It is characteristic of human nature to dream of things far away, rather than to concentrate upon what is close at hand. The famous Mayo brothers decided upon a small town in Minnesota for their hospital and medical center. Rather than be swallowed up in some great city they chose the town or Rochester—and people from all over the world came to them for service and renewed health.

Thomas Carlyle, the English writer and historian, once wrote: "Our main business is not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand." Such a simple and intelligent suggestion, but how few of us follow it, or take the advice as a maxim.

There may be the opportunity for helpfulness to someone else across the street from where we live, or in the same town. How we neglect such opportunities! By remaining faithful to our nearby duties and privileges, many a far-off opportunity finds the way to our door-step with good news for us higher up and even beyond!

Most of those who migrated to our larger cities first distinguished themselves in their home town, or else engaged in whatever they could get to do in the larger cities, awaiting the opportunities ahead. They who do not fail the nearby call are sure to be listening for the more important ones. It doesn't matter much where we work, or what we work at, so long as it is useful work and we like it. The happiest workers are those who do the things they most want to do, regardless of the material compensation.

This body of ours receives good news when it is advised that neither yesterday nor tomorrow is to be of any concern, but that Today, and the opportunities therein, are all that matters. Yesterday is history, and tomorrow hasn't even happened

Says Firms Not Trying to End Unemployment

HAMILTON (CP—George Burt of Windsor, retiring president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, said Sunday employers are not trying to solve the unemployment problem but rather are taking advantage of it at the bargaining table.

The Canadian director of United Automobile Workers Union, said the Ford and Massey-Harris-Ferguson strikes could have been avoided but for this attitude.

Mr. Burt spoke at the final meeting of the three-day convention of the federation. He was succeeded as president of the 200,000-member organization by Sam Hughes, assistant Canadian director of United Packinghouse Workers.

The 300 convention delegates from various CIO-CCL unions criticized federal and provincial unemployment policies.

ACTION DEMANDED

Eamon Park, representative of United Steelworkers, said unemployment in Canada may reach 700,000 by the end of March unless action is taken. The economy was slowing up and the situation was critical.

A resolution was passed asking speedy action through public works projects, housing developments and a Dominion-provincial conference.

Mr. Park also criticized suggested government - supervised strike votes and said they would only delay the process of conciliation. Stanley Thornley of the United Rubber Workers agreed, saying the government would be meddling in the internal affairs of the union.

Thomas Rees, president of the Windsor Labor Council said neither the Ontario Labor Relations Act nor the Fair Employment Practices Act protects workers against discrimination because of their marriage partner.

He cited the case of a white waitress who, he said, lost her job in a Windsor restaurant when her employer found she was married to a Negro.

The federation passed a resolution demanding "that the provincial government insert a clause making it illegal for such discrimination to take place."

PRIME MINISTER

The honorary freedom of the City, as distinct from ordinary forms of the honor, has gone to five other Canadian prime ministers, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Robert Borden, Arthur Meighen, Mackenzie King and R. B. (later Viscount) Bennett. The privilege is awarded for "exceptional services to the City, the nation, the empire, or to the world at large."

The conference of Commonwealth prime ministers, in session since last Monday, broke off its meetings this morning to allow other premiers to attend the ceremony.

SECOND SPEECH

When it was over, St. Laurent lunched at the Mansion House and delivered his second speech within two hours. In this second address, he referred to links between Canada and the City. Referring to the Commonwealth conference, he said:

"It has been a heartening experience to take part in the exchange of views with other Commonwealth prime ministers. I must add that it has also been an inspiration to meet under the chairmanship of that very great man to whom all free men everywhere will always be in debt, Sir Winston Churchill."

He welcomed recent signs of increasing British interest in Canadian financial developments and reminded his audience that the movement of men and money across the Atlantic was not one-way. He paid tribute to Sir Edward Peacock, 83-year-old financier from Glengarry county in Ontario.

Sir Edward, who attended the luncheon, has been a leading figure in the City since 1907 but still holds a Canadian passport.

LAUDS FRIENDLY BONDS

The prime minister devoted much of his speech to the friendly bonds between Canada and the financial heart of London.

World trade needed a world system of finance and credit, with currencies freely convertible. Progress sometimes seemed slow toward convertibility but Canada was grateful for the leadership and example of the United Kingdom government, the prime minister said.

He welcomed the increasing scale of United Kingdom investment in Canada.

ARREST ANOTHER PRIEST

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentine police have arrested another Roman Catholic priest on charges of disrespect to President Juan D. Peron. The priest, Father Hector Maria Monguillot of La Tablada parish, was taken into custody while on a speaking tour. Ten other Catholic clergymen have been arrested in Argentina since Peron started a campaign three months ago to combat what he called church influence in politics.

FIGURES IN LATEST FRENCH CRISIS

MENDES-FRANCE

RENE MAYER

EDGAR FAURE

ANTOINE PINAY

With the Paris treaties for West German rearmament yet to be ratified, who will lead France's 21st cabinet since 1944 is of vital concern to Allied statesmen and Frenchmen alike. The fall of Premier Mendes-France's government came as a shock in Allied circles, even though its defeat had been predicted several times during its 33-week duration. Politicians mentioned as likely successors to Mendes-France are conservative ex-Premier Antoine Pinay; Foreign Minister Edgar Faure; Popular Republican Pierre Pflimlin, and ex-Premier Rene Mayer, a Radical who helped bring about Mendes-France's downfall by pledging his 20-odd supporters to vote against the government. All are supporters of West German rearmament. (Central Press Canadian).

Co-Operation Achieved Now To Determine Society's Future

--Martin

WASHINGTON (CP)—What is done now and in the next few years to achieve effective co-operation among nations will largely determine the future of human society, Canadian Health Minister Martin said today.

It would decide "whether the heritage of our children will be social chaos, economic disorder and military conflict or peace and lasting security from want and from fear."

The United States and Canada, he said, have shown by their close, neighborly relationship that national progress and development are not incompatible with international friendship.

He spoke to the Canada-United States conference on mutual relations.

His remarks were contained in a text of his address issued to the press prior to delivery.

Reviewing Canadian - U.S. defence co-operation, he said it was a melancholy thought that today, at the highest point in North American development, "we must again reckon with the possibility of a third and perhaps final world war."

The events of the last 10 days (Formosa) had provided a grim reminder that the temperature of the international climate "may change with dramatic suddenness."

"But we cannot afford, either financially or psychologically, to turn our defence programs on and off in response to Communist moves," he said.

"Steady effort, constant vigilance and a tireless endeavor to negotiate from strength on outstanding differences, whenever possible, should be our watchwords."

Mr. Martin praised American leadership and particularly President Eisenhower's atoms-for-peace proposal. Canada, he said, also is working with atoms for peace and this spring will become the third nation to begin work on an experimental atomic energy plant for the production of electric power.

If used for war atomic power could wipe out life on this planet; for peaceful purposes, the possibilities were unlimited.

Mr. Martin said Canada would not attempt to meddle with U.S. tariff policy. But as an exporting nation whose biggest customer was the United States, she hoped the U.S. would stick to the principle of free trade.

Snow, Rain, Mud Stop Work On Military Base

CAMP GAGETOWN, N.B. (CP) An onerous mixture of snow, rain and mud has slowed construction of Canada's biggest military base whose vast expanse can't be spanned by the heaviest cannon in the army's arsenal.

Camp Gagetown, where the army one day will deploy fledgling infantrymen in divisional strength, is being pushed as one of the country's most colossal single building programs since the war.

Construction bosses who laid off hundreds of laborers from Ontario and Quebec when mud over much of Gagetown's 427 square miles mired heavy equipment in December, say they hope to speed the operation in the spring when their payroll is expected to swell to 3,500.

Construction crews spent a nightmarish summer and fall. Rains turned cleared areas into seas of mud. Bulldozers and earthmovers bogged down.

Then before frost had a chance to harden the ground, four feet of snow piled up in the woods and no more land could be cleared.

Since mid-December the pace has been slow.

25TH BRIGADE

Canada's three other infantry brigades are the 1st in West Germany, the 2nd at Edmonton and the 3rd at Valcartier, Que. In addition, the army has a mobile striking force of three parachute battalions.

MAY GO TO GERMANY

It is possible, since there are normally only three brigades in a division, that the 4th may replace the 1st in Germany as one of the three major formations in the 1st Division, commanded by Maj.-Gen. John Rockingham with headquarters at Camp Petawawa.

Col. Donald C. Cameron, 43, of Alexandria, Ont., is commander of the 4th Brigade with the acting rank of brigadier. Its present headquarters are Camp Borden, where it was posted after most of the 6,000-man 25th Brigade was brought home from Korea last fall.

The brigade lost 309 men in battle and 91 from non-battle causes. A total of 1,203 were wounded or injured in action and 23 returned from Communist prisoner-of-war camps.

Minor Hockey

The bantam and pee wee hockey schedules drew to a close on Saturday morning when six games were played. In the bantam division, the Maple Leafs broke out of a three-game winless streak to defeat the Rangers 3-2 and thus finish one point ahead of the second place Black Hawks and Red Wings. The Black Hawks missed a first place tie by one point when held to a 1-1 tie by the Canadiens while the Red Wings edged the Bruins 2 1 and also grabbed part of second place.

The Canadiens captured the pee wee league title with a 6-0 win over the Maple Leafs, finishing well ahead of the pack. The Bruins won over the Red Wings 4-1 and the Black Hawks downed the Rangers 6-2 in the other fixtures. Playoff dates will be announced later this week.

BANTAM

Earl "Sunny" MacDonald and Bernie Boulter hooked up to give the Maple Leafs their second league title in two years. Boulter scored the first leaf goal and drew assists as MacDonald banged home the tying and winning markers. Follwell and Cameron netted the Ranger goals with Smith and Elyea getting assists.

Colligan scored the lone Hawk goal on a pass from Murphy but Maverty tallied for the Habs and keep the Hawks for ending in a tie for first with the Leafs. Skelly drew one assist for the Canadiens.

The Red Wings victory was a wasted effort since the Leafs victory but goals by Bob Dolan and Fitzgerald gave them the victory and a half share of second place according to unofficial standings. Kellar tallied for the Bruins with Moreau assisting.

PEE WEE

Doug Dafoe paced the Canadiens to their championship with three goals and one assist. Barton Durrant tallied twice while Billy Hill scored one and drew assists on two others. Teddy Rowland had a pair of helpers and Doug Fuller one.

Leslie Moreau pumped home a pair of goals for the Bruins with Norm Boulter scoring once and assisting on another. Jimmy Dahl also scored. Bob Michard was the lone Wing scorer.

The Hawks attack was spearheaded by Stu Muirhead with two of their six goals and an assist on another. Hull, Pointer and Duggan had one and one with Sinclair firing one tally. Graydon Scott and David Blakley tallied for the Rangers with Sam Hill drawing one assist.

FORMIDABLE U.S.

An advance party of U.S. and Nationalist forces got the evacuation under way Sunday night, defence and air force ministry sources reported. At that time the 7th Fleet was still some distance from the sensitive area.

A party of U.S. marines and navy beach masters is scheduled to go ashore when the wholesale withdrawal begins.

MANY MIGs READY

Communist artillery pointed ominously at the Tachens from newly-captured Yikiangshan, only eight miles away, and hundreds of Russian-built MiG-15 jets were poised on mainland bases but there was no report of interference.

Red China's Peiping radio called the U.S. decision to help evacuate the Tachens a "war provocation. . . fraught with the danger of starting a major war." The broadcast said the Red army was "closely watching the development of this situation."

AP correspondent Forrest Edwards, aboard the carrier Yorktown, said navy Banshee jets roared off carrier decks shortly before midnight to fly patrol over the Tachens.

The evacuation was expected to take from seven to 10 days.

AP correspondent Jim Becker, aboard the amphibious flagship Estes, reported that a strong amphibious task force had joined the 7th Fleet for the operation. Under command of Rear Admiral Lorenzo Sherwood Sabin, Jr., a tough Texan, the amphibious force steamed into Formosan waters from Saigon where it had evacuated Indochinese from North to South Viet Nam.

"If I am fired upon I will fire back," Sabin said. "If we are in their evacuating when we are fired on we will assume they are firing on us."

The evacuation of the Tachens loomed as a tough chore, even without Communist opposition.

Beaches there are few and rocky. Tides run from 16 to 18 feet. Sabin said loading time would be cut to only six hours daily.

Much heavy equipment must be moved over the Tachen beaches.

Nationalist sources estimated there were at least 41,688 regular troops, guerrillas and civilians on the Tachens, Yu Shan and Pishan.

Fluoridation of Alberta's Water Supplies Approved

By DON HANRIGHT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP)—The Alberta research council has approved unanimously an "unqualified endorsation" of fluoridation of Alberta's public water supplies.

The council's report, culmination of an exhaustive two-year survey, was issued Saturday by Highways Minister Taylor, council chairman. The main points stressed:

1. The fluoridation proposal calls for the addition to drinking water of only enough fluoride to aid in reducing tooth decay—not enough to be harmful to general health.

3. There is a "great loss by allowing endless investigations to delay the application of fluoridation" as a health measure.

3. It would have no adverse effect on industries.

4. Fluoridation should be started "only as fast as the qualified engineering staff of the provincial health board can provide supervision."

NO IMMEDIATE ACTION

Mr. Taylor commented briefly: "The government does not plan any immediate action on the report."

The report says the years of research into the possible ill-effects of consumption of fluorides reveals that it is not "in any way harmful to health."

It continues:

"This is a most impressive fact, and one which makes it entirely certain that if any untoward effect is ever revealed by future research it will be of a very trivial order.

"If such a possibility has to be considered as a calculated risk—or if a risk exists at all—it is so inconspicuous that it has not been revealed by many years of investigation.

Approximately 1,000 public water supplies in the United States and Canada now are fluoridated, the report says. It adds:

"The experimental evidence coming from these projects is agreed that there has been a great reduction in dental caries in children of different age groups ranging from 40 to 60 per cent."

Fluoridation would not harm lawns and plants. The taste of the water would not be affected. Fluoride would contribute nothing to the value of water used for purposes other than drinking.

Books Closed On Man's Death

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore police closed the books Sunday on the death of Edgar Fassburg of Brooklyn, alias Dr. Edward James Phillips, after telling the wife who knew him as a "very lovely and wonderful person" that he was a fraud.

Capt. Gerge H. Mintiens, chief of detectives, said Fassburg's death in a hotel room here last Wednesday definitely was suicide.

For four hours Mintiens questioned Mrs. Phillips, who came here Saturday night from her home in New York.

She told him she married Edward James Phillips in New York on Aug. 30, 1952. She thought him to be a brigadier-general in the active army reserve, assigned as a pathologist at Governor's island.

The detective said the woman broke down several times during the interview and was noticeably shocked when he told her FBI fingerprints had revealed Phillips was Edgar Fassburg of Brooklyn a man with 18 or more aliases.

His body was found in his room at the Lord Baltimore about 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Northern Electric Hockey League

The Barons captured the N.E. Interdepartment hockey championship over the week-end by handing the Indians a 4-2 defeat and winning their best-of-three series in two straight games. The Barons were undefeated in playoff games since they also ousted the Hornets in two games during the semi-finals.

Kirkconnell led the champs attack with the three-goal hat trick while Woodley notched the odd marker. Woodley also added a trio of assists with Kirkconnell getting one, Jones two and Wetherall one.

D. Semark and Belnap tallied for the losers with assists going to Totten and Trasher.

Referees B. Hurst and J. Wardhaugh handed out minor penalties to Totten, Barclay, Wright, Green and Pucansik.

'Christ Church Parish' Theme At E.B.W.A.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Afternoon Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary was held in Christ Church parish hall on Thursday afternoon. Despite the cold weather, a good number of members were present.

After a short business session, conducted by the president, Mrs. R. H. Godden, the guest speaker, Mrs. Earl Hickey, was introduced by Mrs. I. Winter. Mrs. Hickey gave a most interesting talk on Christ Church Parish. She spoke of its early days; in fact its beginning, taking the W.A. members through its ups and downs until 1901, when Rev. W. B. Heeney began his rectorship. At this time, Christ Church Parish had only 30 families. From that day forward the history of Christ Church has been all "ups".

Mrs. J. Withers thanked Mrs. Hickey for this splendid talk. Also at this meeting the Auxiliary had the honor of having as guest, the Rev. R. Odendahl, rector at Six Nations Reserve, Brantford. Mr. Odendahl gave the W.A. members a most intresting talk on his work at the reserve, giving many amusing incidents of his experience with his Indians.

Mrs. D. Stewart thanked Mr. Odendahl for coming on such short notice, and hoped he would be able to pay the auxiliary another visit when in Belleville.

Mr. Odendahl is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Odendahl, Sinclair Street, Belleville. After the meeting closed refreshments were served by the ladies.

Moira W.I. Enjoys Social Evening

On Wednesday evening the Moira Women's Institute held a social evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Thompson.

Plans for cemetery work in the coming year were discussed.

Mrs. Edna Welsh sang a solo, and a reading "Great Grandad" was given by Carol Welsh; Barbara Holbert gave a reading "The Home Town"; Mrs. Alice Mumby contributed a musical number.

There was also a contest of the months of the year and community singing. Games and cards were played.

Refreshments were served.

Women's Activities

SHANNONVILLE W.G.

The Women's Guild of Trinity church, Shannonville, held its first meeting of the New Year at the home of Mrs. W. Wilson, on Thursday evening, with a good attendance. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Fitzgerald with prayer.

A euchre party was held at the home of Mrs. W. Houston, on Thursday.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Spencer, February 17.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served.

COLLEGE HILL W.A.

College Hill WA held its regular meeting in the Church on Wednesday with 20 members and two guests present.

With the president, Annis Dickens presiding, the meeting was opened with the theme song followed by the readings in unison of Psalm 1 and prayer.

Following the business period and reading of reports, the devotional program under the leadership of Audrey Flunder was conducted. The Scripture was read by Annis Dickens.

Mildred Townsend had, as her theme, "Friendship". Audrey Flunder read a poem on "Friends".

Refreshments were then served by Doris Moy, Hattie McMullen, and Mabel Keene and a social hour enjoyed by all present.

Meaning of Each W.I. Officer's Place Defined

A fine number of members of Bridge St. WMS met in the ladies' parlor, for the February WMS meeting, with the new president, Mrs. E. S. Denyes, in the chair.

Mrs. MacArthur, the recording secretary, read minutes of the last meeting.

Reports were given by Mrs. Countryman, Mrs. Dulmage, Mrs. Massey, Mrs. Hurlbut and Mrs. Schryver who recommended the book "Mist on the River".

PENAL REFORM NEEDED

In her remarks on Christian Citizenship, Mrs. Farnsworth referred to the recent move of several Women's Organizations to look into the condition of women in penal institutions. They found the laws unjust and there is much need of reform.

On being called on Mrs. MacArthur said a resolution had been passed to forward a letter to Premier Frost asking that the brief, prepared by the joint committee on penal reform for women be implemented.

This joint committee, made up of women from all organizations in the province, prepared a brief which was presented to Mr. Frost, asking (a) more parole officers for women and (b) the segregation of first offenders from repeaters.

Bridge St. Auxiliary passed a resolution that a letter be sent Premier Frost, asking that this matter be dealt with. Also a letter be sent to the Presbyterial.

PRESBYTERIAL MEETS IN PICTON

Mrs. Davis spoke briefly on Miss Evelyn Swan, the missionary in Africa. The Easter thankoffering meeting will be on April 7th. The Presbyterial meets in Picton on March 24, at which Dr. Winifred Brice will be the speaker.

The Day of Prayer will be held on February 25, at St. Andrew's church.

A study group, under Mrs. Adsett and Mrs. Fuke will meet at the church on Tuesday at 2.30. Please bring pencil and paper.

Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Morgan conducted the devotional period, XI. Mrs. Demeza delighted all the reading from Deuteronomy with two solos, "Be The Best of Whatever You Are" and "I Shall Not Pass, Again this Way", with Mrs. Bird at piano.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Adsett, vice-president, introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Stanley Spafford, branch president, who spoke on "What Installation of Officers Should Mean to all the Members". We dedicate ourselves (all work of God's People is one in His sight); to unite all the women of the church; the reach is around the earth. It doesn't matter the job. Each has a gift; every Christian is called to witness, wherever she is".

The speaker quoted a little story from life in the far east, where above the entrance were the words, "Every Pot Shall be Sacred Unto the Lord."

"We dedicate ourselves to spread the Gospel by our prayers and our money; to aid our Church in Canada; to the united effort for world peace. Do we remember to pray for all working for it?; to loyalty to our officers. Pray, co-operate and attend the meetings. We have a responsibility which is defined — an obligation for which we shall be judged.

"Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."' " "A"c't"" it is in Heaven." Act on it. Do not expect miracles. Only through us, the Kingdom of Christ shall come."

Mrs. Spafford was heartily thanked for her splendid address.

Refreshments were served by group in charge.

Board of Christian Education Lists Results of N.T. Study Course

The National Temperance study course of Canada, carried on in the counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward present the report for 1954. The course is under the direction of the Board of Christian Education of the United church, Baptist, United Brethren, Salvation Army, and Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The course is published in some of the Sunday school papers and carried on in October of each year.

This year, 13 Sunday schools reported sending in 58 papers of highest marks. Many boys and girls study the lessons which are carefully prepared and interesting, but do not send in papers.

All making 65 per cent. and over, receive an honor certificate and 50 to 60 per cent a pass certificate. Prizes are awarded to those who secure highest marks, in each of the four divisions.

It is interesting to know, during the last few years, more public schools take part than Sunday schools, throughout Canada.

Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary Celebrates Tenth Anniversary

The regular monthly meeting of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary was held at the Centre last Thursday evening celebrating the Auxiliary's 10th anniversary.

Mary Cooper greeted members and guests at the door. President Kate Cook, conducted the regular business meeting. Sheila Chipman, a new member was introduced to the Auxiliary and Mrs. MacArthur, a visitor from Vancouver.

Marjory Fuke distributed wool and sewing for Red Cross work. Ann Finkle gave the report on 'Welfare.' Vera Slade invited all to the Valentine bridge and tea at the Centre this month and announced that early in May a spring dance would be held.

President Kate Cook called on Harriet Edwards, founder of the Auxiliary to say a few words about the clubs conception.

"Between the years 1939-45, a group of Kiwanis wives became a social group working with the Red Cross, and knitted hundreds of articles that were sent overseas. By the end of 1944 they were sending out monthly bulletins, held elections and in February 8, 1945 Bessie Marsh became first president followed by Ethel Stiver 1946; Flossie Smith 1947; Vi Kuntze 1948; Hazel Baragar 1949; Vera Fairman 1950; Carm Mott 1951; Jessie White 1952; Allaneen Murray 1953; Patti Emerson 1954; and our present president, Kate Cook.

Many of the original charter members were present.

Kay Craig introduced the guest of the evening. Mrs. E. J. MacLeod, who directs and produces the Lilliput Marionette show.

Mrs. MacLeod is the wife of Wing-Commander MacLeod stationed at Trenton.

Mrs. MacLeod, designs, builds, and operates these marionettes. She also designs the stage and writes the scripts, before the show. Mrs. MacLeod introduced her associates: Mrs. H. M. Pickard, Mrs. R. F. Murray, Mrs. C. C. Lee, Mrs. V. L. Berg, Mrs. F. W. Watkin.

The show consisted of ten different scenes each enchanting and cleverly executed as follows: underwater ballet; Tennessee Wig-Wog; Momba; 'I Thought I Saw a Pussy-cat;' Skokian; In the Mood, Liberace; Spooks; 'Teddy Bears' Picnic'; 'Make Love to Me'; Parade of the Clowns. They delighted their audience.

AWARD PRESENTATION

Bessie Marsh graciously thanked Mrs. MacLeod and her associates and presented each with a rose corsage, the auxiliary's award for outstanding achievement.

Winnifred Allen and Elsa Widdifield and their committee were responsible for the refreshments; a pretty table resplendent with cancelabra and beautifully decorated birthday cake, complete with candles.

To the tune of "Happy Birthday", Bessie Marsh, cut the cake.

TO REMAKE PA'S MOVIE

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Harold Lloyd Jr., 23, out of the air force only a week, was en route to England today to resume a movie career. His mother said he will do a remake of "Sailor Made Man,' a silent film which starred his father. The film will be entitled "Yankin Ermine." Young Lloyd had some movie and television work before his four-year air force service.

PRINCESS SETS STYLE NOTE

Usually gay when facing the camera, Princess Margaret is caught in a pensive mood as she presides at the state dinner in the Port of Spain, Trinidad. Her new, eighteenth century, French-style hairdo and lovely white silk organza evening gown caused a mild sensation among fashion-conscious guests. She wears a light blue sash of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India over her gown. (Central Press Canadian).

Commodores To Play at Annual Charity Ball

In Kingston, the annual charity ball under the distinguished patronage of the Honorable Louis O. Breithaupt and Mrs. Breithaupt, will be held at the Hotel La Salle on February 18. Dancing begins at 10 p.m. The guests of honor will be the Ambassador of the United States and Mrs. R. Douglas Stewart.

Come to the Mardi Gras, is the theme of the ball, and guests will enjoy all the traditional color and gaiety for which the New Orleans festival is famous. Music will be provided once again by the Commodores of Belleville. One of the added attractions this year will be games in the small salon.

The ball is under the auspices of the medical wives' society of Kingston, and proceeds will be used to aid sick children of Kingston and district.

A cordial invitation is extended to all. Formal dress will be worn. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. G. F. Kipke, 788 Johnson St., Kingston.

W.J. Johnson Marks 90th Anniversary

On Saturday one of the district's esteemed citizens, Mr. W. J. Johnson, of Belleville, R.R. No. 2, celebrated his 90th birthday. Present for this occasion were his daughter, Mrs. J. Johnston, of Ottawa, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. J. Livesey.

Among those who called to extend congratulations were members of The Belleville Masonic Lodge, of which Mr. Johnson is a member, and which he attended faithfully while health permitted. The lodge brought with it a beautiful birthday cake. The Salvation Army quartet also came with its instruments and rendered delightful musical selections as well as vocal.

One of the highlights of the evening was the reading of a clipping taken from the Family Herald and Weekly Star, which Mr. Johnson has treasured through the years. This clipping announced the occurrence of a most unusual phenomenon; there was no full moon in February of 1866, while in January and March of that year both months had two full moons, the first occurrence of this kind since the creation, and which would not happen again for 2,500,000 years.

Mr. Johnson was the recipient of several personal gifts.

Refreshments, including two birthday cakes, concluded a most pleasant evening.

Mr., Mrs. Ernest Wallbridge Mark 50th Wedding Anniversary

The 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wallbridge of Huff's Island, was doubly celebrated on January 16 and the 17th. The first celebration was a family turkey dinner held at Maple Inn, Bloomfield, and the second an "at home" to their many friends and relatives at their home, Huff's Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallbridge were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Stanley Potter, Mountain View, on a cold winter's day by the Rev. Joseph Barnes, minister of Mountain View Methodist Church. The snow was between three and four feet deep, and in many places covered the fences.

Following the wedding dinner and reception, the bride and bridegroom left for the latter's farm home by horse and cutter, where Mr. Wallbridge, with his brothers, farmed the homestead.

Later, they purchased a neighboring farm on Huff's Island, where they now reside.

RETIRED 5 YEARS AGO

Five years ago Mr. Wallbridge retired from active farming, leaving this duty to his son, Allan. He spends his spare time refinishing antique furniture, keeping abreast of daily events and in gardening, at which he shows a "green thumb."

Mrs. Wallbridge, a person of most genial temperament, attends to her household duties. She is especially interested in the growing of flowers, an interest inherited from her father, Mr. Potter, a florist whose store on McAnnany Street, was a mecca for flower lovers. The store is now operated by his grandson, J. S. Barber.

Mr. Wallbridge is of the Anglican faith, but of late years he and Mrs Wallbridge have attended the Mountain View United Church.

Their marriage has been blest with eight children, four daughters: Mrs. C. McFaul (Phyllis), of Ameliasburg; Mrs. Major R. F. (Doris) Coe, of McGivney, N.B.; Mrs. L. Green and Mrs. Hubert Townsend (Marion), both of Ameliasburg; four sons: Ridley, of Trent Road; Frank and Allan at home, and Malcolm, also of Ameliasburg. There are 25 grandchildren, and three great grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallbridge were the happy recipients of many lovely cards and telegrams from far and near, bearing good wishes and congratulations. They received many gifts, including a table lamp, electric blanket, flowers and candy.

The community extends its best wishes to this fine couple for the years ahead.

Social Worker For 30 Years Seeks New Job

TORONTO (CP)—After two successful careers, Kathleen Gorrie is ready to embark on a third.

A former concert singer, Miss Gorrie has been a social worker for the last 30 years. Now she is retiring as director of the University Settlement here and following a holiday in Florida will go to Vancouver to open her third career, as a partner in a book store.

She first became attracted to social work when she was active as a concert soprano. A friend studying social work in New York interested the Toronto singer in the profession.

"Actually, I was more interested in the courses you had to take to get a social work degree," she said. "But once I started my studies at the University of Toronto School of Social Work, I developed a love of the job itsel

As well as Toronto institutions, Miss Gorrie has worked at Hamilton's Dale Community Centre and Gordon House in Vancouver.

She doesn't make any promise to stay at the book store.

"If I don't like it, I can always fall back on my most expensive hobby, travel," she said. "I'd like sometime to try a trip around the world. And if I get stuck anywhere, I can always get a job at social work."

"Dry Cleaners for Particular People"

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HER HUSBAND NEEDS PSYCHIATRIC HELP—SHE SHOULD ACT AT ONCE

It is rarely too difficult for a family to recognize when some member of it is in trouble psychologically. The difficult part usually comes in trying to persuade the one who is emotionally upset to seek the kind of help he needs.

That, I'm afraid, is the big problem that one wife is facing who tells me the following story:

"I believe my husband is in need of psychiatric aid, and this conviction grows stronger every day.

"We were separated by the war for two years, and since his return, he is a completely changed man. He scarcely ever talks to me, but just sits staring blankly into space. On several occasions he has even locked me out of the room he was in, stating that he wanted to be alone. He is beginning to drink quite a lot, and when I offer my help he calls me 'an interfering fool,' walks out the door and is gone for long periods of time, often coming home at one or two in the morning, drunk.

"We have a little boy born a few months after my husband left for overseas, and he will have nothing to do with our son. If he even makes a little noise, I'm told 'to take that kid out of here!' He seems to draw further away from reality all the time, and to want to shut out the rest of the world. He says such awful things to me, and nothing, nothing I can say or do can get through to him.

"I don't know how much longer I can stand being treated so cruelly, and I don't know what I am going to do. Our friends have stopped visiting us because he is so rude to them and humiliates me in front of them. Our religion forbids divorce, yet I am convinced he loathes the sight of me.

"In spite of all the agony he has caused the baby and me, we still love him and want to help him, so anything you can suggest would be appreciated. I am desperate, or [illegible] never have written you."

It is no wonder at all that this wife is desperate. For "desperate" is the word for such a situation. There is no question whatever that the husband should be under the care of a psychiatrist, and immediately. But, as I have said, the big problem is how to bring this about. Because the average person in psychological difficulty cannot realize that he is in deep trouble, and so usually refuses to seek help.

If this wife has not already done so, she should go at once to the family doctor and describe her husband's condition to him in detail. I am certain that he will be in complete agreement with her about the kind of help her husband needs, and will work with her in trying to persuade him to co-operate with them in their desire to help him. Of course, if she prefers, she could go directly to a psychiatrist herself and ask his advice on how to persuade her husband to consult him. Practically all doctors and psychiatrists have plenty of experience with people who are in need of psychiatric aid but who refuse to believe they are, and know how best to approach such individuals.

This situation has quite definitely gone on far too long already, and the taking of a definite step should not be delayed another day. I hope this wife will realize that she must act, and that the quicker she does so, the sooner her husband can be started on the road back to normalcy. Conversely, the longer she postpones the right and necessary action, the worse he is likely to get.

RENTS H-WAR CAVES

CHISLEHURST, England (Reuters)—Geary Gardner, owner of prehistoric caves running for miles under this village south of London, is planning to rent 8x10 foot spaces for £1 a year to people [illegible] would want shelter if war breaks out. During the Second World War the caves sheltered 1,500 persons a night.

EXODUS FROM RED RULE CONTINUES

For many weeks, thousands of native Indo-Chinese of Catholic faith have been fleeing Communist Viet Minh into southern part of the country. These refugees have left homes in the north rather than live under Communist rule. The Communists have tried everything within their power to hamper the exodus, but the natives are determined and fully prepared to endure any hardships involved rather than submit. Picked up offshore in Northern Indo-China waters, the refugees are transported in endless thousands to the Saigon area in the south, in French and U.S. ships. Here a very old lady and two very young children arrive in Southern Indo-China from the north to an area completely new and strange to them. (Central Press Canadian).

Braised Meats—Cooked Low and Slow

By Mary Moore

Meat methods have been receiving a lion's share of space here recently and again today I am dwelling on them.

This time by request from Mrs. E. D. W. who writes ". . . have you any recipes for shortribs and cube steaks or pork hocks or lamb shanks?"

ANSWER:

Sure have.

BRAISED SHORTRIBS

For 6 servings order nearly 3 lbs. short ribs cut into individual squares by the butcher. Also 3-4 cup uncooked rice, 1-2 cup each chopped onion, celery, green pepper, 1 tablespoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-4 teaspoon thyme, 2 1-4 cups water, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1-2 teaspoon monosodium glutamate is optional. Sear and brown the short ribs in heavy kettle on all sides without added fat, turning constantly, allowing about 25 to 30 minutes. Remove meat from pan, add raw rice, onion, celery and green pepper and cook until rice is slightly browned. Place rice mixture in large casserole and top with short ribs. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over meat. Cover and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 2 hours or until meat is fork tender.

BRAISED LAMB SHANKS

Brown 4 lamb shanks (2 lbs.) in 4 tablespoons hot fat. Add salt, pepper, 2 cups water, cover and simmer 1 1-2 hours. (Or bake same length of time.) Then add 1 cup each cut up carrots and potatoes, 1-2 cup each cut up celery and onion. Cook until all ingredients are tender—30 minutes to 1 hour. Thicken juice for gravy. This makes four servings.

PORK HOCKS

My favorite way to serve these is with sauerkraut. If you do not like sauerkraut substitute with cabbage in this recipe. Wash pork hocks well and cover with cold water. Add 1-2 bay leaf and 4 pepper-berries, cover and simmer three hours. Remove bay leaf and berries. For each hock used, add 1 1-2 cups sauerkraut. (If cabbage is substituted add salt too.) Simmer 1-2 hour longer. Many cooks of northern European origin add dumplings 12 or 15 minutes before hocks and sauerkraut are to be served, or these may be served with mashed or whole boiled potatoes. To me it is a great treat with the dumplings.

CUBE STEAKS

The only method I have used with cube steaks is to broil them, but because they are so thin I broil them under very hot broiler for about 2 minutes, then turn over and butter and salt and pepper them, and finish them quickly—they dry out so easily they must be carefully watched. They should be slightly underdone to retain their juices, since there are so many cut surfaces much of the juice escapes. Be sure to use the pan gravy to ladle over steaks or make gravy.

Cube steaks may be treated like Swiss steak if you wish by pounding flour and salt and pepper into both sides, searing in hot fat then adding diced onion and celery and 2 cups tomatoes (to 2 lbs.), covering and simmering until tender.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

TODAY'S COURTESY TIP

The essence of good manners is sensing how to make people comfortable, feel at ease, pleased with you and with themselves. Tact . . . to charm . . . to popularity. Nice going!

AT THE GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please answer a question we have about a Golden Wedding reception to be given at the home of the couple. It is to be informal, and for a few relatives and friends. The question is: Is it necessary to have some special entertainment for the guests? — J.B.

It is not necessary, and it is not usual, to plan any special entertainment for the Golden Wedding celebration. The idea is to have a gathering of relatives and friends, many or few according to preference and or convenience, to greet the couple and to offer felicitations and best wishes. There will be talk of old days and new days, the serving of refreshments . . . and, I hope, as handsome a Wedding Anniversary Cake as possible. This should be cut with a fine ceremony: at an appointed time all the guests are bidden to gather 'round the table where the cake is, the "bride and groom" cut the first piece (the groom's hand over the bride's hand) and share it with each other. (Very often as this festivity begins, someone leads the guests in singing "The Bride Cuts the Cake," to the tune of "The Farmer in the Dell.") This traditional and gala and memorable ceremony of the cutting-of-the-cake and also the toasts to "The Bride and Groom," proposed with fruit punch or whatever is the choice, are vastly more important and significant than any special entertainment.

SHE SHOULD FINISH 'TRANSACTION'

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently my husband and I spent our vacation with relatives out-of-town. One day when my husband and the two relatives with whom we were staying were not at home, I went out to get our car and discovered I had a flat tire. I didn't kow any one in the neighborhood, but finally found a young man who came to my aid. I wanted to show my appreciation with a small money-gift, but thought my husband should take care of it when he returned home. I had the money to pay him, but thought my husband should do this and also thank him. Everyone here seems to think I was wrong in not paying him myself. Was I wrong? — Puzzled

I too don't see why you yourself didn't complete the 'transaction' you yourself began . . . either to pay him, if that seemed to be the appropriate and acceptable thing to do, or if this wouldn't be acceptable, to thank him most graciously for his kindness and service.

TWO 'OBLIGATIONS' OF BEST MAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son is to be the best man soon at the wedding of his best friend. He has asked me to write to you to ask you what his financial obligations as best man are. — Mother

The best man has only two financial obligations: (1) he supplies for himself the attire he is to wear at the wedding (the groom informs him about this; and (2) he sends a wedding present to the bride-to-be.

BURN SELVES TO DEATH

DALLAS (AP) — Two children playfully splashed each other with gasoline Sunday, then burned to death as the fumes ignited from a bathroom heater. Dead were the only children of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Clark, nine-month-old Kathy Renay and Keith Lane, who would have been two March 26.

Beauty

GET YOUR BEAUTY SLEEP

The important thing about sleep is to get enough of it. Good sleeping habits are important. That means that you should pile into bed at a regular hour every night, not to drag around until you are practically dead on your feet. There is such a thing as being so tired you just can't sleep.

The individual who sleeps well, awakens refreshed in the morning, has a good chance of side-stepping various good-looks griefs, like wrinkles, shadows under the eyes, depleted tissues. The woman who tumbles and tosses, frets and worries gets out of bed looking anything but refreshed. She is not likely to be a pleasant person to live with.

You can cheat your body of regular hours of slumber for a while without noticeable effects, but in the long run you'll pay the toll. Evidence will appear in one form or another. You may be just enough below standard in health to lack zest and energy. Your sweet disposition may curdle slightly. Not feeling well, you'll have no spirit.

When you retire at night, close your mind when you close your eyes. Don't rehash the little annoyances of the past day, don't look ahead to tomorrow's tasks. Thinking about you have to do is sometimes as tiring as doing it.

If you have racing thoughts, your body will not relax. Try to go limp to the ends of your fingers and toes.

Fear that you won't sleep will keep you awake, so tell yourself that sleep will come. If there is a long period of wakefulness, read a dull book. Some individuals find relaxation in a warm bath before bedtime. It helps one relax. The temperature of the water should not be above 97 degrees.

POET LEAVES CLINIC

LONDON (AP)—T. S. Eliot, 66-year-old American-born poet and playwright, leaves London clinic today after a checkup. His condition is "quite all right," a physician said. Eliot had been in the clinic two weeks.

RYLSTONE

'Police Work' Told At W.I. Meeting

RYLSTONE — The Rylstone Women's Institute held its February meeting at the home of Mrs. Ernest Irwin, town line, on Wednesday afternoon, with 13 ladies and two children present.

Mrs. Wilfred Spencer, president, opened the meeting in the usual way. Owing to the absence of the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Jack Watson and her assistant, Mrs. Ray Fry, the minutes and correspondence were read by Mrs. Ellis Jones.

It was decided to donate 25c per branch member to assist in sending a voting delegate to the ACWW conference in Ceylon in 1956. Mrs. Arthur Brick, leader for the girls' club, though absent from the meeting, sent word urging the mothers of Girls' Club members, to attend Achievement Day, along with their daughters in the community hall, Stirling, on Saturday, February 26th.

A letter was read from the Mental Health Association, but aid was declined as it was felt the Institute had made adequate donations during the last two or three years.

A letter was also read from the "Penal Reform for Women, Joint Committee." It was decided to forward a letter, concerning this to Premier Leslie Frost. It was decided that the Institute would not hold card parties at this time, in aid of Campbellford. However, sewing for the hospital will be done during the next few months, as usual, every spring.

PROGRAM

Mrs. Don Kerr, convener for "Public Relations and Community Activities," was in charge of the following program:

Motto, "Begin Well—End Better," by Mrs. Thos Fry; piano solo, "This Old House," and "Let the Light Shine In," by Mrs. Ellis Jones.

Introduction of Chief of Police Rose of Campbellford, by the hostess, Mrs. Ernest Irwin. Chief Rose gave a talk on his work as chief of police and was asked many questions by the ladies.

Mrs. Spencer thanked him at the close of his talk.

Readings, "Things Might Be Worse," "Darwin's Mistake in Monkeydom," by Mrs. Fred Barnum; skit, "Henry's Wonderful Idea," by Mrs. Charles Stewart as Henry and Mrs. Ernest Irwin as Maria. This was well done and most humorous. Star contest by Mrs. Percy Reid; musical terms contest, by Mrs. Jim Milne.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and the lunch committee, Mrs. Thomas Fry and Mrs. Clair Irwin.

At the March meeting at the home of Mrs. Gerald Barnum, there will be a short course on "Brighten Your Home With Color."

Wellington on the Lake

FIRESIDE DREAM

The winter world is wrapped in white
The frosty air is keen.
The ice-locked lake in slumber lies,
The fragrant cedars lean
Close to the lonely ice-bound shore
As if its aid they would implore.

And while the snow piles deep and high
About my quiet home,
My hearth-fire sheds its warmth and light
And lures my thoughts to roam,
And memory leads me far away,
In sunny southern lands to stray.
— H. B. Anderson

WELLINGTON — While winter is ruling this North Land with an iron hand, and according to the old tradition that a bright Candlemas day foretells that winter will rule for six weeks longer, we have the brilliant February sunsets to cheer.

For the splendor of the sunsets
To the heart new courage brings
Brings us nearer to the Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stoneburg left by motor to spend several weeks' holiday in Florida.

Mrs. Ernest Bond was hostess of a delightful afternoon tea on And the longest day of winter Friday.

NEW ENGLAND SUPPER

In spite of the cold winter weather, the New England supper on Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Evening Auxiliary of the United Church was a fine success. The tables were invitingly laid in the church school room and the many guests were attentively served by the waiters. There was a fine attendance, many coming from out of town. The menu was fine, and suited to please the various tastes. A goodly sum was realized.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Vandewater, Belleville, were Sunday guests of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Vandewater.

Mr. Melvin Wannamaker and Miss Ruth McEathron, Rossmore, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. Wannamaker.

MRS. ADDIE TERRY

The funeral of Mrs. Addie Terry was held on Monday afternoon at the Ainsworth Funeral Home in Wellington with Rev. C. P. Heaven in charge.

The late Mrs. Terry was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Haskell McFaul, Hillier. Her husband the late Mr. Philip Terry died some years ago. Of late she had resided in Toronto with her son, Garfield Terry and family. Surviving besides her son, is a brother, Mr. Lewis McFaul, Wellington. Interment was in Wellington vault. Mrs. Terry was well and favorably known here and her passing is regretted by many friends.

The following will be of interest to many readers:

Dr. Don Whyte, a Queen's University graduate, has been recently made chief of the Anaesthetic Department of Ottawa Civic Hospital. He is a son of the late Rev. J. M. Whyte, a former United Church minister of Prince Edward County and Mrs. Whyte of Trenton, Ont.

Anna Allison Thaler, whose contributions to this paper we enjoyed some days ago, writes from her home in Lewiston, N.Y.: "My husband and I are leaving by plane on Tuesday for Washington where he will attend the conference of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. WHITE'S DISTRICT

Bayside W.M.S. Entertains King St. W.M.S.

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mrs. Clifton Rush was hostess to the ladies of the Bayside Woman's Missionary Society with the ladies of King Street Church, Trenton, and Mrs. Fred Wilson, first vice-president of the Belleville Presbyterial as their guests.

The second vice-president, Mrs. Clifton Rush, presided over the meeting, the theme being, "The Church Universal in India."

Readings were given by Mrs. L. Hunt, Mrs. L. Young, Mrs. A. Hockaday and Mrs. H. Rutter.

Mrs. L. Hunt led in a prayer of gratitude that all people from all over the world might find a place within the Christian fellowship. Mrs. G. Bilham gave a prayer of confession that many are not working for the Master.

Mrs. C. Rush read the Scripture, John 17: 18-21 and I. Corinthians 12: 4-11, followed by silent prayer for the church universal in India and gratitude for Christian churches in India.

Mrs. Langdon, of King Street Church, Trenton, favored with a solo, "Beside Still Waters," which was much appreciated.

Mrs. C. Rush moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Frank Leach, the former president, who had tendered her resignation.

Mrs. H. Rutter kindly offered her home for the March meeting. An invitation to meet with Centenary ladies for "World Day of Prayer" was accepted. An invitation to meet with the ladies of Aikens' W.M.S. for their thankoffering meeting in April was also accepted.

Mrs. Rush extended a welcome to all visitors and called on Mrs. Fred Wilson of the Belleville Presbyterial, who said that she was glad to meet with the ladies so informally. She said that she had attended W.M.S. meetings first with her mother, then as a chauffeur for others, now she was attempting to teach others to encourage study and prayer in the work at home and abroad. She mentioned the Presbyterial convention being held at Picton on March 24th and hoped that all would be there to hear Dr. Winnifred Bryce, who has returned from 40 years' service in India.

Mrs. Wilson said: "Do not let your president do all the work. All the officers and members should feel it is a privilege to work and help."

"The Community Friendship secretary should be active in visiting in the community, calling on new members of the church and winning new members.

"The Christian Stewardship secretary should work too, and encourage all money to be sent in quarterly. Temperance has been and should be stressed at all times."

Mrs. Wilson was glad to report that the Belleville Presbyterial had exceeded its allocation. Half of the surplus is to supply cars for Canada and half for radio work in Japan.

Mrs. Wilson closed her address with a verse, "Working Together." She was thanked by Mrs. Rush.

Mrs. Roberts of King Street W.M.S. thanked the Bayside ladies for the kind invitation and voiced their pleasure at being able to attend.

Mrs. G. Minielly of King St. Church and second vice-president of Belleville Presbyterial said: "We shall look for you at the Presbyterial in Picton." She suggested that all bring their problems along.

Mrs. L. Young, on behalf of all present, moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Rush for opening her home.

The hostess, assisted by other members, served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

FROZEN SPACEMAN

So you think it's cold today? Well, Tom Tomlinson, research engineer at Republic Aviation Corporation, would call you "chicken." He's shown in a 65-degree-below zero "cold box" giving an operating test to a new, simplified pilot's ejection seat. The frosted dummy represents the average pilot's weight. The seat is checked at wide range of temperature and climatic conditions to make sure it will operate at all altitudes in every part of the world. Developed for F 84F Thunderstreak fighter bombers, the seat automatically hugs the pilot protectively close, shoots him from the plane and opens the safety belt for parachute drop.—Central Press Canadian.

NGSTON TONIGHT

The Memos trek to Kingston tonight to join battle with their perennial foemen from Roddenville—and if early-season dope lives to form the Memos should tuck this one away. The Goodyears hold a won three, lost two, tied one record with the Memos, but both their losses came on Community Centre ice. The Bouchermen have yet to win one here from the Limestone laddybucks, albeit the last time they met the teams battled to a three-all overtime tie.

Tonight's game is another battle between the clubs in the ee-saw fight for third place. Kingston failed to gain two mportant points last night when they blew a two-goal first eriod lead to bow before the Cornwall Colts 6-4, while the uckless Petes were absorbing a 6-0 defeat at the hands of the Clinton Comets in the American arena.

The Colts jumped ahead of the Whitby Dunlops and now lead the pack with 50 points with the Tiremen second with 48. Kingston is in third with 45 and our side fourth with 44. Brockville is in fifth with 35 but the Clinton Comets are breathing down their necks with 33 after last night's victory. The Petes are practically out of the playoff running with 19 points and eight games to play.

HAT A SHOW!

The Trenton Community Centre committee got their heads ogether over the week-end and came up with plans for a boxing show that out-glamors and out-colors anything held in the RCAF South Trenton sports hangar.

The show is scheduled for Monday, February 28, starting 8.30 and it has more attractions than a Big Top side show. Eight top-notch bouts are scheduled with a feature being the grudge battle between Belleville's Eddie Schamerhorn and Trenton's Roy Deshane. The main bout will see welters Don Wallace, of Barrie, and Ernie Durelle, RCA, Picton.

But get an eyeful of this:

The special feature is the Battle of the Mayors. Mayor ohn Both, of Belleville, and Mayor Ross Burtt, Trenton, will ox in a special match for the honor of becoming the chief magistrate of the mythical "Quinte City" if and when it materializes.

As an added attraction, if she consents, Mayor Charlotte Whitton, Ottawa, who it is claimed has Hastings County blood in her veins, has been invited to act as referee. Mayor H. J. McFarland has also been invited to take part as have other district chief magistrates. The mayors will use 12-ounce gloves, dirty looks, with no holds barred. It will be a fight to the finish.

The entire proceeds of the boxing card, which is being held nder the match-making supervision of well-known Sergeant ub Smith, will go to Trenton's Community Centre Campaign uilding Fund. Tickets are now on sale.

ITE A GUY-

Now that Jean Beliveau is living up to the terrific drum beating given him by hockey writers, especially down Quebec way, the tom-toms are again beginning to murmur, this time with an "I-Told-You-So" rhythm in the rataplan.

The modest Quebecker who caused something of a senation with five goals in two games in his three-game debut ith Les Canadiens is more than living up to the bally-hoo iven him prior to his National Hockey League baptism of fire.

That he is destined for stardom goes without saying. The big, handsome youngster is getting the necessary confidence in himself, a trait that was somewhat lacking last year. Now he is rounding into form and there isn't any doubt he is headed for a spot in the major hockey sun.

Bert Olmstead, probably one of the best play-making wings in the loops, says he never saw a player get a shot away faster than Beliveau. "I gave him a rink-wide pass in a recent game against the Leafs," Olmstead said, "and then looked directly at the net. The puck was in it, the cords were still bulging and Harry Lumley was just making his move, too late." The shot was executed with a sharp slapshot, with just a flick of Beliveau's powerful wrists.

Vince Lunny writing in the Hockey News said:

"Le Gros Bill's athletic ability is apparently a gift from the athletic gods. Certainly it wasn't inherited because his father, Arthur Beliveau never played any organized sport and his mother, the former Laurette Dube, had no interest in athletic pursuits. She was too busy raising her family of seven, two daughters and five sons. Jean is the eldest.

"Only last week Buzzie Bavasi, vice-president of the rooklyn Dodgers, was talking to Muzz Patrick, coach of the ew York Rangers, and giving him the needle—but good!

"You think big Jean is terrific," said Bavasi.. "Well, he has four younger brothers who are twice as good. And I'll bet they'll all play for Canadiens.'

With that remark Patrick swooned.

Rocket Scores Four Sunday With Beliveau Firing Winner; Bruins Slip Eight by Sawchuk

By RUSSELL ELMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Disaster struck Terry Sawchuk on Boston ice Saturday night.

The Detroit goalie, three times a National League all-star and twice a Vezina Trophy winner, let eight goals slip by him for the second-worst performance of his NHL career as the Red Wings took an 8-4 lacing from the fourth-place Boston Bruins.

The temporary nature of the collapse was established the following night as Sawchuk kicked out 22 drives in holding the Bruins to a 2-2 tie, But Saturday's nightmare cost Terry valuable ground in his annual battle with Toronto's Harry Lumley for the Vezina award, property of the stingiest netminder in the league, which Lumley took from him last season.

Lumley, who has set the pace for months, went into the weekend with a bare one-goal edge over the 25-year-old Winnipeg native and emerged with a generous seven-goal lead.

FIVE-POINT LEAD

Paced by their big three—Maurice (Rocket) Richard, Jean Beliveau and Bernie (Boom - Boom) Geoffrion — Montreal Canadiens downed New York Rangers 3-1 in Montreal Saturday night and 7-3 in Madison Square Garden Sunday. The double victory stretched their lead to five points.

In another home - and - home doubleheader Toronto Maple Leafs tightened their hold on third place, taking three points of a possible four from Chicago Black Hawks. The teams tied 2-2 in Toronto Saturday night but the last-place Hawks lost 4-2 in Chicago Sunday.

In Detroit's Saturday night game Leo Labine (2), Lorne Ferguson (2), Don McKenney, Real Chevrefils, Cal Gardner and Leo Boivin were the Boston marksmen. Ted Lindsay, Vic Stasiuk, Bill Dineen and Tony Leswick notched the four Red Wing counters.

In Sunday's game, Boston's Don McKenney got the tying goal with 64 seconds to go when his 75-foot floater took a crazy bounce at the goaltender's feet. Leo Labine had scored earlier in the period after Marcel Bonin and Lindsay had given Detroit a 2-0 lead in the opening frame.

Richard scored four goals against the Rangers Sunday night. Beliveau got the winning goal Saturday and Geoffrion scored Sunday.

Doug Harvey and Bert Olmstead also kept in the scoring books Saturday while Danny Lewicki got the sole counter for the Rangers.

Calum MacKay notched his sixth and seventh goals of the season in Sunday's game. Lewicki, Pete Conacher and Andy Bathgate scored the New York goals.

Sid Smith netted two goals Sunday in Toronto's 4-2 victory over the Hawks. Eric Nesterenko and Brian Cullen were the other Toronto scorers, with Bill Mosienko and Larry Wilson tallying for the Hawks.

Saturday night Allan Stanley and Mosienko netted while the Leafs wee short-handed to give the Hawks the lead twice in the game. But Cullen, just up from the Pittsburgh Hornets, scored his first NHL goal and Tod Sloan got the final equalizer.

Indians Move Into Top Spot With Hornets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Springfield Indians have taken rapid strides toward capturing their first American Hockey League championship since 1942.

Springfield, which re-entered the league last season after a 13-year absence, moved into a deadlock for first place with Pittsburgh Hornets Sunday night by defeating Hershey Bears 6-5 in overtime.

Meanwhile, Hornets took a 4-1 beating by Buffalo Bisons and Cleveland Barons scored their sixth straight league victory by blanking the lowly Providence Reds 2-0.

Springfield and Pittsburgh have 52 points each while Bisons and Barons are tied for third place with 47 points apiece.

'Blue Butterfly' Noses Clementine

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Alberta Ranches' Blue Butterfly, Irish-bred six-year-old mare with Johnny Longden in the saddle, beat out heavily favored Miz Clementine by less than a head to win the $56,500 Santa Margarita Handicap Saturday.

The Murcain Stable's Jean's Joe won the $29,350 San Felipe Handicap.

In both races, Calumet farm entries were favored but both lost, Miz Clementine finishing second, and Trentonian getting in third against a field of three-year-olds in the San Felipe.

Blue Butterfly caught Miz Clementine in the stretch. The Calumet filly came on again, but the Canadian-owned horse was not to be denied and won out in the thrilling race. Tessa was third.

European Professional Boxing Suffers from Heavy Taxation

By STERLING SLAPPEY

LONDON (AP) — Professional boxing in Europe is a sick sport. It suffers from paralyzing taxation and a shortage of talent.

European boxing is seldom charged with being racket-ridden and operated by hoodlums, and that is one of the few bright spots.

Besides high taxes and low talent, there is an acute shortage of arenas because of war bombings and an emphasis on rebuilding of houses. There are claims that boxing is one of the "blood" sports and should go the way of the gladiator.

The number of professional bouts in Europe during an average week in the last year is estimated to be about half the number staged weekly during the 1920s or 1930s.

In Sweden, only seven professionals remain.

STILL SOME STANDBYS

When fights are held in Europe these days they almost invariably are in Goteburg, Sweden; Rotterdam, Holland; Barcelona, Spain; Liege, Belgium; London, Manchester, Nottingham, Liverpool and Birmingham, England; Belfast, Northern Ireland; Rome and Milan, Italy; Paris, Marseilles, Lille and Bordeaux, France and Berlin, Hamburg and Dortmund, Germany.

Twenty years ago such a listing would run to 100 to 150 cities. In England alone fights have all but stopped in at least 20 towns. Cologne, Germany and Madrid once were hot boxing cities. Today, the fight cards there are almost unheard of and almost invariably they are money losers.

The state of pro boxing is healthiest in Germany. Hans Laufersweiler, president of the Federation of German Professional boxing, said that Germany with two European titleholders is well off. Heinz Neuhaus is the heavyweight champion and Gerhard Hecht the light-heavy champion.

London promoter Jack Solomons is the biggest operator in European boxing and when he has trouble finding fighters, arenas, purse money and enough ticket sales to ensure a profit after tax, then the sport is truly in a bad way.

End of Gridiron War in Sight, Argos to Keep Four Players

MONTREAL (CP)—The Big Four Football League set its sights on an end to the player war with the National Football League today after repairing a rift in its own ranks.

It took all the diplomacy the delegates could muster Saturday before a truce was reached with the Toronto Argonauts, who had planned to build their 1955 team around players raided from the NFL. The Argos were allowed to keep four of the seven players they say they have under contract.

The session was a continuation of the league's annual meeting. At the first meeting, the teams voted 3-1, with Toronto opposed, to stop hiring players under contract or option to NFL teams.

LITTLE HELP

Toronto asked the league governors for recommendations on the problem but they tossed the question back to the owners without providing much help.

The Argos said at Saturday's session that they signed 10 NFL players but three were released later at the players' request. The seven they now have are signed to no-release contracts.

The league agreed to let Argos have their choice of four of the seven players. If the other three wish to play in Canada, their contracts will be taken over by the league. Ottawa Rough Riders, last-place team last season, will then be allowed to take two of the players if they want them. Hamilton Tiger-Cats will have the right to claim the third.

Montreal Alouettes said they weren't interested in the players, because of the no-release clause.

"TEAR UP" CLAUSE

The league also said that an earlier Toronto offer that any signed players may "tear up their contracts if they wish" still stands.

The Argos still did not release the names of four of the men they have under contract. They announced earlier that Gil Mains of Detroit Lions and Billy Shipp and Bill Albright of New York Giants were three of their selections.

League officials said the meeting cleared the way for further talks with NFL commissioner Bert Bell on drawing up a no-raiding agreement between the two leagues. The delegates also decided to approach the western league with a view to presenting a united front in a meeting with Bell.

The Big Four delegates would not speculate on how the decision to honor the seven Toronto contracts would affect negotiations with Bell. However, the escape clause, under which the players can tear up their contracts, would make it possible for NFL teams to re-open negotiations with the seven.

Teeps in Top Spot Tie With Bilts, Cullen Gets Three in 6-3 Victory

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For nine of 20 minutes Barry Cullen sat in the penalty box. In the other 1 minutes he made up for lost time by scoring three goals.

Cullen, younger brother of big-league rookie Brian Cullen, was the propelling force behind St. Catharines TeePees Saturday night as they walloped the fourth-place Toronto Marlboros 6-3 in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game.

The TeePee rightwinger ran wild before some 2,000-odd hometown fans after he was given an elbowing penalty early in the first session.

He fired his first goal past netminder Johnny Albani at 9:02, added the second at 10:07 and the third at 17:29. A few seconds later he was banished with a highsticking minor and a fighting major but the damage was done as far as Marlboros were concerned. They never fully recovered after that.

The win moved TeePees into a first-place tie with Guelph Biltmores.

In the only other game Saturday, the sixth-place Galt Black Hawks defeated the seventh-spot Barrie Flyers 6-2 at Galt.

MISSED BIG CHANCE

Biltmores lost a chance to take over sole possession of first place Sunday when they went down to a 1-0 defeat at the hands of Marlboros at Toronto. In the first game of the Toronto doubleheader, St. Michael's Majors defeated Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks 5-3.

At St. Catharines, Hank Ciesla, Cec Hoekstra and Alex Viskelis scored the other TeePee goals. Glen Cressman, Gary Aldcorn and Bill Harris tallied for Marlboros.

At Galt, Dick Cherry, Floyd Smith, Gus Ronson, John Chasczewski, George Ferguson and Don Beckett shared the Galt scoring with a goal each. Jack Kane and Hugh Ball scored for Flyers.

Dick Duff and Bill Colvin each scored two goals and an assist to lead Majors to their 5-3 win over the last-place Canucks before 6,565 fans. Ken Gribbons fired the other one. Defenceman Bob Duncan, Irv Spencer and Howard Young were the Kitchener snipers.

Billy Harris scored the only goal as Marlboros shut out Bilts.

One game is scheduled for tonight—St. Catharines at Hamilton.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—The ideal player trade is, of course, a swap which promises great benefit to both ball clubs. In our experience we have seen only one major transaction which actually achieved that goal.

The players concerned were Allie Reynolds, the superlative right-handed pitcher who retired the other day, and Joe Gordon, who belongs in any list of great fielding second basemen. It took two club presidents of rare imagination and gambling instinct to swing such a trade, namely Larry MacPhail and Bill Veeck Jr.

Larry, then head of New York Yankees, and Bill, Cleveland Indians' boy wonder, got to gabbing in a box at the 1946 world series between Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Cardinals. Each had his troubles, the Yanks having pulled up third in the American League race just ended and the Indians sixth.

NEEDED SECOND-SACKER

Veeck felt that if he had a second baseman to team up with his crack shortstop and manager, Lou Boudreau, he might get somewhere. He offered MacPhail the pick of his pitching staff—barring Bobby Feller—for Gordon, who had shone in five world series for the Yanks. The Indians' staff included, besides Reynolds, such attractive bait as Bob Lemon, Steve Gromek and Red Embree.

MacPhail called Joe DiMaggio over to his box and asked the Clipper to make the choice for him. Joe unhesitatingly picked Reynolds, though the Chief had posted only an 11-15 record that season. Though he was surprised, Larry went along, and right after the series ended, on Oct. 11, the deal was announced.

Reynolds the very next year rang up 18 victories to spark the Yanks to a pennant and scored the first of his seven world series triumphs at the expense of the Dodgers. The Chief was on his way.

INDIANS CLIMB, TOO

Gordon and Boudreau, meantime, spent the '47 campaign getting acquainted, and the Indians pulled up two notches to fourth in the final standing. The following year, in a magnificent two-man exhibition of hitting and fielding, they propelled Cleveland to its first flag in 28 years and downed Boston Braves in a six-game world series.

Just to refresh the memory, Boudreau hit .355 that year, with 18 home runs and 106 runs batted in. Gordon's average was only .280, but he whomped 32 homers and 27 doubles and knocked across 124 runs. It is possible the game never has seen a greater fielding exhibition than they put on around second base.

In two years, the deal had made world champions of both clubs involved. It was the last really big season for both Boudreau and Gordon. The Indians dropped back to third in 1949 while Reynolds proceeded to help pitch the Yankees to five straight world championships.

TAKES EASY WIN

MONTREAL (CP) — Geoffrey Atkins of London, Eng., walloped Clarence Pell of New York 15-1, 15-6, 15-9 Sunday to win the Canadian rackets championship.

Pell was no match for Atkins, who lost only one set in sweeping to the title. The English star gained the finals with an 18-17, 15-2, 10-15, 15-2 victory over Fred DeRham of New York Saturday.

Nielsen Smashes Indoor Mile Record, Santee Bumps and Finishes Second

NEW YORK (AP)—Gunnar Nielsen of Denmark smashed the week-old world indoor mile record Saturday night by racing the distance in 4:03.6 to win the Wanamaker mile at the Millrose Games.

Wes Santee, who beat Nielsen in setting the old record of 4:03.8 a week earlier, was awarded second place after he and Fred Dwyer finished in a wrestling match.

A capacity crowd of 16,000 in Madison Square Garden saw Nielsen hang on for 10 laps, then make his bid to win by 10 yards.

Dwyer tried to pass Santee on the inside of the track at the last turn but was bumped off. He set out in pursuit of Santee and three yards from the tape Dwyer lunged at the Kansas University runner, grabbed him around the waist and almost flung him toward the boxes on the side of the track.

Dwyer struggled across the finish line second but was disqualified and Santee awarded second place.

Discussing the wrestling incident, Santee said:

"If I cut Dwyer off, I didn't realize it. It was an unfortunate incident. I hope it was just an accident. He tried to come between me and the pole. I don't think he had enough room to come through at that point."

The officials backed him up and disqualified Dwyer.

Said Dwyer:

"There was unnecessary jostling. When Nielsen passed Santee, Wes tried to force him wide. I saw the opening and tried to get in. But then Wes came back and I went off the track. I don't think I should have been disqualified."

New Brunswick Rink Outstanding In Quebec International Bonspiel

QUEBEC (CP) — Huntley Ferguson's Bathurst, N.B., rink skipped by 35-year-old Charlie McArdle, emerged as the outstanding outfit in the 42nd Quebec International bonspiel, winning one of the bonspiel's two top trophies and a main event during the weekend.

Ferguson's rink took the Grand Aggregate Trophy by default Saturday when the only two rinks with a chance to match Bathurst's seven wins and one loss were defeated. Earlier, McArdle led the rink to an 11-6 victory over Mr. Justice D. P. J. Kelly, Toronto Granite, to win the Omega Trophy.

The bonspiel's championship went to Gaston Amyot, Quebec Jacques Cartier, who beat Gavin MacWilliam's Quebec Winter Club rink 12-9.

Nazaire Lemelin, Quebec Etchemin Curling Club, beat Sam Gunn of Brantford, 10-4 to win the Chateau Frontenac Trophy, and later won the Province of Quebec brooches in beating I. V. Vineberg of Ottawa West 14-5.

MAIN EVENTS

The Francois Jobin Trophy went to Robert Archibald, Bathurst, who whipped Summers (Sam) Wilson of Sudbury, 13-7.

The Chateau Frontenac, Omega and Francois Jobin Trophies are the bonspiel's main events and quarter-finalists in the three enter the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy playoffs.

The Grand Aggregate goes to the rink winning most games in the three main events and in the playoffs.

Wilson and Montreal's Ira C. McEwen both had a chance to tie Ferguson for the Grand Aggregate, but lost them when they were knocked off in the semi-finals of the Lieutenant-Governor's playoff by Amyot and MacWilliam respectively.

Dr. C. G. (Ted) Teskey of Kitchener, whose rink posted an eight-point end in an earlier game, went on to win the Holt-Renfrew Trophy with a 14-7 win over Pierre Amyot Quebec Jacques Cartier.

JUDGE COOPER DEFEATED

Rene Giguere, Quebec Curling Club, beat Judge Jim Cooper of Sudbury, 12-9 to take the Val d'Or Golden Valley Trophy and Robert Monast, Quebec Winter, won the Birks Trophy 13-4 from Bob Fall of Sydney, N.S.

Carl Nurmi, Sudbury, won the Ronson Tam O'Shanter 8-6 from L. C. Phippen of Sarnia, and Ed Robertson, Ottawa West, won the International Goodwill Shield beating Detroit's Percy J. Power 10-8.

The Royal Bank-Centenary Trophy went to Sudbury's George C. Tate who beat Alden Clark of Fredericton, N.B., 12-11.

Armand Bourcier, East Malartic, Que., beat Dr. O. J. Stahl, of St. Catharines, 20-9, for the Quebec International Medals.

Sweden Wins Skating Crown From Russia

FALUN, Sweden (AP) — Tall Sigge Ericsson of Sweden Sunday captured the European speed skating championship, breaking the Russian stranglehold and giving Sweden its first skating title in eight years.

Ericsson, skating over a rough snow-covered ice in perfect form won the 10,000-metre race in 18 minutes, 32.8 seconds.

Earlier Sunday, he finished in third place in the 1,500-metre race and in the two heats Saturday, the 24-year-old Swede won the 5,000-metre race and finished 19th in the 500-metre dash.

The winner was determined on the results of all four events. Ericsson wound up with 295.960 points to finish in front of Russia's Oleg Goncharenko with 207.053.

Dmitri Sakunckko of Russia was third followed by Kees Broekman of Holland and Hrear Elvenes of Norway.

Varsity Trims Gaels 71-63

TORONTO (CP)—University of Toronto Blues defeated Queen's University Golden Gaels 71-63 in a senior intercollegiate basketball game here Saturday night.

It was the third win in as many league games for Toronto this year. Queen's now has a 3-3 won and lost record. Halftime score was 36-25 for the Blues.

In the final 10 minutes the Golden Gaels came within two points of tying the score, but were unable to keep up the pressure.

High scorer of the game was Paul Fedor of Queen's with nine field goals and four foul shots for 22 points. Jay McMahon scored 13 points for the Gaels.

Queen's was awarded a field goal which was not credited to any player when a Varsity player touched the netting on the Varsity basket while the ball was on the basket rim.

In an intermediate contest Toronto nosed out Queen's 79-78. This game was close throughout with Queen's scoring six points in the final 40 seconds. Don McCray was Queen's high point getter, scoring 21 points.

Bolton Defeats Wolves 6-1

LONDON (CP)—Bolton won a surprisingly lopsided 6-1 victory over Wolverhampton Saturday and knocked the Wolves out of first place in the English League soccer first division.

Ray Parry, 19-year-old former schoolboy international, scored three goals in the crushing upset.

Sunderland, which took over first place, had a difficult time as well, squeezing out a scoreless tie with lowly Blackpool.

There were several other high-scoring games, including Charlton's 6-1 win over Aston Villa in another first division game.

Tommy Briggs of Blackburn in the second division was the big scorer of the day, the centre forward netting seven of his team's eight goals in its 8-3 rout of Bristol.

The third, fourth and fifth teams in the first division, all within two points of leading Sunderland, were victorious. Manchester United had a 3-1 away win over Huddersfield. Charlton won and Manchester City defeated Cardiff 4-1.

Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Six of the National Hockey League's seven leading scorers added to their totals during the weekend with Montreal Canadiens taking a stranglehold on the five top spots.

Jean Beliveau became the season's first sniper to reach 30 goals as he notched the first marker against New York Saturday. He assisted on single goals both weekend nights to bring his point total to 59 on 30 goals and 29 assists.

Maurice Richard exploded for four goals and an assist against New York Sunday and became the loop's most prolific scorer. He is in second place with 56 points on 32 goals and 24 assists.

Teammate Bernie Geoffrion could only fashion a single goal and slipped to third place with 54 points. He scored 29 goals and set up 25 others.

Montreal's Bert Olmstead, the league's leading playmaker, had a fat weekend, picking up four assists and one goal. His 47 points are made up of eight goals and 39 assists.

Ken Mosdell is the fifth Montreal player in hockey's big seven. He has 46 points on 20 goals and 26 assists.

Sid Smith of Toronto scored two goals and moved into sixth place with 44 points on 28 goals and 16 assists.

Detroit's Gord Howe went pointless during the weekend and dropped to last place with 43 points.

Terry Sawchuk, Detroit, has 10 shutouts and leads the loop in that department.

Canadians Meet Russians On Final Day

KREFELD, Germany (AP)—Russia and Canada will meet on the final day of the world hockey championships here next month, just as they did in Sweden last year when the Russians defeated the Canadians to win the title.

The International Ice Hockey Federation Sunday announced the schedule for the championships to be played in four cities of West Germany from Feb. 26 through March 6.

Canada, represented by Penticton Vs, Allan Cup champions, opens against the United States at Dortmund Feb. 25. Russia and the U. S. will meet March 2.

Russia will defend its title against eight teams: Canada, the U.S., Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Finland, Switzerland, Poland and West Germany.

Teams will get two points for a win and one for a draw. The team with the largest number of points wins the title. In case of a point tie a playoff will be held.

Aces, Royals Close Gap

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Shawinigan Falls Cataracts still have a five-point cushion at the top of the Quebec Hockey League following Sunday's activities but Quebec Aces and Montreal Royals are closing the gap.

Shawinigan dropped a 3-0 decision to the Aces while the Royals defeated Chicoutimi Sagueneens 3-2.

The Cataracts have 55 points, five more than Quebec and seven more than Montreal. The Sagueneens are in fourth place with 39 points while Valleyfield Braves, idle Sunday, round out the five-team league with 35.

Shawinigan has played 43 games and Montreal, 48. The other clubs have played 44.

SKATING TEAM LEAVES

TORONTO (CP)—A team of nine top Canadian skaters left during the weekend to compete in the world figure skating championships in Vienna, Austria.

The Canadians were rated favorites to win a big share of the events this year with such top-ranking contenders as Frances Dafoe and Norris Bowden, Canadian pairs champions who won last year's world title, and Carol Jane Pachl of Toronto, former Czechoslovakian champion, and this year's senior Canadian women's champion.

Accompanying the team were Donald Gilchrist, Canadian judge, and coaches Sheldon Galbraith and Marcus Nikkanen.

SIGNS WITH GIANTS

NEW YORK (AP)—Johnny Antonelli, New York Giants' star left-hander, sent in his signed contract Saturday, bringing to 31 the number of contented players on the champions' roster.

Antonelli, who led the National League in earned run averages and won-lost percentages, defeated Cleveland in the second game of the world series and relieved in the final game. He was "very happy, very satisfied" with the contract, a club spokesman said. Although the terms were not announced the lefthander's pay was estimated at more than $20,000.

FAN HITS LINDSAY

BOSTON (AP)—Ted Lindsay of Detroit Red Wings, back in National Hockey League action for the first time after a 10-day suspension for punching a fan in Toronto, was punched himself by a Boston fan Saturday night.

Police arrested James T. Mulloy, 24, of Brookline, charged with assault and battery on the Detroit winger.

Lindsay was leaving the ice at the conclusion of the second period of the Bruins-Detroit game when a fan leaned over a barrier and swung at him. Police quoted Mulloy as saying he just wanted to give Lindsay a friendly pat on the head.

BETTERS OWN RECORD

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (Reuters)—Douglas W. Connor, a Montreal businessman won the coveted Curzon Cup on the cresta run here Saturday and twice bettered his own world record for the 1,000 metre toboggan course.

He clocked 44.9 seconds for his fifth descent and made his sixth and last run in the astonishing time of 44.6 seconds. Only eight days ago, Connor lowered the record, which had stood since before the war, from 45.1 to 45.0 seconds.

Connor won the trophy with an aggregate time of 271.4 seconds.

Mercs Lose Chance to Narrow Gap, Split Week-End Games With Bulldogs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Owen Sound Mercurys lost a chance to narrow the gap in the leadership race of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A when they split two weekend games with Windsor Bulldogs.

A 5-2 win in Windsor Saturday was cancelled out by a 3-2 defeat Sunday. The exchange left Mercs clinging to second place, one point ahead of Bulldogs and six points behind the leading Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

Dutchies downed the fifth-place Chatham Maroons 7-3 in Kitchener Saturday. Stratford Indians stayed in fourth place, three points back of Windsor, whipping the failing Niagara Falls Cataracts 5-2 in Stratford.

In marking up their 24th win of the season Saturday, Owen Sound spread their five goals evenly. Buck Forslund, Elmer Skov, Ralph Hosking, Bill McComb and Vern Gardiner each counted singles. Tom Burlington and Roy Leckie contributed to Owen Sound's losing cause Sunday.

GEE GOT WINNER

In their hometown encounter, Bob Brown fired the deadlocking goal at 18:05 and George Gee netted the winner at 19:10. Murray Wilkie got the other Bulldog marker.

George Haidy and Gee tallied for Windsor in the 5-2 defeat Saturday.

Ken Laufman, Gerry Theberge, Charlie Brooker, George Scholes, Clare Martin, Joe Schertzl and Jim McKenzie scored once each for Kitchener-Waterloo Saturday. Frank Bonello, Jim Connelly and Eddie Busch counted for Chatham.

Tommy Walker, with two, Bobby Mader, Dinny Flanagan and Lou Bendo were the marksmen in the Stratford win. Danny Nixon and Lloyd Ferguson scored for the losing Cataracts.

Teran TKO's Johnny Ortega

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Keeny Teran, 114¼, San Jose, Calif., scored a technical knockout victory over Johnny Ortega, 108, of Oakland, in the 10th round of a scheduled 12-round American flyweight title match Saturday night.

Referee Abe Roth stopped the fight when Ortega went down a few seconds after taking a hard right to the head.

Ortega was down for the six-count in the seventh round.

Midland Star Wins Ski Titles

MIDLAND (CP)—Louis Moser, 24-year-old Austria-born member of the Midland Ski Club, won the southern Ontario ski-jumping championships Sunday with two jumps of more than 105 feet on each.

Moser, who came from Europe six months ago, jumped 107 feet in his first try and 106 on his second. The first jump equalled the local club record.

Longest leap of the day was by Arne Skeeteberg, also of the Midland Ski Club, who cleared 109 feet on his practice try.

Top junior jumper was Dennis Hale of Peterborough.

Cross country senior honors went to Jim Georgas of Owen Sound. Georgas also copped the senior Nordic combined title. Don McLeod of Orillia won the junior nordic.

Bill Georgas gave the big crowd its biggest thrill when his right ski came off just as he was about to take off. The veteran Owen Sound skier managed to land safely on one foot.

Littler Wins Phoenix Open

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gene Littler shot a one-over-par 71 Sunday to win the $15,000 Phoenix Open with a 72-hole score of 275.

He collected the $2,400 top money to go with the $5,000 he won last month as first prize in the Los Angeles Open.

The 24-year-old national amateur champion of 1953 started Sunday's final 18 holes deadlocked at 204 with Jay Hebert and Johnny Palmer.

Hebert folded during the first nine.

Johnny was even with Littler through the 11th hole but couldn't maintain the pace, finishing with 72 in a second place tie with Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., at 276. Maxwell shot a last round 67.

Hebert finished well back with a 75—279.

Palmer and Maxwell each collected $1,600 for their second-place tie.

Few Provinces Satisfied With Quantity, Quality of Staffs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada has more teachers than ever before but scarcely a province is satisfied with the quantity or quality of its school staffs.

The tremendous increase in student population since the end of the war has taxed the teacher pool to the limit and although there has been a more than proportionate rise in the number of teachers, qualifications in many cases are below provincial objectives.

Enrolment figures for provincially-controlled schools rose by approximately 500,000 to 2,645,249 between 1945 and 1953, according to Canadian Education Association figures. Dominion bureau of statistics figures on teachers for the same period show an increase of nearly 23,000 to 97,763.

TEACHER PROBLEM

This is an impressive rise of more than 30 per cent but to achieve it education authorities in many provinces have had to accept teachers with training qualifications considerably below the standards they would like to see met.

The fact that several provinces have raised their standards since the war, to keep pace with modernization of educational methods, is one reason for the dearth of fully-qualified teachers.

Another reason seems to be that there are richer fields than the teaching profession for university graduates, even though teachers' salaries have more than doubled in the last 10 years and trebled in the last 15.

The average salary in provincially-controlled schools other than in Quebec, which does not report to the bureau of statistics, was $2,510 in 1953. This compared with $1,057 in 1943 and $851 in 1938.

Nova Scotia is an example of a province where numerically teachers are keeping up with the growing student population but authorities there say they could still use 1,000 fully trained men and women.

JUDGE'S FINDING

Judge Vincent J. Pottier, who conducted a royal commission inquiry into education finance, was even more outspoken. He said in a recent address that 44 per cent of Nova Scotia's 5,025 teachers don't possess qualifications generally regarded as minimum.

Salaries, which Judge Pottier said are the third lowest in Canada, have fallen behind since 1948-49.

Teaching standards in the province were at their highest in 1938-39.

The province is doing everything possible to have teachers take advantage of the fullest educational training and has started a new teacher training program in conjunction with the universitties the effect of which should be felt next fall.

The situation seems to be less acute in other Maritime provinces. Newfoundland reports a teacher shortage only in some outport schools while Prince Edward Island says 100 qualified teachers are needed.

N.B. STANDARD RAISED

More teachers are needed in New Brunswick and steps are being taken to obtain them. There were 135 graduates from the Teachers' College at Fredericton in 1953 and enrolment this year is 395. Professional standards have been raised in the last few years and more teachers are studying for a college degree.

Quebec reports teachers are needed in English and French schools. The salary level in cities may go up to slightly more than $5,000 but drops to as low as $1,200 in some rural districts.

A partial solution to the teacher shortage are travelling specialists. These teachers, trained in subjects such as household science, agriculture, music and manual training, travel through the province providing once-a-week courses not otherwise available in rural areas.

Ontario obtained 2,400 new teachers in the current school year and 1,600 more students are training for the profession than there were last year but there still is a shortage.

Education Minister Dunlop said it was necessary to issue some "letters of permission" allowing unqualified teachers to take positions in elementary schools. There is a shortage, too, in secondary schools of university graduates with special qualifications in commercial subjects, home economics, science, agriculture and girls' physical education.

ONTARIO SALARIES

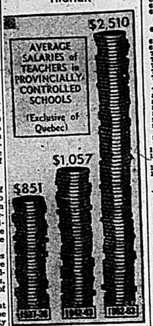
Starting salaries for public school teachers in Ontario fluctuate from $2,000 to $2,400, depending on location. A minimum of $3,000 was set for high school teachers but this has been lowered in some cases.

Professional standards have been raised since the war.

Manitoba is unique in reporting no teacher shortage. Salaries in Winnipeg have kept pace with those in other large Canadian cities with a maximum of $3,250 for a teacher with the lowest qualification and $5,650 for one with a doctor's degree or the equivalent.

Saskatchewan still needs 255 teachers but this is a sharp drop from the 500 shortage last year and 630 the year before. Salaries are catching up with those in British Columbia and Alberta, to which provinces Saskatchewan previously lost many teachers.

TEACHERS' SALARIES HIGHER



Salaries for teachers in Canada's provincially - controlled schools (exclusive of Quebec) have nearly tripled in 15 years, rising from an average of $851 in 1937-38 to $2,510 in 1952-53. Quebec does not report to the bureau of statistics on whose figures the above drawing is based. The tremendous increase in student population since the end of the Second World War has taxed the teacher pool to the limit, and although there has been a more than proportionate rise in the number of teachers, qualifications in many cases are below provincial objectives. (CP Photo).

The education standard sought is at least two years of professional training but at present the province grants an interim standard certificate after one year of training.

SHORTAGE IN ALBERTA

Alberta reports a shortage of 100 teachers. Salaries have been somewhat lower than in other occupations since the war but the average rose from $1,290 in 1944 to $2,937 in 1953.

After the war the province adopted a minimum training period of two years but because of the teacher shortage certification is being granted after one year.

The shortage in British Columbia has resulted in some teachers being allowed to teach grades for which they are not properly qualified. The B.C. salary scale is said to be the highest in the Dominion.

Teaching standards have been unchanged since the war but teachers are attending summer schools in unprecedented numbers. This applied particularly to teachers hardling grades for which they lack proper qualifications.

Tangier Thrives On Hard Times In Other Places

By PRESTON GROVER

TANGIER, International Zone, Morocco (AP)—If the good times keep up elsewhere, this town is going to be ruined for sure.

It has had a depression for the last two years that is worrying the local population of Frenchmen, Spaniards, Italians, Americans and Britons, not to mention tens of thousands of Moors.

It is a fact that the better it gets elsewhere, the worse it gets here. Tangier thrives on hard times—in other places.

Beginning right after the war, new capital flocked here by millions of dollars. It was a safe place to hide out the economic uncertainties.

Why Tangier? Simply because there is no other place in the world with so little official curiosity about what you do with your money, how much you have, where you get it or where you send it.

Maybe even more important, there are almost no taxes.

It is a wonderful place for people who quietly want to retire on a smallish income. You can live here for a third to a half of what it costs in Paris. But the times are tough here for people who used to make a lot of money fast.

The smart money which rushed here in troubled times has largely run away again. A few fugitive fortunes got stuck, of course. They built apartment houses and business blocks which haven't a chance of being profitable unless there is a collapse elsewhere.

Officials estimated that there are 3,000 empty apartments in this town where the total population is about 125,000. Moreoever, these 3,000 were designed for rich Europeans, not poor Arabs. Huge apartment houses rise up from among the surrounding small buildings—and there is only about one curtained window to a floor where there ought to be 20.

WIN CANADIAN TITLE

OTTAWA (CP)—Two rinks from Valleyfield, Que., Saturday won the Governor-General's Trophy, emblematic of the double rink, iron-curling championship of Canada.

The Montreal district champs split their two games with a pair of Ottawa Curling Clubs but won 23-20 on the round.

It was the first time in the 81-year history of the Governor-General's bonspiel that a Valleyfield rink has captured the event.

More than 500 persons packed the two galleries and circled the playing surfaces at the Ottawa Curling Club to watch the exciting championship play. The host club was trying for its 25th victory in the bonspiel.

Minor Hockey

The Belleville bantam, midget and juvenile "A" teams will probably meet Kingston in the first round of the Ontario Minor Hockey playdowns around the 21st of February, according to a recent release from OMHA executive, Doug Patterson of Stirling. This is not definite yet.

Other minor hockey playoff dates of this district find Picton at Gananoque on the ninth and back in Wellington on the 11th, in a midget "B" series. Trenton will meet either Port Hope, Bowmanville or Gananoque. No dates have been set in the "C" section of midget but Wellington will meet either Marmora or Stirling, while Campbellford is also in the semi-finals. Norwood ousted Hastings in the "D" section and will meet the winner of the Warkworth - Cooper series. That series is over but no results are in as yet.

Turning to juvenile, Coe Hill and Marmora are battling it out for the group "C" title. The first game was played on Saturday with the second fixture on Tuesday and a third is necessary in Bancroft on Thursday. Norwood and Warkworth meet in the "D" section with the first game taking place in Warkworth tonight and the return battle on Wednesday, February 9.

Bantam "C" teams are still in a tight group race with Havelock and Marmora in the semi-finals, while Campbellford and Stirling are fightign for a playdown spot.

'Social Outcast' Wins Handicap

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Social Outcast, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's 3-to-5 choice in a field of 13, closed with a burst of speed to win the $69,200 McLennan Handicap at Hialeah Park Saturday.

The big chestnut gelded son of Shut Out carried top weight of 123 pounds but he had all it took to wear down the leaders and win by a head over James Cox Brady's Artismo in a stirring finish.

Bruce S. Campbell's Ram O'War was third and Hasty House Farm's Sea O Erin took fourth money while Brookmeade Stable's Capeador, second choice at 4 to 1, finished fifth.

Social Outcast was 10th at the start and was still leading only three horses as they made the clubhouse turn. He wrested the lead from Artismo at the stretch and settled down for the long run to the wire.

Vivian Blaine Will Play Part in Show in Film

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Vivian Blaine is back in Hollywood for a role that had been mentioned for such dolls as Marilyn Morroe and Betty Grable.

The part is Miss Adelaide, the long-time fiancee of "Guys and Dolls," and many a top glamor girl was after it. "I never expected to get it," admits Vivian. "After all, the movies never pick actors who originated the part on Broadway."

But a strong-willed gent named Sam Goldwyn saw her in the show several times. When she was playing it in London, they appeared on a radio show together.

SHOW NEEDS VIVIAN

"I just saw 'Guys and Dolls' in New York," he told her. "It's not the same show without you, and I told that to Frank Loesser (the show's composer). If I ever do the picture, I won't make it without you."

At that time, most of the studios were bidding for the rights. Bill Goetz thought he had the deal sewed up, and a cast of Clark Gable, Bob Hope, Jane Russell and Betty Grable was mentioned. But Goldwyn made a $1,000,000 purchase and signed Marlon Brando, Frank Sinatra, Jean Simmons and Vivian for the leads.

Vivian couldn't be happier. She has worked long and hard to return to Hollywood and triumph. When I saw her, she was portraying another Damon Runyon character for the new Runyon series, which Screen Gems is making for a beer firm. Was she worried about being typed?

"Not at all," she said. "I like doing Runyon stories; it gives me a chance to do interesting characters. For too long I was the pretty girl in the pretty window waiting for the pretty boy."

WHO WAS SHE?

She referred to her years at 20th Century-Fox. That was when I last saw her, and she was known as the cherry blonde. She traded the dark red hairdo for her present blonde, and on her it looks better. How did she fare at Fox?

"I never knew who I was," she remarked. "First Alice Faye would get pregnant and I would be put in a part that was meant for her. I would have to sing the songs as she did, in a quiet voice that wasn't natural for me.

"Then Betty Grable would get pregnant and I'd do a picture that had been planned for her. I'd have to sing jazzier than I would for Alice. I played everything but myself."

After she left the studio, she decided she needed some more training for the big time. After three years she was ready, and along came "Guys and Dolls."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

In nearly every group is a bridge player who enjoys poor hands. It gives him a chance to keep mumbling in his beard: "I always get poor cards; I always get poor cards;" just loud enough to hear.

Fact is that any player is like to get a run of bad holdings in cards. We like to think of the law of average. But a player may not live long enough to get his share of the good ones.

Nevertheless, those who keep grumbling about it are adding fuel to their losses. Their very complaints make them a third opponent to their own partner for various reasons.

With a cast iron dispodition, partner may not be discouraged or even irked by this continuous reminder of inferior support. It may be the intrinsic effect that has a stronger bearing.

Revelation of a poor hand is aid and comfort to the opponents. It tells them where the dangerous cards may be. This enables them to concentrate on playing the grumbler's partner for feared cards.

Many a grumbler does not really have the many poor hands he claims. It may be that he is not able to recognize the value of his cards in combinations with what his partner is showing.

Also, grumblers feel so sorry for themselves they do the worst they can under the circumstances. Instead of holding down losses to the least they drag partner into bad contracts with bad bids.

Your partner in south opens with a heart when you have this north hand:

What is your first response? It should be a pass. Your opening partner assumes two tricks in your hand. If you make a responding bid he has a right to expect you to produce more than two tricks.

Making partner think you have more than you can deliver is very bad bridge. Especially if you are unlucky.

Sturgeon Grow To Great Size In Fraser River

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sturgeon grow big in the Fraser river.

Roy Tiechman's six-hour battle to land a 250-pound sturgeon prompted other fishermen to recall their experiences with the monster fish of the Fraser.

Tiechman, a Vancouver angler, "foul hooked" his sturgeon while fishing a few miles east of Hope, B.C., recently. He had broken his line earlier and replaced it with a heavy salmon line.

He was retrieving the line after a cast when the hooks snagged the big fish. When he realized he couldn't land it alone he tied his line to a tree and hiked a half-mile downstream to enlist the aid of a farmer with a truck.

But this catch was a baby compared to some in the past.

In 1938, a 55-pound sturgeon knocked a salmon fisherman into the river. Seven years later, an Indian lassooed a 714 - pounder which had been injured by a dredge.

A 20-foot 672-pounder was caught in 1945, and others of 794, 672, and 852 pounds have been caught in recent years.

The largest recorded catch made on a line was a 600-pound sturgeon last September. Henry Frost of Vancouver needed the help of a river tugboat to land that monster.

RESCUE INJURED BOY

TORONTO (CP) — Five men inched their way up an ice-covered embankment of the Humber river here Sunday carrying an injured 12-year-old boy to safety. Barry Ferguson suffered a broken right leg when the piece of cardboard he was using to slide down the embankment smashed into a tree. Three police constables and two residents helped carry Barry up the slope on a stretcher.

Your Horoscope

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — No forbidding obstacles in your path, just a tendency perhaps to become easily irritated, dissatisfied with results. Be on guard and you can have a profitable, interesting day.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)— You can't take things for granted these days. You will have to use ingenuity, your cleverness, and you have much, to manage affairs and put over endeavors in ship-shape manner.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)— Watch your innate dual tendencies. You are blessed with acute keenness, use rightly and profit by it. Some healthy entertainment between jobs and work will stimulate beneficially.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)— If alert, you can make today a romp to fine gains from worthy efforts. Though mild rays it can be a very fruitful, gratifying period. No worrying or forcing matters, go along smoothly.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — Coast in your capable manner and things will happen rightly IF you are "on the ball" and don't lost temper. Be expecting good results, be hopeful.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — Events may happen unexpectedly, some for good, some not so pleasing. But splendid aspects for the apt, willing worker and thinker. You have what it takes, use your talents.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — If you keep at smart, sane yet high-level speed, checking occasionally for pitfalls, you can turn in appreciable returns and receive reward such performance deserves.

October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio) — Nothing unusual to prevent, just be your efficient, conscientious self, slow down at right time and don't imagine things that may never happen or which you should not. Protect health.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Generally favorable period for routine, run-of-the-day happenings. Business, financial and pertinent matters should come first. News indicated after 1 p.m.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—It is said all things come to him who waits— but don't wait too long, folks. Mind that you do not drive self beyond reasonable point. Enjoy sane pleasure, diversion with family.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — If possible, hurry through some duties; concentrate sensibly on essentials. Think before acting and final results will gain new ground. No real obstacles today.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) —You may have to double-check before starting your day. Go about chores in a quiet and unperturbed manner; refuse to become agitated, avoid diverting situations.

YOU BORN TODAY: Set up high objectives and never allow influences of others to sway you from sound resolves. Proper education and occupation of time, plus prayer and self-restraint can make you one of the enviable people in any social or business set. Study well moves, make no decisions unless you know just what you are doing. You may tend to be too retrospective. Spiritual guidance counts. Don't ask advice needlessly, think carefully yourself, building fortitude. Many great men, women in this Sign, Aquarius. Conscientiousness will reward. Birthdate of: John Ruskin, writer; Wm. Tecumseh Sherman, famed General; Jules Verne, noted writer.

Little Benny's Notebook

Ma was pealing potatoes in the kitchin, and I went in saying, Oh boy, ma, I just had a happy serprize. I thought I had 14 cents in my pockit, and I counted it again, and I've got 17. I'm 3 cents richer than I thought, I said.

Oh no you're not, ma said. You hand those 3 cents rite over, she said, and I said, Heck, ma, what for? Why? I said.

Because they belong to me, ma said. They must be my change from some errand that you neglected to give me with you usual carelessness. That's the only possible explination, she said, and I said, No it aint, ma. It's really mine, only I must of forgot I had it. What's a matter with that explination? I said.

It's entirely too convenient, ma said. You couldn't possibly of forgotten 3 cents of your own money. It wouldn't be normal at your age. This will teetch you a good lesson in being more puncktual and scrupuliss in reterning my change, she sad, and I said, But jimminies, ma, I dont need any lesson. Heck, ma, dont you ever get serprized by money in an old pair of pants or somewheres? I said.

No I dont, and what's more you dont happen to be wearing old pants, ma said, and I said, Aw, cramberries, ma.

And I counted my money again, saying, Hay, I counted wrong, I've only got 14 cents after all. G roozalem, ma, you owe me 3 cents, I said, and she said, Why so, for land sakes?

Because on account of the fierce scare you gave me, I said. That was a heck of an experience and I ought to get paid for it, I said, and ma said, Very well, I apologize.

Being the end of the pay.

GAS PRESSURE DOWN

GUELPH (CP)—Sub-zero temperatures in the last three days have caused a big drop in gas pressure in low-lying areas here, it was reported Friday. Crews of the Guelph light and heat commission have been working around the clock to try to keep the gas flowing. John A. Spence, superintendent of the gas division, said the situation is the worst since 1946.

SOMETHING NEW IN REFRIGERATORS, ORCHESTRAS

The building of the world's first electronic refrigerator using a "magic metal," left, and a 300-tube "robot orchestra," right, which creates, plays or can simulate the music without instrumentalists or instruments, were among the modern wonders unveiled by RCA in New York. Nils E. Lindenblad is shown explaining cooling system of the first refrigerator to achieve practical storage and freezing temperatures entirely by electronic means. Dr. Harry F. Olson is at the keyboard of the "electronic music synthesizer." In a laboratory demonstration he stood before the three-rowed keyboard and punched out music in a roll. The music sounded like it was being played by musicians and instruments, but it was all done with tubes.

LAWYERS HEAR SCIENTIST CONDEMN USE OF ALCOHOL TESTS

A 62-page attack, condemning the use of blood, breath and saliva tests for drunkenness caused much controversy at the mid-winter meeting of the Ontario section of the Canadian Bar Association at London, Ontario. Author of the attack, Dr. I. M. Rabinowitch, left, a leading Montreal scientist, deplored the tendency of the courts to accept evidence of presence of .15 per cent of alcohol in the blood as proof of intoxication. One of the 700 lawyers in attendance, D. Park Jamieson, president, Canadian association, is shown right, with Mrs. W. P. Gregory, wife of Ontario vice-president. (Central Press Canadian).

SOLDIER INJURED

BARRIE (CP) — A 24-year-old soldier suffered multiple injuries Wednesday night when a slow-moving train crashed into his car on a level crossing here. Police said Pte. William Vrooman, stationed at Camp Borden, received concussion, fractured ribs and possible internal injuries when a freight train struck his car and tossed him out. He lay 20 minutes in foot-deep snow before an ambulance arrived.

Government Will Extend Pensions To Blind Persons

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has started parliamentary machinery rolling to extend pensions to blind persons between 18 and 21 years of age.

The legislation, of which Health Minister Martin gave notice Saturday on the Commons order paper, also will raise maximum income allowances for those receiving the $40-a-month federal payment.

Health officials estimated the changes will increase the federal bill for blind pensions by about $250,000 a year to roughly $4,250,000.

About 8,300 blind Canadians get the monthly pensio nand there are about 300 blind persons in the 18-21 age group.

Under existing regulations a single blind persons can get the full $40 allowance if he does not earn more than $360 annually. A blind person, married, is allowed to earn a maximum of $840 a year and still get the full pension.

These ceilings will be raised but officials declined to disclose what additional income will be allowed.

CLEAR RIVERS

TORONTO (CP) —Work has started on clearing the river valleys of metropolitan Toronto of debris left by hurricane Hazel and the Oct. 16 floods, it was reported Wednesday. The $225,000 clearance project along the course of six metropolitan area rivers has been started by provincial and metro authorities. About 150 men are on the job, expected to be completed in three months.

Baptist Minister Wants Navy Freed of Liquor

HALIFAX (CP)—A 44-year-old Baptist minister said Sunday he has been swamped by such favorable reaction to his demand for a liquor-less navy that he has decided to pursue his campaign indefinitely.

Rev. Abner J. Langley of West End Baptist church said his plea from the pulpit a week previously for a Canadian navy as dry as its United States counterpart was supported by "college professors, college presidents and even naval officials, commanders and so on." He named no names.

In his Jan. 30 sermon Mr. Langley said a clandestine methyl alcohol binge the week before aboard the aircraft carrier Magnificent illustrated the pressing need for "drying up" the navy which currently doles out a daily rum ration to ratings who want it.

Mr. Langley said Defence Minister Campney's response that the rum ration embodied "tradition" wasn't a reply at all because "he doesn't say why tradition can't be broken."

Forty-seven ratings were laid low by the affair aboard the Magnificent and some narrowly escaped death. The navy has as yet taken no action.

ONTARIO MAN SENTENCED

Woman Student Slashed to Death

NEW YORK (AP) — A young woman graduate college student was found choked and stabbed to death Sunday in a dingy, sixth-floor Manhattan tenement.

"One of the most brutal murders I've ever seen," said police Capt. William Schnabel after inspecting the death scene.

The body of Anne Yarrow, 23, was discovered Sunday by a friend who had gone home to South Carolina for 10 days and allowed Miss Yarrow to use the apartment in her absence.

Herta Payson returned to her sixth-floor frugal lodgings to find the front door almost ripped from its hinges and the latch smashed. Her friend's mutilated body was sprawlezd on a mattress on the floor, clad only in a sweater and stabbed at least 40 times. No weapon was found.

There had been some kind of sexual assault on the attractive dark-haired woman.

A neighbor told police of hearing screams around midnight.

Miss Yarrow's parents are divorced and her mother, now married to ship captain Alex Kaelep, lives in Astoria, N.Y. The slain girl was a 1953 honor graduate of Guilford College near Greensboro, N.C., and had lived with her mother and stepfather until she recently took an apartment with two other girls in Brooklyn.

The mother, weeping bitterly, sobbed: "My daughter, she was an idealist. I don't know why they are always the ones who get killed."

Miss Payson told police she did not know Miss Yarrow very well but agreed to let her use the apartment in order to have someone to feed her cat.

She said Miss Yarrow had asked to use the apartment because she wanted a chance to be alone after splitting up with a boy friend who knew the location of the Brooklyn apartment where she had been living.

NAPLES, Italy (AP)—Francesco Rosso, 22, was casually shaving near an open window of his home Wednesday when he saw a sputtering fuse. He leaped through the window and stamped it out. The fuse was attached to five pounds of high explosive—enough, police said, to have blown up Rosso and his home.

Curriculum Being Replaced By Diversified Study Plan

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dick and Jane call the signals in Canadian schools.

They are the boy and girl to whose pattern provinces from coast to coast are shaping educational systems. Their degrees of ability and the place they will take in the community when schooling is over, more and more are being recognized as major factors in the education process.

The stereotyped curriculum, followed without deviation by the clever and the ordinary, the future doctor or accountant, scientist or farmer, is being replaced by a diversified study plan designed to meet individual needs and desires.

COUNTRY-WIDE SURVEY

A Canadian Press survey indicates that growing concern for the student as a person is probably the major change in education in the Dominion in the last 20 years.

The change has not followed a parallel course in all provinces and rural schools still follow in large measure the old pattern of the three Rs, without frills. But even in the country education has more to offer the student.

The trend might be more noticeable were it not for the fact that the school population increased after the war and there is still a teacher and classroom shortage.

Dr. F. E. MacDiarmid, director and chief superintendent of education for New Brunswick, was speaking for his own province but his words were applicable to most of Canada when he told The Canadian Press:

"Twenty years ago a high school course for the most part was designed to prepare students for universities. At the present time the high school course not only prepares students for universities but courses are given in general shop work, home economics, agriculture and commercial subjects.

"In other words it now is considered the responsibility of the schools to educate all our young people in order that they may obtain employment in the field of their choice. There has been a definite trend towards catering to the needs and abilities of all classes of students."

NEWFOUNDLAND

From coast to coast these features of progress in education stand out:

In Newfoundland there is greater pupil participation with emphasis on learning by doing. New courses have been introduced although there has been little change in the basic educational structure. More work is done on English, languages, mathematics, civics, hygiene, homecraft, art, music, woodwork and gardening. With increased university facilities greater emphasis is placed on grooming students for college.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

In primary grades an attempt has been made to make reading and number work more understandable, interesting and concrete. The problem of separating clever and ordinary students is receiving consideration in urban centres. The emphasis continues on preparation for university but there is a trend towards providing varied high school courses for students not planning a professional career.

NEW BRUNSWICK

Department of education policy is to give equal emphasis to preparation for university and to train students for employment after high school graduation. Vocational departments in urban and regional schools provide a training ground for students with different future desires. The curriculum has changed in keeping with demands of society and students are found to be more mature on graduation and more willing to accept responsibility. Physical education, art, music and visual aids form part of the instruction program.

NOVA SCOTIA

Most emphasis in high school education lies in preparation for university but Halifax and Yarmouth have vocational high schools and eight or nine provincial high schools offer commercial courses and one has an agriculture course. There have been no significant changes in curriculum in the last 20 years although many minor changes have been made. The complete course was revised in the period before 1935, placing education in the province on a modern basis.

QUEBEC

In English Protestant and Roman Catholic high schools a student may decide after second year on his vocation and then take the most suitable course. If he plans to work after graduation he may follow a commerce course; if he plans to enter university his choice is between arts and science. There are no high schools for French-speaking students but from elementary grades they may enter colleges or specialized schools preparing them for the type of work they plan to take up.

Schooling is well organized in the cities where there are facilities for separating backward from normal children; classroom and teacher facilities make rural education less satisfactory although many rural students are transported to ultra-modern consolidated schools.

Highlight of recent curriculum changes is the trend to text books more appealing to students. Many more books are in use with 300 different texts authorized from grades one to 12. Seventy per cent of these have been introduced since 1944.

New subjects include household science, agriculture, instrumental music, arts and crafts, biology, German, Spanish, manual training, stenography and typing. Protestant schools have introduced for students in grades eight to 12 a course in North American literature which education department officials believe is the only one of its kind in Canada.

ONTARIO

Enrolment in public and elementary schools climbed to 980,000 in 1954 from 640,000 in 1944. Techniques in teacher preparation have changed with more subjects, such as psychology, being studied. Government grants to schools have increased and local boards and trustees have more say about how money should be spent. There is a trend towards separating clever and ordinary students and if the rigid grade system in a school prevents jumping grades the clever student is given an "enriched" course to stimulate interest. More emphasis is placed on guidance courses and vocational training, handling where necessary. There are accelerating and retarding programs in the first three years, enabling clever pupils to complete three years in two, slower pupils three years in four. Experimental classes have been established in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades to meet the needs to gifted students. Classes for slow students have been established in junior high schools and are under study in senior high. The provincial program stresses preparation for university entrance but a technical-vocational high school gives training in industrial and commercial fields. There has been no major change in curriculum since 1948.

SASKATCHEWAN

A diversified high school program enables students to choose their subjects. More attention is paid to individual differences and there are classrooms for dull and bright students in urban centres. Emphasis in rural centres is on preparation for university because there is not enough teacher strength to devote time to trades training. Teaching methods have changed in line with research; art and music teaching have improved and more use is being made of audio-visual aides and subject matter related to everyday life. Emphasis again is being placed on grammar instruction, however, because education authorities felt students lacked adequate training.

ALBERTA

The "enterprise" system in which students find out things for themselves and are directed rather than lectured by the teacher is a feature of the elementary school program. The "unit" method, resembling the enterprise but modified for upper grades, in common in junior high and, to a lesser extent, in senior high. Reading methods have improved in elementary schools. A guidance program in junior and senior high encourages greater attention to individual differences and emphasizes the importance of mental health. Gifted students may skip one or two grades during the first nine; in senior grades students usually are grouped according to their post-school goals. Individual school students, however, are free to make arrangements which appeal to them and are administratively feasible.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

The education system has seen major changes in the last 20 years and includes new grades. Against the old system of grades one to eight in one school and nine to 11 in another, there now are elementary schools with grades one to six, junior highs with seven to nine and senior highs with 10 to 12. There is no distinct separation of clever and ordinary students but individuals are urged to reach as high a standard as they are able. Most help given to advanced students is on an individual basis with teachers giving additional work to be done on the student's own time. Education is no longer directed exclusively to university entrance. A student upon entering high school may work towards university entrance or commercial and technical fields. A broader curriculum makes possible this specialized instruction.

BOAT CRUISES STREETS

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — An outboard motorboat cruised down a city street and a park was turned into a shallow lake by 8.93 inches of rain recorded at the Pensacola naval air station. The torrential downpour was reported in 24 hours Sunday.

13 KILLED IN CRASH

LAGOS, Nigeria (Reuters)—Thirteen persons were killed when a West African Airways Corporation airliner crashed in a dense palm grove and mangrove swamp in eastern Nigeria Saturday. The twisted wreckage of the Bristol Wayfarer plane was found Saturday night by a search party which was sent over land from Calabar, 65 miles to the southeast.

Red Embassy Left in Dark About Switch'

LONDON (AP)—News of Soviet Premier Malenkov's resignation caught Soviet diplomats by surprise at this diplomatic crossroads.

Ninety minutes after Malenkov stepped down, the news still had not been received at the Russian embassy.

Seventy-five minutes after the Moscow announcement, the news still had not been reported by Tass, the Soviet news agency, or by any of the Soviets' voice or morse newcasts. Nor had any satellite radio carried the report.

Moscow radio finally broke into a scheduled program to announce to the Russian people the resignation of their premier almost two hours after foreign correspondents in Moscow had flashed the news to the outside world.

Bulganin Named His Successor By Khrushchev

With Confession of Failure, Malenkov Quits High Post

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

MOSCOW (AP) — With a confession of failure, Georgi M. Malenkov resigned today as premier of the Soviet Union. The defence minister, Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin, became premier.

The dramatic shift spotlighted (1) an all-out Soviet concentration on heavy arms industry and (2) the prominence of Nikita S. Khruschchev as the No. 1 Communist.

The announcements were made before the Supreme Soviet (parliament). It was Khrushchev who nominated Bulganin for the premiership, presenting one of the most remarkable displays of personal influence since the Soviet "collective leadership" took over after the death of Stalin.

CHOICE UNANIMOUS

The new premier was the Communist in direct charge of Soviet armed forces under Stalin during the Second World War. He is 59. Khrushchev is 60 and Malenkov 53.

Khrushchev said Bulganin was the unanimous choice of the Communist party central committee and the council of ministers. Yet Bulganin seemed a dark horse in the race for the premiership. Speculation in the Moscow foreign colony had centred on Khrushchev or Foreign Minister Molotov as Malenkov's successor.

The parliament gave its unanimous approval to the designation of Bulganin.

Immediately after that Molotov launched into a speech on Soviet foreign policy. Malenkov, seated between President Klementy Voroshilov and Khrushchev, listened intently as the foreign minister bitterly and repeatedly accused the United States of trying to impose "an iron curtain and an iron heel" on the Western hemisphere.

Diplomats were interested in the fact that Bulganin was elected to the premiership by the same session of the Supreme Soviet which unanimously approved the new 1955 budget which raised Soviet military spending by about 12 per cent. The same Soviet also appropriated vast sums for the development of heavy industry.

SPEECH BITTER

Molotov's speech rang with bitterness against the U. S. He accused Washington of seeking world domination.

"They want to spread the capitalistic system over the whole world, and this means preparation for war," he said.

Molotov also was bitter about Sir Winston Churchill. Repeatedly he jabbed at the British prime minister, accusing him of having attempted to strangle the Soviet Communist regime ever since the revolutionary days of 1919.

Malenkov, in his statement of resignation, said the Soviet Union's agricultural program under him, even in the days before Stalin's death, had "bad results."

West's Observers See Stalin-Type Rule Returning

LONDON (AP)—Soviet Premier Malenkov's resignation today came as a surprise, but no shock, to Western diplomats here.

At first glance it appeared to them as a return to the hard-headed dictatorial rule of Stalin and the end of the recent "collective responsibility." They also saw the possibility of new purges.

Answers to a lot of questions appear to hinge on who succeeds Malenkov.

For months there had been speculation that a struggle for power was raging inside theKremlin between the forces of Malenkov and Nikita Khrushchev, secretary of the Soviet Communist party and its leader.

Western diplomats saw the 60-year-old Khrushchev winning the first round.

What over-all effect Malenkov's resignation will have on Western dealings with the Soviet Union is not clear.

Campney Stresses Importance Protecting H-Bomb Power Of United States to Retaliate

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Campney in recent weeks has been stressing that one of the chief aims of continental defence must be protection of the thermonuclear retaliatory capacity of the United States.

In essence, this means an air protection curtain for the U.S. strategic bomber force and its bases, industries which turn out its planes and the plants which manufacture the atomic and hydrogen bombs.

This was a point raised often by former defence minister Claxton before he retired from the government last July. If anything, the problem has taken on increased importance because of the longer-range bombers now being developed by Russia.

Officials here don't believe there are any Canadian targets comparable to those in the U.S. So the primary role of the RCAF CF-100 jet fighter squadrons would be to protect American bomber bases and aircraft and bomb plants.

This, in the long run, would serve as protection of Canada because the more Russian planes knocked down and the heavier the retaliatory blow at the Communists, the less likelihood of a heavy attack on this country.

Mr. Campney recently said in the Commons:

"The defence of Canada—indeed of North America—has suddenly become almost equally as important to the other NATO nations as it has always been to ourselves.

"This arises from the emergence of an improved Russian nuclear weapon delivery capability against North America.

"Under such circumstances it becomes essential that greater efforts be put forth immediately in strengthening the defences of this continent because North America is . . . the only great base from which operations for the defence of Europe can be supported and also because of the necessity of protecting the thermonuclear retaliatory capacity of the U.S. which provides at the present time probably the greatest single deterrent

Evacuation of Tachen Islands Proceeding Smoothly Without Interference by Chinese Communist Forces

By FRED HAMPSON

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Tachen islanders carrying fishing nets and a few treasured belongings streamed aboard Chinese Nationalist landing craft and United States transports today from rocky beaches under protection of a mighty American naval and air armada.

There was no sign of interference from Communist artillery on nearby Yikiangshan or from the hundreds of Russian - built jets based within close range on the Red China mainland. There was some anti-aircraft fire from Yikiangshan, however when U.S. planes ventured too close.

American jets swooshed overhead and warships of the U.S. 7th Fleet plowed through the choppy waters of the East China sea off the Tachens as the evacuation moved into high gear.

Civilians were given first priority. Women and children plodded through the mud of their villages, past cackling fowl, down to the rocky, tide-swept beaches of lower Tachen. Men, some old and feeble, joined in the migration.

Most of the 15,000 or more civilians lived on lower Tachen and 15,000 Nationalist troops and guerrillas were stationed on its sister island just to the north.

The Nationalist Central News Agency meanwhile said the Chinese Reds are strengthening forces near the Nationalist-held coastal island of Quemoy, 350 miles south of the Tachens.

Vice-Admiral Alfred M. Pride flashed word from his flagship, the cruiser Helena, that the first Tachen evacuee to be taken aboard an American ship embarked on the attack transport U.S.S. Henrico at 10:20 a.m. Pride, commander of the 7th Fleet, said embarkation on a Chinese Nationalist ship got under way about an hour earlier.

AP correspondent Jim Becker reported from the Tachens that the operation was proceeding smoothly four hours later.

Nationalist sources in Taipei insisted that Nationalist ships were in Tachen waters Sunday night or Monday morning and had begun loading. If so, it may have been a fast shift of guerrillas to some other off-shore island the Nationalists hope to build up.

The evacuation is expected to take a week or longer, even with U.S. ships joining in the operation. Tides as high as 18 feet and rocky beaches cut loading time to six hours daily.

TWO MEN, WOMAN DIE IN ROOMING HOUSE BLAZE

All Asphyxiated In Cramped Toronto Attic

TORONTO (CP) — Fire which funnelled up a stairway with savage speed trapped and asphyxiated two men and a woman Monday night in the cramped attic rooms of a lodging house in east-central Toronto.

The fire started in a pile of wastepaper in a hallway, possibly from a carelessly-discarded cigaret butt. The 12 other tenants fled with only seconds to spare from the basement and the first two floors.

The victims were identified as George Walter Adams, 65, Mrs. Maria Jackson, 75, and Vincent Dorton, 40.

Most of the tenants were either in bed or just preparing for bed when the fire started. Mrs. Annie Globack, landlady of the house, was visiting a friend in another part of the city and was unaware of the fire.

Olaf Holm, 65, a janitor at St. Michael's Hospital, suffered cuts to his hands in making his escape through a window. He jumped from a second-storey ledge.

The exterior of the building was virtually unscarred. Inside, the damage was largely confined to the stairwell although the hallway and a first-floor window were blackened. Damage was estimated at $5,000.

The fire marshal's department started an on-the-spot investigation while more than 400 persons, including pajama-clad survivors of the fire, watched from the street. There were rooming houses adjoining the burning building but none was touched by the flames.

READY TO WEIGH KHAN

CAIRO (Reuters) — The Aga Khan, spiritual leader of the Moslem Ismaili sect, arrived here from Luxor, Upper Egypt, Monday night as final preparations were being made to "weigh" him against platinum Feb. 20. The 77-year-old Aga Khan, who is convalescing from a recent attack of gout and influenza, was accompanied by the begum and Prince Aly Khan.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: A storm centred in eastern Manitoba Tuesday morning is expected to move into northern Ontario today and to reach the Quebec border by Wednesday evening. In southern Ontario, southerly winds will bring milder temperatures this afternoon and Wednesday. A few snowflurries will fall from partly cloudy skies today but generally sunny weather is indicated for Wednesday.

Report Russia Has Proposed Parley on Formosan Crisis

LONDON (Reuters)—Russia has proposed an international conference to tackle the Formosa crisis, Commonwealth sources at the prime ministers' conference said today.

Foreign Minister Molotov made the proposal to the British and Indian envoys in Moscow last week, the sources said.

The meeting would not be within the framework of the United Nations, whose invitation to attend a Security Council debate Communist China refused last week.

The Commonwealth prime ministers discussed the Russian offer Monday and were to examine it further in a special session here today, the sources said.

Russia did not propose the participation of Nationalist China at the conference.

Commonwealth statesmen had previously discussed the idea of sponsoring a meeting similar to the Geneva conference which ended the Indochina war last year, but took no decision on it.

Britain will not reply to the Soviet proposal until she has fully consulted the United States, the sources added.

As the Commonwealth chiefs gathered for their last session, the British government awaited official United States reaction to its appeal for the evacuation of Quemoy and the Matsu islands by the Chinese Nationalists.

British diplomacy is reported concentrating on convincing the U.S. that the withdrawal of Chiang Kai-shek's troops is an essential first step toward reaching a standstill in the Formosa fighting.

Malenkov Came Close to Victory, Khrushchev Cut Him Down to Size

By TOM WHITNEY

NEW YORK (AP)—Georgi Malenkov came close; but he never succeeded in taking over all the power once held by the late Joseph Stalin.

But from obscur beginnings, this short, fat man rose high. He appeared to have a lot of what it takes for success in the Soviet Union, but apparently not enough.

Before Stalin died Malenkov was known chiefly for the scowl in his photographs. After Stalin's death, he showed himself as a smiling, chubby fellow with thick, wavy hair and a winning way.

On Stalin's death Malenkov succeeded to the premiership but did not keep the old man's job as secretary of the Soviet Communist party's central committee. That went to Nikita S. Khrushchev, who now has eclipsed him.

Nor did Malenkov take Stalin's position as generalissimo of the armed forces of the U. S. S. R.

As the months passed, Khrushchev more and more seemed to have the edge.

DIEFENBAKER ASKS DECLARATION OF BILL OF RIGHTS

Advocate Says War Weakens Defences

OTTAWA (CP)—A long-time advocate of a bill of rights for Canadians has appealed to Parliament to bolster the defences of human freedoms which he says have been weakened by an age of war and world tension.

"This is an age of fear," said John Diefenbaker (PC — Prince Albert) in a 75-minute speech Monday seeking Commons support for a declaration of human rights.

"This is an age of the all-powerful state created as a result of war or threatened war. This is an age when shortcuts of political expediency, while effective for the moment in maintaining security, ultimately constitute a mortal threat to freedom."

The Commons, however, reached no decision on the issue after a day-long debate on motions by Mr. Diefenbaker and CCF leader Coldwell. At the end of the session's first day devoted to private members' proposals the debate was adjourned. The motions stand little chance of being considered again this session.

Americans Keep Fingers Crossed As Reds Threaten

By WARREN ROGERS Jr.

WASHINGTON (AP)—American officials kept their fingers crossed today against the possibility of shooting incidents if Red China carries out a veiled threat to fly planes in the same air being patrolled by United States craft.

American planes helping to cover the evacuation of Chinese Nationalists from the Tachen islands were accused by Peiping radio Monday of "gravely encroaching on China's territory and sovereignty." The broadcast continued:

"If the U.S. air force ventures to intrude into China's territorial air again the U.S. government must bear all serious consequences arising therefrom."

This warning came even as State Secretary Dulles was telling the Senate foreign relations committee here that he doubts Red China really wants to wage war against the U.S.

"However, I do not doubt that the Chinese Communists are probing our resolution," Dulles added.

Picton Firm's Warehouse Destroyed, Loss Is $100,000

PICTON (Special) — Firemen from Picton and from the Royal Canadian School of Artillery battled for two hours in near zero weather early this morning as flames raced through the warehouse of the Nourse Radio Electric causing damage estimated at $100,000.

The blaze was discovered about 7.30 and after a two-hour fight on the part of firemen was brought under control, but the brick storage building at the rear of Main Street business block was a complete loss, together with its contents of television sets, refrigerators and washing machines.

Clapp and Jackson, plumbers, renting a shop in part of the warehouse building, lost $10,000 worth of supplies, while Lipson's Furniture Store, which also used the building for storage, lost $10,000 worth of merchandise, much of which had been brought in only yesterday.

Brick walls and an asphalt roof on the warehouse building, together with heroic work on the part of the firemen kept the flames from spreading to stores on the main street and to apartments over the stores. Five families living over the stores were ready to flee with their belongings had firemen been unable to check the spread of the flames.

It was the biggest fire in downtown Picton in many years and the flames cast a pall of smoke over the entire town, which was almost impossible to see through. The last big fire in Picton was when the high school burned four years ago.

Origin of this morning's fire was not determined, but the the blaze had been underway for considerable time before it was discovered by a soldier who lived nearby. The brick walls and roof of the building collapsed.

With the temperature at near zero firemen were coated thick with ice before they had the flames under control.

Big worry for the firemen was in confining the fire to the storehouse building. Had it spread toward the street a large section of the downtown area would undoubtedly have been lost.

The burned storage building was at the rear of the showroom of the Nourse Radio Electric. Flames did not spread to the store proper but there was heavy smoke damage in the store. The burned building was owned by Gordon Nourse and Miss Merle Pearsoll.

During the height of the fire a nearby shed owned by Picton Motors and filled with new cars, caught fire. The blaze was promptly put out by firemen.

Immaculate and Precise Bulganin Really Army's Political Policeman

By TOM WHITNEY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Marshal Nikolai Bulganin, the new Soviet premier, is the man whom Stalin and Stalin's heirs trusted to administer for many years the gigantic Soviet war machine.

With his white hair, his carefully trimmed van dyke beard and close-cropped moustaches, dressed in an immaculate and well-pressed uniform with great marshal's stars gleaming from his shoulder boards, Bulganin appears the personification of military dignity and precision.

In reality, though he had once been given a cram-school course of military education, Bulganin is no more a veteran military man than Stalin was.

Bulganin was put in charge of the Soviet armed forces as the Communist party's political policeman.

He had the assignment on the one hand of keeping the army in line for the Communist party, crushing any dissidence among the officer corps with swift ruthlessness, keeping career officers and generals from uniting on a common platform or plotting or playing politics among themselves. On the other hand he also had the contradictory job of keeping the marshals and generals and other veteran military officers contented, of representing their interests and on occasion their views in the higher party councils, and of watching closely over forces morale in general.

Shortly after the revolution the young Communist regime found it necessary to establish a secret police in order to terrorize its many enemies. This institution which later evolved into such infamous institutions as the GPU and the MVD was then known as the Cheka (from the two Russian letters "che" and "ka" standing for Russian words meaning extraordinary commission). Young Bulganin was one of the first Communists named to work in this weapon of the Bolsheviks.

He became an expert in intelligence, counter-intelligence, terror and the other functions of Soviet police dictatorship right at its start.

RIVER ICE DANGEROUS FOR CHILDREN

With river ice becoming cracked and raised by the pressure of water following the recent mild spell, city parents were warned today by Police Chief Walter Probert to keep their children off the Moira River.

"The river ice is very dangerous as result of its being heaved by the pressure of water underneath," the chief commented, "and children playing on the ice may find themselves in difficulty."

Arrest Transients Who Got Free Meal

The law caught up with two young transients early this morning when they ordered a $3.80 meal at a local restaurant and then admitted they had no money to pay for it.

The restaurant management called police who took the men into custody and booked them on vagrancy charges. The men gave their names as Fred Herman of Sherbrooke and Jack Parent of Ottawa. They appeared in court this morning before Magistrate T. Y. Wills and were remanded until Feb. 15th for sentence.

Former Tax Collector To Stand Trial

Charged with theft of funds during his term as tax collector for the township of Sidney, Leroy Woods of Wallbridge was committed for trial by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in magistrate's court Monday.

The preliminary hearing was an all-day affair and was completed at 9.30 last night after a long parade of witnesses had been called.

Guild President Tells Rotarians Of Drama Festival

Eastern Ontario drama festival scheduled for Belleville commencing February 15, yesterday was in the spotlight at the regular meeting of the Belleville Rotary club, when Stu Robb, president of the local theatre guild, spoke on behalf of the Eastern Ontario Drama League.

"We are trying to make the festival a community effort and we are trying to enlist the support of all the citizens of this town in it," Mr. Robb said.

He said it was "quite an honor" for Belleville to be chosen as the location for this year's festival and the town should "go all out and help put it across."

Mr. Robb noted the large number of out-of-town visitors the town would be hosting during the week of the festival.

"We want to show these people from out-of-town that we can put on a festival as well as any other place. And the way we can do this is to show that the citizens of this town are behind it one hundred percent," he concluded.

Next week Belleville Rotary will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of Rotary, the now international service club organization which was founded in Chicago in 1905. Highlight of yesterday's meeting was a recorded drama telling the story of Rotary in capsule form. The record, cut in Chicago and dispatched to Belleville to be played back at the meeting. The recording featured the voice of the present president of Rotary International, Herbert J. Taylor.

Little Theatre Of Peterborough To Present Noah

Noah floated mankind to safety on his ark.

Andre Obey's "Noah," a play of classic simplicity, has risen to theatrical heights on a flood of critical acclaim.

The play, being presented at the Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival in the Belleville Collegiate auditorium on Wednesday, February 16th, by the Peterborough Little Theatre, has been described as "one of the great plays written within the present century."

"Noah," in rehearsal for more than two months, tells the story of the Flood, the survival of Noah and his family and their cargo in a straightforward manner with flashes of poetic insight, deep feeling and reverence.

One of its great attractions is that it can be enjoyed on so many levels.

It is presented in its essence with a real Ark, real animals, and real domestic problems for Noah, his wife and his unruly children.

Sets, designed by the art supervisor for Biblical Schools in Peterborough, includes trees, an ark and even a mountain top. Costuming is simple but striking.

Visual highlighs of play are the eight masks and costumes originally created for the Peterborough presentation.

"Noah" gives its excellent cast great creative scope in characterization, in voice, in mood and in rhythmic movement. It is a delight to the ear as well as to the eye. It is the Peterborough Little Theatre's major dramatic production of the year.

Other full length plays at the four-day festival are: "Joan of Lorraine," by the Belleville Theatre Guild, February 15; "The Moon in the Yellow River," Ottawa Little Theatre Inc., February 18, and "Malbrough S'En Va T'En Guerre," by Le Theatre du Pont Neuf, Hull, February 18.

13-Car Passenger Train Hauled By Two Streamlined Deisel Units

The familiar coal burning steam locomotive which for well over half a century has characterized passenger trains passing through Belleville was missing Monday when train No. 5 the Montreal-Chicago passed through the north station.

Instead of the smoke belching steamer the 13-car passenger train was hauled by two streamlined diesel units, which according to railway officials were indicative of things to come.

The diesel powered passenger service between Montreal and the Windy City was all on a trial basis according to divisional superintendent A. G. Wilson. Diesels will be on this particular passenger run for a week or more for the collection of data preparatory to putting diesels on regularly.

Mr. Wilson noted that during the trial period the train will be operated on its regular schedule but he expected after the trial period some time would be cut off the run.

The passenger diesels are special units with oil-fired steam generators to manufacture steam for heating of the coaches. The units are similar to the diesel engines which have been operating some passenger trains in the Maritimes for several months.

Although it is still necessary for the passenger diesels to take on water for their steam generators at each terminal point, the business of re-fueling has been cut to a minimum. On the entire run from Montreal to Chicago fuel is taken on only at Belleville and at Sarnia.

Molotov Says United States Trying to Lead World Into War

MOSCOW (AP)—In a 2½-hour statement of Soviet foreign policy, Foreign Minister Molotov today bitterly assailed the United States and said Russia has developed hydrogen bombs with "such success that the United States could appear backward."

Molotov declared a comparison of the true strength of the United States and the Soviet Union would show that this country is not the weaker party.

He delivered this warning:

"In case of an eventual war, world civilization will not perish but what will be destroyed is the rotten social system with its blood-saturated imperialism which is being rejected by oppressed peoples."

Molotov declared the United States is trying to lead the world into a new war. He said it is guilty in China of an aggression "which must be condemned by the United Nations if the UN wants to retain its respect." He called Formosa "undoubtedly the territory of the Chinese people's republic."

Molotov's address ranged over most of the world. In words reminiscent of the days of Stalin, Molotov said the Western capitalist countries, under U. S. leadership, want to "turn back the people's democratic countries to capitalism" and to restore capitalism in the Soviet Union.

But he said such attempts would fail, that communism moreover was making great strides in "the people's liberation movement against colonialism" in Asia. He predicted such movements would also come to pass in Africa and the "colonial imperialist powers will not be able to stop these movements."

"In the Near East we can say that the Arab countries have not progressed as much in development as the countries of the Far East. But it is obvious that soon it will be impossible to strangle the national liberation movement in the Near East as freely as they (the Western powers) are doing it now with the peoples of Africa.

"The contingents of North and South America are now standing aside from that road on which the people of Europe and Asia are moving forward, but the Iron Curtain with which they want to isolate the American people from other people is not so strong as it seems to be."

Hold Low Tariffs Not Cause Of Textile Industry's Woes

OTTAWA (CP) — The tariff board has found that segments of Canada's wool cloth industry are in serious trouble, but says a shrinking market, and not low tariffs, is to blame.

The three-man board, in a 20,000-word report to Finance Minister Harris, rejected the view of the Canadian industry that low tariffs on competing imports from Britain are the cause of the industry's troubles, it was learned today.

The industry has appealed for an increase in tariffs on British wool cloth on the ground that the present maximum of 50 cents a pound is inadequate to bridge the widened gap between British and Canadian costs.

The board, its report culminating months of investigation and public hearings, said the effective rate of duty has shown little variation since 1948 and cannot by itself be considered a cause of the industry's distress.

DEMAND OFF

The board's report, which Mr. Harris likely will make public in the Commons shortly, said that perhaps the most important single factor contributing to the industry's plight is the decline in the demand for cloth containing wool. Contributing to this market shrinkage, it said, was a 1950-51 rise in wool prices.

A power, too, in the decline was the growing competition of synthetic cloths and the general competition of other products for the consumer's dollar.

The shrinkage in total demand for wool cloth, the decline in selling prices and the rising costs to Canadian producers have helped to explain why employment has dropped and why some sections of the industry have been and still are in financial distress, the board said.

These factors suggest at least that some mills which are responding to the challenging situation will continue to hold their own and that, among those which appear unable to do so, further mortalities would seem inevitable, the board added.

British Papers Label Khrushchev 'The New Stalin'

London (ap) — Western Europe heard with surprise and "grave foreboding" today of the fall of Soviet Prime Minister Malenkov.

His resignation was received by the Norwegian Labor government as a return to the Stalin brand of government in the Soviet Union. And this view appeared to sum up feelings in the West at the news that Nikita Khrushchev had won "round two" in the struggle for power in Russia.

In neutral Sweden, political circles saw the downfall of Malenkov as the defeat of a "man of peace", at least, more of a peaceful bent than Khrushchev. Swedish political observers said they felt "grave forbodings" at this turn in Soviet affairs. They said they look upon Khrushchev as a man "of volcanic temperament, bent on playing a high stake game in world affairs."

British papers quickly labelled Khrushchev "the new Stalin."

At this diplomatic crossroads, the opinion hardened that Khrushchev had emerged as the new dictator of the Soviet Union with Nikolai Bulganin merely a figurehead prime minister.

FEAR IN GERMANY

From West German government officials came predictions of a "harder policy" toward the West by Russia.

"The election of Nikolai Bulganin can be very bad for us," a high West German official said.

Many French assemblymen thought that the policy of an easing of tension between East and West is now threatened. Prospects for a Big Four power conference are jeopardized.

H. A. CHAPPELL

(In memoriam, Brother H. A. Chappell, National - President, The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and other Transport Workers, who died at the age of 51 years, stricken, while working at his desk on union matters five minutes before his death.)

At the zenith of his powers,
Devoted to the brotherhood,
Stricken during active hours,
His life may now be understood
As helping others for their good.

Leaders in all the walks of life,
Soon find the walk, a run;
A race against unequal strife
Before their striving time is done,
And tangible improvement won.

And in this sphere the laboring man
Will find they've lost a friend,
One who as laborer began,
And who as leader at the end
Was working labor's cause to mend.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—A lower cast covered almost the whole stock market today in light early afternoon trade.

Only uraniums resisted the decline but here, too, there were losses. Profit-taking set in after Monday's boom.

Gunnar was off $1 to $15 at 1 p. m. EST, and the warrants dropped 50 cents to $7.75. But Basks, Consolidated Denison, Pronto and Algom, up 12½ cents to $16.12½, were strong.

Papers, constructions, foods and refining oils led industrials down. Financial institutions remained strong and gained in almost a solid line.

Western oils were led down by Banff, Britalta and Calvan. Golds were weak in Preston, Teck-hughes and Wright-Hargreaves. Base metals changes were mostly small.

Cleaning Woman Seeks to Regain Valuable Land

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Hearings started Monday in a lawsuit in which a 57-year-old cleaning woman from Niagara Falls, N. Y., seeks to regain farmland she claims was willed to her during her childhood. The land's present value is said to be about $1,000,000.

The claims by Mrs. Murphy Finnegan against seven defendants, including two wealthy companies, make up what has been described as one of the most complicated property suits in the history of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Her claims, as described by her counsel Monday, rest on the sale of the land in the suburbs of St. Catharines as ordered by a local judge.

The land was sold to two local men. Since then, it has been resold many times.

The hearing is expected to continue all week.

Produce New Paint

TORONTO (CP) — Paint is a household word. Thixotropic is not, but it is creating quite a stir in paint circles.

The thixotropic paint is being exhibited by a Brantford company at the Canadian hardwares and housewares exhibition here.

Salesmen say it doesn't require stirring or thinning, won't drip from the brush and remains wet enough to work with 30 minutes after the first brush. They claim it's also fast-drying, smooth and economical.

Big Dividend Cheques Help To Make Investors

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—More and fatter dividend cheques have been one big reason investors have been buying common stocks—and kept on buying them even while the industrial output curve was sagging.

Belief that more companies will be increasing dividend payments or splitting their stock, or both, is another strong factor in the stock market. It has helped allay the fears of many real investors who note with some alarm that the public is in the market and is speculating increasingly on borrowed money.

The dividend increases have reflected two things: 1. Many U.S. corporations have had higher net income after taxes, in spite of a sales lag, because they were relieved of the burden of the excess profits tax; 2. Many corporations have felt less need of late to retain a large part of their earnings for expansion of plant and therefore could be more liberal with the stockholders.

DIVIDENDS UP 8.8 P.C.

The New York stock exchange reports today that companies listed on its big board paid out a record total of $6,438,821,220 in cash dividends in 1954. This was 8.8 per cent higher than in 1953, although business activity in general was off slightly last year from the booming 1953.

Rising stock prices have anticipated—many say they've already discounted — the expectation that business is going to be better in 1955.

But in recent weeks there has been increasing evidence of more speculation based on rumors. Gossip concerning anticipated dividend increases or stock splits have sent some stocks skyrocketing. They have tumbled just as fast when the rumors proved groundless.

Four Servicemen Will Represent Eastern Ontario

OTTAWA (CP)—A rink of four servicemen leaves here today to compete in the Ontario curling championships at Galt, starting Wednesday. It is believed to be the first all-service rink to reach the provincial championships.

Members of the rink, representing eastern Ontario, are skip Lt.-Col. Bill Timmerman, Kingston; Col. Ken McKibbin, Port Arthur; Maj. Vernon Hyde, Calgary; and Wing Cmdr. Bob Thompson, Saskatoon. Winners at Galt will compete in the Dominion championships at Regina in March.

Queen Knights Fifty Men

LONDON (Reuters)—The Queen bestowed knighthood on 50 men who knelt before her in turn in Buckingham Palace today.

Nearly 190 men and women awaited their turn in the white and gold state ballroom to approach the Queen standing on a dais before the twin thrones of state and receive various awards.

It was the first of six investitures which she will hold in the palace on successive Tuesdays to present the insignia of honors announced in the traditional New Year's list.

The Queen also decorated a number of servicemen for bravery in Korea and Kenya.

It was the first loss of the season for Peterborough.

Pontiacs roared to a 3-0 lead in the first period, split eight goals in the second stanza and four in the third. Pontiacs had five of seven minor penalties.

Ramsbottom was high point getter for Bancroft with two goals and four assists. Green banged in three goals.

WEST'S

One immediate result seems likely to be a setback to those groups in the West calling for a conference of the Big Four powers "at the summit."

DOMINATES TALKS

News of the resignation was given immediately to the Commonwealth prime ministers at the last session of their meeting here. And the news immediatly took over domination of diplomatic comment, pushing the Formosa crisis into the background.

Britain has counted in Moscow aid in restraining the Chinese Communists in the dispute over Formosa.

Foreign Secretary Eden has been negotiating through Foreign Minister Molotov, and diplomatic sources said these negotiations are expected to continue.

The emergence of the Khrushchev policy with emphasis on production of heavy industries rather than consumer goods appears, however, to dampen Sir Winston Churchill's oft-expressed hopes of a "new wind" blowing out from the Kremlin.

Churchill, who bitterly blamed Stalin for most of the post-war troubles in the world, had pinned his hopes that Malenkov's Kremlin regime would devote most of its energies to raising the standard of living at home.

Khrushchev is regarded in the West as a different type, an extrovert with dictatorial tendencies.

IN STALIN IMAGE

Khrushchev stands for toughness and regimentation and he has demonstrated his ability at whipping the Russian people into line with disciplinary tactics, as he did in subduing the Ukraine for Stalin.

During the last year Khrushchev has been building himself as a sort of a "heavy father" figure and taking a great deal more of the limelight than others in the Kremlin regime.

His personal pronouncements on many aspects of Soviet life were calculated to present himself to the Russians as the inspirer and leader in the Stalin tradition.

The switch in the Kremlin may mean a greater influence of the "old Bolsheviks" who fought side by side with Stalin in his bloody rise to supreme power in the '30s.

TO SHIELD THE ILLEGITIMATE

ROME (Reuters) — The Italian Senate Wednesday night approved a draft law giving illegitimate children fictitious surnames and parents. The law, which now goes to the Chamber of Deputies for final approval, was proposed in order to eliminate what a parliamentarian described as "the life-long shame suffered by a person whose illegitimacy is proclaimed on all his identity documents."

Old Line Parties Blamed For Public's Apathy

A CCF district conference was held in the Elks' Hall last Saturday. The conference convened in the afternoon with delegates from Hastings East, Hastings West, Kingston, and Prince Edward-Lennox ridings in attendance. The theme of the conference was election organization in preparation for the anticipated forthcoming provincial election. Fred Young and Andrew Brewin of Toronto were in attendance.

After the conference the delegates sat down to a supper put on by ladies from the Belleville group. Andrew Brewin was the featured speaker following the supper and used as his subject "The Enemy".

In identifying the enemy Mr. Brewin said he did not believe that the enemy was the Conservatives, the Liberals, Social Crediters or even the Communists. He felt that the major enemy not only of the CCF but of all men and women of good will was apathy or inertia.

He felt that a lot of the blame for this apathy and lack of interest in politics by the general public could be laid at the feet of the old line parties who so often had promised whatever was expedient and when elected had ignored their promises. The public had got the idea that politics was a self seeking matter and that there was nothing much for the individual to gain by being interested in politics.

PENSIONS TOO LOW

"We will have to change this," said Mr. Brewin. He stated that many old age pensioners were getting $40 a month and were paying $25 and $30 a month rent and were literally starving. He also covered the present situation regarding the unemployment situation, slum living conditions, health etc. Mr. Brewin reviewed the CCF program in both the provincial and the federal spheres.

"The CCF has proved that it had come to stay," said Mr. Brewin. He advised the delegates that when they were assured that they were not apathetic they would be in a position to go out and present a dynamic view to others of what the party stands for. He said, "We know we are a group of people who have faith in the brotherhood of man and when we go out to tackle the major enemy we must call upon the resources of a genuine enthusiasm."

Bill Mundrey, CCF candidate for West Hastings riding, thanked the speaker and dealt with local problems and conditions in his riding. He felt the time had come when West Hastings would see a CCF member elected or at least give the Conservative party a pretty good run for their money in the next provincial election. He believed the party program was what the people wanted and that they would see that they got it.

Police Blotter

A young Toronto couple, George Ross, 520 Palmerston Blvd. and Phyllis French, 648 Ontario St., were apprehended early today by city police in possession of a car reportedly stolen in the Queen City. The two were held until the arrival of an escort who returned them to Toronto.

Floyd Woods, 38, of 295 Charles Street, was apprehended by police and has been charged with the theft of a truck. Mrs. Ralph Collins called police and said their truck had been stolen from a service station lot. Woods was found in possession of the truck and has been remanded to the county jail.

Two Jet Pilots Die in Crashes

CHATHAM, N. B. (CP)—Two Sabre jets from the RCAF base here crashed within minutes of one another this morning. Both pilots were killed but their names are being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

BIG INVESTMENT

The 1,200-word speech gave no figures on estimated cost of the program it said would involve highway construction, public works, the St. Lawrence power development and other projects.

PLANS SUMMARIZED

The investment program would help relieve unemployment "which has been evident in our transition to a peacetime economy."

The speech gave a brief summary of road-work plans. Construction would be speeded on four-lane highways and bypasses around cities and towns. Improvement work on existing highways would be extended, including repaving of 700 miles. New roads would be built in northern Ontario to link isolated communities with the provincial highways network.

Two projects related to the St. Lawrence seaway development were forecast—establishment of a special division known as the Ontario St. Lawrence municipal rehabilitation services to operate in the St. Lawrence area; and establishment of the Ontario St. Lawrence parks commission.

SEEK MORE POWER

The speech referred, "with profound sorrow," to the recent death of Robert H. Saunders, chairman of the province's publicly-owned hydro-electric power commission.

Over the last 10 years, hydro power had been harnessed at a greater rate than ever before. The next big development was the St. Lawrence "and this year will see marked progress on huge works."

"The province's concern is . . . with all types of power and energy development and for that reason it is giving encouragement and support to the Ontario Hydro's active participation in the development of atomic energy for peacetime uses."

As well as providing employment, the highway program would help meet requirements of the 1,487,000 vehicles registered in 1954, an increase of six per cent.

The secondary road system in development areas would be integrated into the king's highway system, numbered and shown on road maps. A new system of highway classification would be adopted. Construction of mining and forestry access roads would be speeded up. Steps would be taken to encourage municipalities to embark on road construction works of a permanent character.

PLAN OTHER WORKS

Further extension was planned in public works—on Ontario hospitals, other public buildings and conservation projects.

The speech closed its reference to job-creating projects by saying: "My government is keeping the unemployment situation under review and it is willing and indeed eager to participate in the full implementation of the unemployment assistance and the public investment measures proposed by the government of Canada at the Dominion-provincial conference of 1945-46."

Health services would be improved by: providing, on an experimental basis, vaccine to combat polio; aid for heart ailment research; better facilities in hospitals for care of premature infants.

Municipalities finding it difficult to sell debenture issues to meet cost of school construction were promised loans from the government's Ontario Municipal Improvement Corporation.

EXTEND SERVICES

Other proposals included: Payments of mothers allowances to Indian widows, whether residents of Indian reservations or not; bills covering rehabilitation services and allowances to disabled persons; joint federal and provincial assistance to the extent of 75 per cent to municipalities establishing civil defence organizations.

An Ontario Telephone Development Corporation would be established with authority to purchase or operate rural phone systems. Rural Hydro services, now reaching nine out of 10 Ontario farmers, would be further extended.

The speech forecast three measures dealing with investment to permit municipalities to issue term as well as serial debentures; to exempt municipal bonds or debentures from security transfer taxes; to classify bonds of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development as eligible investments for insurance. trust and loan companies.

New committees would be set up to study toll roads and the marketing of farm products. Other committees, on highway safety and on registration of liens, would report.

WILL AMEND ACTS

"Amendments to the Mining Act will be introduced to effect better administratiin of mine resources and adherence to the legal requirements concerning prospecting and the staking of claims."

There would be amendments, aimed at improved administration of lands and forests resources, to the Forest Fires Prevention Act, the Public Lands Act, the Provincial Land Tax Act, and the Game and Fisheries Act.

The speech mentioned hurricane Hazel which caused 76 deaths and heavy property damage last October, mostly in central Ontario.

To avoid repetition of the disaster, houses in the seriously damaged flood areas were being condemned and owners compensated. The lands would be used for flood control and conservation purposes.

Douglas Denies CCF Is Split On Tax Issue

REGINA (CP) — Premier Douglas says the press deliberately tried to lead people to believe the CCF stand on a federal income tax proposal has caused a split within the Quebec section of the party.

The premier's remarks, made at a CCF provincial council meeting which ended Saturday, were contained in a statement released Monday by the provincial office.

Mr. Douglas said the press was trying to divert attention from the "true facts" of the tax proposal, an offer to grant residents of any province imposing an income tax a 10-per-cent reduction in federal income tax.

Govts. Agree On Civil Defence Program for '55

TORONTO (CP) — Provinci Secretary W. M. Nickel of O tario said today the Dominion go ernment and the province of O tario have agreed on a co-opera tive civil defence program for 195

The program will provide from both governments to munic pal civil defence organizations, h said. Announcement of the agre ment was also made by Healt Minister Martin in Ottawa.

Municipalities now are assure of reimbursement of 75 per cen of approved civil defence expe ditures, whether the organizatio is operated solely by a munic pality or in conjunction with othe municipalities in its metropolita area, Mr. Nickel said.

The federal government will pa half the cost, and the provinc and municipalities will each pa 25 per cent, he said. Payment will be made on a basis of 1 cents a person by the federal government.

The announcement said it is understood that, for 1955 at least concentration will be put on the development of civil defence in the metropolitan areas, the main centres of population.

Canada's Grain, Flour Exports Cut by Third

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's exports of grain and flour were reduced in the 1954 calendar yea almost $300,000,000 to $600,000,000 the biggest percentage drop since the 1920s.

Exports of newsprint, woodpulp lumber and metals increased bu the grain drop reduced over - al shipments to $3,876,134,000, down al most six per cent from $4,117,406,000 in 1953. Volume declined by 3. per cent and prices by 2.4 pe cent, the bureau of statistics reported today.

A bureau official estimated tha the 1954 grain - and - flour de cline, amounting to about 33 pe cent, was the steepest since th drop of 40 per cent in 1929, jus before the world depression. Federal trade officials have foreca an increase in grain exports fo 1955, based on bad crops oversea and increasing demand for milling grades of wheat.

BRITAIN'S DILMMEA MISUNDERSTOOD

"U.S. News and World Report" in its most recent issue publishes an interview with K. C. Wu, former governor of Formosa who broke with Chiang Kai-Shek in 1953. His analysis of Far Eastern affairs is intensely interesting. It may well be that his interpretation of the policies of the Chinese Communists is correct when he says that it would be impossible for the United States to "even blunder into war with them," startling though that may seem to us.

It is, however, painfully clear that when he considers the position of Great Britain he completely fails to grasp that nation's dilemma in today's world of uncertain peace.

Wu says that Communist China does not endeavor to seize Hong Kong, a relatively simple task, because Hong Kong serves as a wedge driven between Britain and the United States. If the Communists seized it, "they would inevitably drive Great Britain to adopt a sterner policy toward them, and follow your leadership."

That may be true. But Wu then says that Britain does not want a third great world war "because Great Britain will be in danger of being relegated to a third or fourth-rate power, and therefore they want to keep on dragging along the situation."

If Wu thinks relegation to a third or fourth-rate power is the gravest danger to Britain, he entirely misses the whole point of the British problem. In this atomic age it is not relegation but extermination which will stare Britain in the face if ever the cold war becomes a hot one. Failure to realize that point is probably at the root of the widespread misunderstanding of Britain's policy. For her, situated so close to Russia's air bases, there can be no realistic hope of victory and even scant hope of survival in the event of a new world conflict.

BLIND TYPISTS

The Brockville Recorder and Times professes pleasant amazement that a blind typist should be able to produce a letter free of typing errors. The letter originally had been dictated into a recording device.

Typing is a mechanical operation. The position of the keys is constant. The machine, when working properly, marshals words in mechanically perfect lines and the tinkle of a bell warns when the end of the line is near. The touch-typing system, once learned, is most perfect when it is most mechanical.

For this reason typing is one form of work ideally suited to blind workers. Dependence on a sense of position on the typewriter's keyboard rather than on the sight of the keys, and greater concentration on learning standard typing procedures thoroughly, might account for the proficiency of blind typists.

An errorless letter by a blind typist should cause little amazement. It is because errors are so commonplace in the typing done by sighted typists (sorry, girls!) that this feat causes amazement at all.

There are, however, definite handicaps for blind typists. Unless letters are dictated accurately and precisely, and difficult words spelled out properly, the letters, mechanically perfect, are likely to be grammatic monstrosities. Blind typists cannot search dictionaries to comfort their bosses, double check figures, or correctly sign the boss' name to the finished letter.

Blind typists would find working in government offices especially difficult. In the Departments of National Revenue, Finance and Defence Production, figures have to be seen to be believed.

PORK BARREL POLITICS

Time was, before the advent of the welfare state, that the pork barrel played a large and somewhat unsavory part in politics. Sinecure appointments, government contracts and the like were the reward of the party stalwarts.

Nowadays the political pork barrel is very largely a thing of the past. In its place is the welfare state, in which not merely a few party stalwarts, but virtually everyone in the country, imagines himself to have a vested interest.

Tampering with the imagined blessings of the welfare state, therefore, tends to evoke the same angry protest from the public at large as did the pork barrel reforms from the ward-heelers of a couple of decades ago.

Faced with the choice between pork barrel welfare and lower taxes, the elector manifests a perfectly understandable tendency to cling firmly to the reality of the social security pork barrel rather than to trade it for intangible promise of lower taxes.

Chances are, therefore, politics being the art of the possible, that high taxes will continue to characterize the contemporary political scene until such time as the public recognizes that people are best served, not by a welfare pork barrel, but by making the financial burdens of government as light as possible.

LEGALIZED ROBBERY

How unemployment insurance may be abused at the taxpayers' expense is revealed in a recent Associated Press despatch from the United Kingdom.

Two housewives in Oldham, it seems, conceived the bright idea of hiring each other to do the family washing. Each Monday they met to exchange laundry and to stamp each other's insurance compensation books.

At the end of six months, having qualified for unemployment insurance, they fired one another and each then claimed jobless insurance. When the period under which they were entitled to benefits ended, they re-hired each other, took in one another's laundry for a further six months, then fired each other all over again and began once more to collect insurance.

Tragic is the comment of an official of the British Labor Ministry, who is reported to have said, "I don't think there's anything we can do about it . . . it is probably going on all over the country."

Thoughtful Canadians may be forgiven for wondering whether the same sort of thing, or some variation thereof, may not be happening occasionally in Canada as well.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE LOOK ON LOVELINESS

Every day of our lives we are influenced by the things we see and enjoy. Unconsciously we take note but the impression remains. That is why a beautiful and happy environment means so much to us all. Loving all beauty we keep inviting it into the innermost areas of our entire being. As we look on beauty it looks back at us!

In the play 'Abraham Lincoln," that I saw so many years ago, I recall one thought that was expressed by one of the chroniclers. He said that in looking upon greatness, as it passed by, and appreciating it, we too became great! I think that is what happens when we look upon loveliness of any character. That loveliness enters into our mind and heart and becomes a part of us.

People are interested in change. I have been told that the advertising campaign of a great auomobile manufacturing company which has advertised "the new look" to their cars has been very successful, and I can understand why. People not only like but insist upon changes, so that when applied to a product so universally bought an an automobile, the interest is aroused at once when attention is called to "the new look."

How often people take upon themselves characteristics that other people possess. And how true it is that in looking upon loveliness we partake of it so that we are made happier, and pleasanter because of the experience. Nature is a storehouse of beauty. I have never known anyone who devoted his life to the study of nature who didn't have a kindly nature, as well as an inspiring one. Such people become wedded to every phase of nature.

The love of beauty is a natural thing. The more it is cultivated the greater becomes our enjoyment and appreciation for all things that are beautiful. With no trees, flowers, sunsets, birds, floating clouds, and thousands of other evidences of beauty, what a drab and difficult world this would be!

FAMILY RESEMBLANCE

I wonder in the years gone by
If some one in my line
Was just as careless as am I
And kept a desk like mine?
Was it with papers laden deep
Of every sort and kind
That when a memo he would keep
No pencil he could find?

So many heedless things I do
There must have been back there
An ancestor of mine who threw
His coat upon a chair.
He must have strewn his things about,
Left books right where he sat,
And every dresser drawer pulled out,
Or why should I do that?

He must have been forgetful, too;
Made dates he never kept.
In much that tidy people do
He must have been inept.
They say the bloodstream carries on
Through the ancestral tree;
If that is true, then I'm the one
Who must have been like me.

Snow Balks Progress

(New York Times)

The winter's problem of snow removal must be one of the oldest known to man. It is all too easy to imagine the expression of the first householder as he emerged from his cave one morning to find before him ten inches of newly fallen snow. His expression seems a little puzzled? No doubt. But his puzzlement is not about the texture of snow, which on the whole is rather soft and pleasant, but about how to get rid of the miserable stuff. It may be assumed that the first householder is the same one who the day before invented the wheel, and so intellectually is a bit above his neighbors. Yet he is puzzled. What can be used to remove snow? He can be imagined as scratching his head, trying out various on-the-spot inventions to get it out of there, and then picking up his shovel. That implement he had invented a fortnight before the wheel. It is too dreadfully easy to imagine his expression as he stooped over and up, over and up, as he removed the snow from his path. And then to dissolve, as the movies say, to 1955, it also is too dreadfully easy to see the same expression on the face of any householder faced with snow. The expression still is of puzzlement, just as the implement still is a shovel.

• • •

There must be some way around both the expression and the implement, there must be some easy way to get rid of the snow. It is not for lack of trying that none has been found, for the wish for an easy way is as deeply ingrained in human nature as the wish to sit down. The two are, of course, not unrelated, for the opportunity to sit down sufficiently in the winter is dependent on the quantity of snow. The more to be shoveled, in short, the less rest. It is true that since the gloomy morning when the first man met the results of the first snowfall a number of remedial devices have been created. The railroad and the county commissioners have huge rotary plows to clear their tracks and roads. These, however, are in the pay of the corporations, which naturally are known to have the best of everything that is available. Smaller plows are on sale, too, the kind that can be hitched to tractors, or even pint-size gasoline garden cultivators. The direct descendant of the first man, not having married money, can only dream of these things as he turns the pages of the mail-order catalogue. In a real snowfall, his expression is one of puzzlement, his implement still is a shovel.

• • •

It is not for lack of trying that he has not found an easy way to clear the sidewalk. Man and boy, this 1955 descendant has been working on the problem as far back as he can remember. The curious thing about it is that he never learns. Year after year he tries the same invention, forgetting each time that only twelve months before it proved a failure. As a boy, he nailed two boards together in the form of an inverted V, and then, putting a weight on a crosspiece, pulled the contraption along the sidewalk. His sister, who was the weight, enjoyed the ride very much, and the plow did indeed clear up to three inches of very light snow. But heavy snow, the common kind which has a high content of rain, it would not touch, and a second snow it could not lift over the banks made by the first. Yet year after year, the grown man nails boards together in the form of an inverted V. His granddaughter is the weight, now, and she will enjoy the ride very much. As he builds his plow, he tells her that this is the way he did it as a boy, the inference being that an old family trait of inventive genius still lingers. He does not tell her, for he refuses year after year to remember, that the thing never worked. Only the shovel, then and now, moves snow.

• • •

No indeed, it is not for lack of trying that he has not found the easy way. As a boy, he experimented with turning the garden hose on the snow. This reduced the snow to slush, which when the sun went down was changed at once to ice. Even now, the impulse lingers to try that hose again, to see if the system after all might not work. As a boy he thought of salt but that made neat little holes like a good swiss cheese, but did not clear the walks. As a boy, he violently advocated letting the snow remain where it fell, until the warmth of spring should come along to dispose of it in nature's way. He was overruled, as a boy, mainly by women even now he advocates this, and still is overruled, still mainly by women. No, it is not for lack of trying that he has not found the easy way. There must be some way, somehow, to get rid of that miserable stuff, snow. To change a man's expression from one of puzzlement, and the implement from a shovel.

Poverty Pond Badly Missed

(The Printed Word)

Years ago in wintertime in one locality, fifteen or twenty boys with hockey sticks and skates would gather on a rink or, more frequently, a frozen pond, known as Poverty Pond. Here a puck would be thrown down and a disorganized game, in which each lad tried to keep the puck to himself and away from the others, would ensue. More often than not there would be two or three pucks of various sizes and shapes on the ice. This would lead naturally to the formation of what the sociologists now call "peer groups." The big, skilful boys would chase one puck and the small fellow with weak ankles would stumble happily about with other lads of roughly equal ineptness and enthusiasm.

Today, it has become the fashion to organize even very young boys into regular hockey leagues. Some aspects of this are disquieting. Each team has an adult coach and the objective, quite frequently, is to win the game. The skilful boys still have a lot of fun although they are apt to be tense because they may get a manly tongue-lashing from the coach if they make a mistake. The moderately skilful boys do not get as much exercise as they might but they feel themselves to be a part of the team. The little fellow with weak ankles has a hard time. He sits on the bench and his feet get cold. When he obtains grudging permission to play a few moments he is promptly knocked down by a hustling expert. He can do nothing right or useful, but to quit and go his lonely way is a hard choice for a nine-year-old. It requires more maturity than is possessed by most of the adults who have put him on this spot.

His hurt is often justified on the grounds that the organization is doing the greatest good for the greatest number but statistics on juvenile delinquency do not prove this. The answer is not a weak-ankles league. It is better to try, however belatedly, to back away from so much organization and recover something of the merry, bumbling poverty-pond atmosphere.

Little Girl Was Stumped

(Los Angeles Examiner)

Third grade pupils in a California school were asked to draw pictures of what they wanted to be when they grew up. One little boy turned in a picture of himself as a plane pilot. Another drew himself driving a fire engine. But one little girl turned in a blank piece of paper. When the teacher asked why, she explained:

"I want to be married—but I don't know how to draw it."

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

NOT SUFFICIENT WITNESSES

Stories brought by men who were prisoners of the Japanese in the last war are so grotesque and horrifying as almost to pass belief.

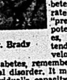
As we ponder the awfulness of war, and especially of war between Christian and non-Christian nations, we are brought face to face with the fact that many centuries the Christian Church has been neglecting a responsibility very definitely laid upon by its Founder. His command was that we go forth and witness to our faith to the ends of the world. The noble missionaries who went out from Rome, and later from Ireland and the north countries, did carry Christianity to Europe. But there the witnessing largely stopped. When William Carey, 150 years ago, tried to call the attention of the Church to its missionary duty, he was scoffed at and reviled.

A Japanse labor camp or a modern Chinese prison was or is a horrible and dreadful thing because the nations that run them are not Christian. The cruelty of Oriental prison camps is, among things, the retaliation which has come upon a Christan world order which plunged into the Orient to exploit but did not go there in sufficient force to witness to Christian faith and to its belief in democracy.

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

THE SUGAR IN THE BLOOD



Dr. Brady

If blood sugar tests show as much as 0.16% or more an hour or two after an ordinary meal, or 0.14% or more after an eight hours fast (as before breakfast in the morning) it is likely that the patient has diabetes, or at any rate it indicates "pre-diabetes" or potential diabetes, that is, the tendency to develop diabetes.

Diabetes, remember, is a functional disorder. It means that the individual's capacity to metabolize (assimilate, oxidize, burn, utilize) carbohydrates (sugars, starches) is not so good as it should be.

Being a functional deficiency, diabetes may cause so little disturbance of health that it goes unrecognized for many years or perhaps is discovered incidentally in a life insurance examination.

Being functional, diabetes may be of any grade of severity, from the mildest temporary inability to handle sugars and starches, to virtual cessation of the production of insulin by the islands (little groups of specialized cells) of Langerhans in the pancreas.

So the diagnosis of diabetes in many instances is a question, not of the finding of sugar in the urine or more than 0.14 to 0.16% of sugar in the blood, but of the opinion of the physician who has studied the patient.

As the top authority, Dr. Elliot P. Joslyn, in his famous work Treatment of Diabetes Mellitus:

> "The pancrease is not a static organ like the brain or myocardium, unable to repair itself after injury."

Dr. Joslyn gives reasons for the assumption that new islands of Langerhans form to carry on the manufasture of insulin when the old ones have ceased functioning. And you know, folks, I don't believe any one would have the temerity to take issue with Dr. Joslyn on a question pertaining to diabetes, unless it be Brady. He will take issue with anybody at the drop of a hat, sometimes, if you have noticed, even with himself.

In Little Lesson No. 23, Training for Diabetes, for which send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope, I name the four main causes of diabetes, one being lack of daily exercise, physical work or play. The old timers called it "sedentary life." In the booklet I explain that moderate daily exercise, such as two miles of oxygen on the hoof is a distinct aid to carbohydrate metabolism. The daily constitutional, rain, shine, snow or blow, is medicine which one training for or handicapped by diabetes can't afford to do without.

The late great Dr. Osler mentioned as a causative factor of diabetes "intense application to business." This quaint conceit, like "sedentary life," might better be descrbed as excessive wear on the ischial tuberosities.

Again Dr. Joslyn, speaking of exercise in the treatment of diabetes, remarks that in former days he was always impressed with the better results obtained by ambulatory, as compared with hospital treatment, provided the patient's diet and hygiene had the same care. He adds that various patients on mountain hikes have tolerated unusual quantities of carbohydrate.

In other words, a reasonable amount of exercise, physical work, manual labor or active play—nothing violent, but no mamby-pamby work or play either, enables a diabetic to use an increased ration of starch and sugar in his diet.

Trees

I think that I shall never see
Aught lovely as a pulpwood tree.
A tree that grows through sunny noons
To furnish comic page cartoons,
A tree whose girth will prove its age
Is ample for a want ad page.
A tree with grace toward heaven rising,
Men macerate for advertising.
A tree that lifts its arms and laughs,
To be made into paragraphs.
A tree that falls before the saw,
A five-star final in the raw.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

If your friends don't telephone you as often as you think they should, maybe it is because they can't get you off the phone, once they do call.

The psychology of telephoning is this: if you call some one, it is up to you to terminate the conversation, in the thought that the other person may be busy or interrupted in some task. The person called always has the excuse to say, well, I guess I'll have to go, dear, I've got something on the stove. But if someone calls you, you assume they have time on their hands or they wouldn't have called. And you can therefore go on and on and on . . .

And many people do go on and on. I have two friends, one a man and one a woman, whom I never call on the phone because it means up to half an hour before I can disentangle their clutches. Over the years I have worked out a whole battery of excuses with which I can break off when they call me. Sometimes, I am expecting a long distance call I've put in. Or, oh, there's the door bell! Maybe I'm sorry, but I've got a chap here visiting me on business. That's a good one. My friend can visualize the poor fellow sitting there, while I'm tied onto the phone.

Mind you, it isn't as if I don't see these two friends frequently. Indeed, I usually see them once or twice every week. But there seems to be something cosy about the telephone, to them. It's sort of mouth to ear. If not hurried, they can think up things to say that never occur to them when you are face to face. It's cosy and confidential. And leisurely. My woman friend has an extension phone up to her bedroom, and she prefers to call me about 2 p.m. I can see her, after a nice comfortable lunch, reclining on her bed, her cigarettes handy. the telephone not necessarily even held in her hand, but resting by her ear on the pillow, while she indulges in a large, lazy chat with me, or whoever else is on her list.

So now I set the alarm on my small desk clock, whenever she calls; and after five minutes, I twist the setter, the alarm rings sharply. It's a dandy idea. She doesn't know what it's all, about. All I have to do is exclaim hastily: "I've got to go!"

And I do.

House Speaker Cracks Down On Members

OTTAWA (CP) — Speaker Rene Beaudoin cracked down Monday on Commons members who attempt to use divorce bills as an opportunity to criticize Parliament's way of handling divorces.

He said in the Commons he has firmly resolved not to allow discussion of parliamentary divorce procedure when divorce bills come up for approval in the House. Discussion at that time was out of order.

He interrupted R. R. Knight (CCF—Saskatoon) who suggested that, since Parliament handles divorces of Newfoundland and Quebec, members from those two provinces should be given the job of studying the divorce bills.

At present, the Commons committee which studies divorces includes representatives from all parties in the House.

Explaining the reason for his ruling, Mr. Beaudoin said:

"If the honorable member wishes to submit by way of a bill some other method by which these divorce bills can be dealt with he will have ample opportunity to incorporate whatever suggestions he may have to offer.

"But I do not think it is in order on the second reading (approval in principle) of these bills to make such suggestions and I would like the honorable member's co-operation in respect to this point."

Mr. Knight said he agrees with Mr. Beaudoin's ruling.

CIO, AFL Make Final Attempt To Effect Merger

By NORMAN WALKER

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—CIO leaders today invaded the winter meeting grounds of AFL chiefs in a make-or-break try to merge their labor organizations.

Both the CIO group and the AFL hierarchy view the merger talks as having arrived at a showdown stage.

Leaders from both camps indicate privately that if no merger agreement can be hammered out now, after two years of continuous effort, they might as well forget about the plan for some time to come.

President George Meany of the AFL said he regarded the talks today and Wednesday with CIO president Walter Reuther as crucial, and added that he was not pessimistic over the outcome.

However, the same issue that has wrecked previous moves to weld the AFL's 10,000,000 and the CIO's 5,000,000 members into a single labor federation is still the main roadblock.

WANTS ASSURANCE

This is the CIO's fear that, as a smaller organization, its unions would be swallowed and subjected to "raids" on their memberships. The CIO still looks for specific assurance that its unions' "integrity" would be preserved under a merged setup, but it is a question how far in that direction the AFL is willing to go.

TO ANNOUNCE ROUTES

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—The New York state thruway authority expects to make recommendations in the next three or four weeks on routes for four proposed expressways, a spokesman said Monday. The new highways would run, generally, from Albany north to the Canadian border, from the Binghamton-Elmira area to the St. Lawrence river, from the Main thruway at Harriman West across the southern tier, and from Brooklyn across Long Island to Riverhead.

ROBBED MOTHER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas Roy Clarke, 37, who robbed his crippled mother of $1,200 after beating her over the head with a gun, was sentenced Wednesday to six months in jail. Mrs. Elizabeth Clarke said her son threw a stepladder at her during an argument, hit her in the face with a gun and took the money from a hiding place. She said he later returned about $1,100 of the money.

PRINCESS MARGARET PROVES SYMBOL OF UNITY IN TRINIDAD

Twenty thousand children, white and colored, gave Princess Margaret a tremendous welcome at San Fernando, Trinidad. Both children and adults forgot their differences with authorities, who are faced with both Islamic and Hindu minority problems, to honor their symbol of unity.

Visit of the Princess to San Fernando is a great event in the lives of the children who will talk of it the rest of their lives. They carried "Welcome" signs, banners and flags, and made a festival of the brief royal visit. (Central Press Canadian Photos.)

Want Copyright Law Extended To Journalism

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Press and its radio-TV subsidiaries are seeking two main changes in the copyright law to bring journalistic works — broadcast or printed—clearly under copyright protection.

Canada's national news co-operative and its subsidiaries, Press News and Broadcast news Limited, made these requests in a brief submitted to a three - man royal commission studying Canada's copyright, patent and trade mark laws:

1. That the "works" of news agencies, newspapers, radio and TV broadcasting companies and their journalists be included as "literary works" in the Copyright Act. This would make them clearly subject to copyright protection.

2. That for purposes of the act the distribution of news by radio, TV or other electronic means to a series of individual receivers constitute a "public performance." This would give the copyright holders of the distributed material a recourse in law under the act.

Princess Given Rain-Drenched But Fond Farewell

ST. GEORGE, Grenada (AP) — Grenadians gave Princess Margaret a rain-drenched but fiery farewell Monday night as she boarded the royal yacht Britannia to continue her month-long tour of the British West Indies.

Two hundred men and boys stood in pelting rain around the semi-circular harbor, each holding a tall bamboo stick topped with burning kerosene - soaked rags. Fireworks burst from old Fort George at the harbor entrance.

The Princess was to stop at St. Vincent for a few hours this afternoon and then continue to Barbados.

Grenada's farewell ceremony for the Princess ended an island-wide holiday honoring her visit. Schools, government offices and most business establishments closed for the day. However, rain spoiled her hopes for some surf bathing at Granadanse beach.

Bill Boss Sees Red Army's Star Rising in Russia

Editor's Note: Last April, Bill Boss, Canadian Press staff writer, returned to Canada after six months inside the Soviet Union. This article is his interpretation of the causes and effect of Georgi Malenkov's resignation today as Soviet premier.

By BILL BOSS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Marshal Nicolai Bulganin's selection as premier of Russia, succeeding Georgi Malenkov, places the Red Army in a commanding position.

Marshal Klementi Voroshilov holds the figurehead position as president of the union or chief of state. Now another army officer has taken over as administrative leader of the country.

If Bulganin's former post of defence minister is taken over by his erstwhile deputy, Marshal Gregory Zhukov, discreet admirer of both President Eisenhower and Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, the world may be entering an era of quasi-reasonable relations with the Soviet Union.

OPINIONS DIFFER

There was speculation in some quarters today that Khrushchev actually has taken over the real authority, with Bulganin as his puppet.

But the manner of Bulganin's election, nominated by Khrushchev and presumably with prior agreement within the central committee of the party, may indicate instead that collective leadership still is in vogue in Russia.

There is room for speculation that today's developments are the result of a policy of compromise. Were the army in absolute control or dictatorship around the corner, Malenkov would have been replaced by something closer to a coup d'etat.

Journalistically, today's developments will make Izvestia, the Red Army newspaper, a better guide than Pravda, the party organ, to the political complexion and economic state of Russia.

Capitol Film Tells 2 Stories

"We Want A Child", a celluloid record of a young couple's desire for a family and the fulfillment of this longing is a quiet, restrained and ofttimes jerky presentation showing all this week at the Capitol Theatre to persons over 16.

The picture, produced in Denmark, is shown in Canada under the auspices of the Canadian Child Health Association as an educational feature.

The picture tells two stories. One is the story of a young couple from the day of their marriage until the birth of their first child after fears that their marriage would be childless. The other is that of a single girl who becomes involved with a married man and becomes pregnant out of wedlock.

Dr. Karen Berg, one of Denmark's outstanding gynecologists, plays the doctor. During the film he deals realistically and sympathetically with the problems of the wed and the un-wed mother. He argues powerfully against abortion with the unmarried mother-to-be.

English has been dubbed into the soundtrack and voices on the screen match the action closely and easily.

"We Want A Child," was produced in 1949 and was an award winner at the Venice Film Festival. Its Canadian showings have the endorsation of leading Canadian churchmen, government officials, educators and health authorities. Its 72 minute running time, about half the length of the original, contains most of the educational material.

It concludes by showing the birth of a baby.

UNEMPLOYMENT RISES

WASHINGTON (AP)—The labor and commerce departments reported Monday that unemployment in the United States rose by more than 500,000 in January while total employment fell about the same amount in the mid-winter hiring lull. Unemployment climbed to a total of 3,347,000 or 5.2 per cent of the civilian labor force.

Ticket Agent Acts Quickly To Save Girl

NORTH BAY (CP)—A scribbled note, slipped to a ticket agent by a girl who claimed she was kidnapped, Monday night brought about the arrest of a man charged with possession of a concealed weapon.

Grace Gabanyiez, 17, wrote the note with an eyebrow pencil and slipped it to Eric Elson.

"I have been kidnapped. . . . Get help. . . . He has a gun," it said.

Elson pulled the girl into the ticket office and called CNR police. Paul Valanoff, 31, of Port Colborne, was arrested after a revolver and six-inch hunting knife were found in his car, police said.

Police quoted the girl as saying she met Valanoff about a year and a half ago. He was introduced by her brother, Nick, convicted of theft Monday at Welland.

She said Valanoff called her Monday and told her he had something important to tell her about Nick. After she met him, they drove straight to North Bay, she said.

Defence Costly

OTTAWA (CP)—The government spent on defence 42 cents of every dollar it received in the 1953-54 fiscal year.

A return tabled Monday in the Commons by the finance department for S. R. Balcom (L—Halifax) said 12 cents was used for national welfare and social services and three cents for veterans pensions. The department did not say how the remaining 43 cents was spent.

TRICKY FELLOW

BOSTON (AP) — Lorenzo E. Morin, 29, was sentenced Monday to two months for robbing church poor boxes with a cane tipped with bubble gum. Police said Morin's technique was to light a candle at the altar and while kneeling as though in prayer sneak the cane into the poor box to lift coins.

Four Arrested At Gunpoint For Break-ins

NEWMARKET (CP)—Police arrested four persons from Calgary at gunpoint Monday night in a raid on a lonely cottage on the shore of Lake Simcoe near this town 30 miles north of Toronto.

Charged with breaking and entering were James Budd, his brother, Kenneth, and Boyd Mason. James Budd's wife, Evelyn, was charged with receiving stolen goods.

Police said they found loot from a dozen break-ins in the cottage.

They said they think they may have broken "the craftiest and biggest safe-cracking ring ever to operate in Ontario."

Police said they seized three lock picks, 66 blasting caps, 12 lengths of fuse and "enough nitro-glycerine to blow up half the cottages along the lake."

Three Countries Not Paying Debts

OTTAWA (CP)—The government says Nationalist China, Greece and Romania are not making payments on debts to Canada totalling $80,280,000.

A return tabled Monday in the momons for Ross Thatcher (CCF—Moose Jaw—Lake Centre) by the finance department also said that Czechoslovakia has resumed payments on its indebtedness to Canada. Czechoslovakia's debt now totals $9,900,000.

The return said the Chinese government has indicated it is unable to pay its $49,426,000 debt because of a shortage of foreign exchange and heavy military expenditures.

Romania, which owes Canada $24,329,000, has not paid interest on its indebtedness since 1941 "and no reasons have been officially communicated to the Canadian government."

Greece, which has not paid any interest or principal on its $6,525,000 debt since 1931, has informed Canada it is unable to make payments.

SEE SLESS DANGER

DENVER (AP)—A Conservative member of the British Parliament says the likelihood of war between Red China and the United States has lessened "because China knows what will happen if she tries to take Formosa." The statement was made by Hon. Richard Wood in an address Monday night. The son of Britain's former ambassador to the United States, Lord Halifax, he is on an eight-week speaking tour of the United States and Canada.

Eight Military Men Presented With Decorations

OTTAWA (CP)—Eight military men, including a member of the Royal Air Force, were presented awards by Governor-General Massey Monday at a Government House investiture.

Three Canadian army officers who served in the Korean war were awarded the Military Cross. The insignia of commander in the Order of the British Empire went to Air Commodore David Neal Roberts, currently attached to the United Kingdom high commissioner's office here as air force adviser.

Capt. John G. Jenkins of Liverpool, N.S., won the Military Cross for "gallantry and devotion to duty of the highest degree" during intensive shelling in a Korean battle.

Weddings

SEXSMITH—SMITH

A pretty mid-winter wedding took place in Dunn Memorial Presbyterian church, New Toronto, on Saturday, January 15, when Martha Cranston Smith daughter of Mrs. Smith and the late David Smith of Scotland, became the bride of Edward Garrett Sexsmith of Toronto, only son of Mrs. Sexsmith, Tweed and the late Dr. Earl Sexsmith. The Rev. Vesey performed the ceremony.

The front of the church was enhanced with vases of white 'mums, while the guest pews were marked with white and pink carnations. During the ceremony, Mrs. Carlson of Toronto, sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "A Wedding Prayer", accompanied by Mr. Roberts at the organ.

Given in marriage by Mr. Jack MacFadden of New Toronto, the bride was lovely in a ballerina length dress of white net with lace insets. The strapless shoulders were concealed with a long-sleeved lace jacket. The waist-length veil fell from a net half-hat which was trimmed with seed pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses and lily of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss M. Jardine of New Toronto, was gowned in white taffeta with black embroidered applique trim, and net stole. Her bouquet was Johanna Hill roses and lily of the valley.

Mr. Ron Smith, cousin of the groom, was groomsman, and Mr. Bill Wensley, another cousin was usher.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at "Pickfair," Mimico, for the forty-five guests, the bride's mother receiving in rose silk crepe with black accessories. The groom's mother assisted, in a navy blue silk gown which was designed with white satin insets.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, Syracuse, Rochester and Buffalo, the bride wore a powder blue suit, white hat and black accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Sexsmith are now residing at 36 Empress Crescent, Toronto. The groom is a member of the Toronto Police force.

ST. VALENTINE

The girl's a slender thing and fair,
With dimpled cheek and eyes ashine;
The youth is tall, with bashful air;
Heigho! a fond and foolish pair—
The day is yours, St. Valentine.

He says: "My heart will constant prove,
Since every beat of it is thine;
The sweetest joy of life is love."
The birds are mating in the grove—
The day is yours St. Valentine.

What matter that the wind blows chill
Through leafless tree and naked vine,
That snowdrifts linger on the hill,
When warm love makes the pulses thrill?
The day is yours, St. Valentine.

Donald Graham Addresses H-S Assoc. on 'Program Planning'

It is regrettable that so few of those interested in Home and School Association work availed themselves of an exceptional opportunity yesterday afternoon in the Collegiate auditorium to hear first hand how Home and School Association programs might be planned to benefit the relationship between teacher and parents, and that involving the parents, pupils and teacher. But of the 40 odd who did, and the degree of interest shown, there should be a marked improvement in the monthly programs that are to come.

Mr. Donald Graham, graduate of Toronto University, chairman of the educational commission, Canadian Council of Christians and Jews; of the board of directors Big Brothers; of the Athletic advisory board of the University of Toronto; of the board of directors of Pickering College, chairman of the education committee of Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation; Consultant Canadian Education Association; of the Kellog project for the improvement of educational leadership in Canada; of the advisory council Metropolitan school board; as well as being connected with the group development at Bethel, Maine; the University of Michigan; Ohio State University; acting as consultant in workshop procedure; in 1954 director workshop in human relations, University of British Columbia, and at present, director of education at Forest Hill Village schools, brought to his listeners a concise and clarified view of program planning, and demonstrated how to obtain the most effective assistance from the speaker.

GOOD PROGRAM PLANNING

"Good program planning," stated Mr. Graham, depends on the amount of preparation done by the group of people in the organization. It is a mistake to put the onus of program planning on one individual. The purpose of the meeting should be clear cut. Why are we here? and how best to achieve results. Discussion period should be planned in advance, and should not be at the tail end of a speech."

One method of getting the audience interested is by getting them involved in discussion. Getting them to think by means clarification; that is by asking questions which make the meaning clearer; or by elaboration', having the speaker tell more about the subject he has been discussing. By these means what is of concern to the audience is made known.

BLOCKS TO PROGRESS

In dealing with 'blocks' to progress in H-S Association work, Mr. Graham outlined four of the more common ones: tradition—a thing has been done in such and such a manner, and why change it?; the idea that seems to be prevalent is that the meetings should be of entertainment, often involving the showing of slides, which in themselves are of value, but on the program, have no bearing with the work; this is a mistake; the program should deal with the things that matter, and not be irrelevant. The planning by one person is a mistake; it is not a job for one, needs more minds interested to meet the need of the association and then there is the tendency to depend on a speaker, to come and passively listen, as 'lumps on a log'. "There is in all organizations," Mr. Graham added, "a tremendous potential of ability which might be made to function."

DIFFERENCE IN PROGRAMS

Then, too, it is necessary to bear in mind that programs intended for elementary schools are not suitable for the secondary schools. There is a feeling that the teacher knows more than the parent; also at this time the adolescent is more interested in the opposite sex than in curricular work, and the parents feel that children can look after themselves. Those representing Home and School Associations must be serious as to the districts in which they operate; what are the prerogatives of the staff, and of the parents. A social evening is not the time for finding out 'how Bobbie is doing.' it is purely for getting acquainted. However, there are evenings when parent and teacher may visit each other and talk over the progress or non progress being made by the pupil in question.

Some ways in which a good program is planned and carried through might be obtained by means of a questionnaire. Have cards passed around and ask that any question which is of importance for clarification be written down; this to be answered at the appointed time. Find out what is of interest for the particular school, whether 'choosing a career'; 'adolescence', or 'study habits' or needs of the people concerned.

EVALUATIVE METHOD

Other ways would be the 'evaluative' procedure, by interviewing six or nine people and arriving at what the majority thinks; by being sensitive to current interests in education; by having a question box in which questions may be placed and then read and discussed. It is important to find out what matters to the people round about.

There must also be a clear cut purpose in what the Home and School Association has for its objective. The purpose of teachers and parents getting together is to help create an environment in which children can grow into mature, self-reliant and socially conscious adults. Each meeting should have a meaning.

Different kinds of programs should be used: "Meet the teacher night," would be well for fall meetings in which the parents come to the teachers' rooms to talk over individual problems. This supplements the report card, as the report card does not tell all that could be told. "Good Films" could be used also, such as "Shyness" and "Angry Boy" for elemenary schools; and "Scattered Showers", and "Fresh Variable Winds," and "Ins and Outs", for the secondary.

INVOLVE SENIOR STUDENTS

To get the senior students involved in the H-S work is fine; it not only lends interest to the work, but brings about a better relation between teacher, pupil and parent. The half sheet questionnaire is important as it bears questions relative to the program heard, which are to be ticked off as poor, good, very good, or excellent. These sheets are collected unsigned and at the next meeting read, and noted. By this means at the end of the year it shows how changes can be made to obtain better results—people become interested in the work.

Following the talk, cards were passed around on which questions pertaining to the parent-teacher problem; planning program; obtaining best lecturers and others of interest, were written down. These were collected, and judged according to the bracket in which one or more might be placed, and then read by Mrs. G. A. Bradford, to which Mr. Graham, in an easy and informal manner gave the answers, as a demonstration method which might be used at the discussion periods at Home and School meetings.

Mrs. L. Williams, president of the Collegiate H-S Association presided and welcome the assembly.

Mr. Graham was introduced by Mr. R. H. Tanner, and thanked, on behalf of the assembly, by Mrs. Nell O'Neil for his most instructive and informative talk.

Mr. Graham also spoke, having a panel discussion, at Quinte Secondary school, in the evening.

Christ Church E.B. Enjoys Social Time

Monday evening, the Evening Branch of the W.A., of Christ Church met in the parish hall with 45 present.

The worship service was under the leadership of the president, Mrs. A. Cooper. Following this, Mrs. J. Miles and Mrs. L. Blaker conducted a lively auction sale of delicious homecooking, and a variety of other articles.

The long tables were prettily arranged with white cloths centred by tall, red candles, while lovely heart-shaped cakes with red and white icing, sandwiches and Valentine serviettes lent a festive air to the occasion.

A sing-song and passing the parcel game, with Mrs. J. Hibbard at the piano were greatly enjoyed.

The hostesses for the occasion included: Mrs. W. Edwards, Mrs. H. Stevens, Mrs. J. Miles, Mrs. J. Fleming and the Misses F. Reid and A. Rodgers.

Melrose W.I. Hears Interesting Account of C.N.I.B. Work

The January meeting of the Melrose Women's Institute of the held at the home of Mrs. A. English with a small attendance due to the bad weather.

Mrs. J. McLaren opened the meeting.

Mrs. N. Demille introduced Mr. Timmins representative of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, who in turn introduced Mr. Robt. Paddon, assistant field secretary of the C.N.I.B. Mr. Paddon told of the first work among the blind in Canada in 1864 by the Grey Nuns at Montreal. It was not until 1872 that aid was available in Ontario and this consisted of the teaching of trades to school age children, such as piano tuning; chair caning. However no services were available for the adult blind until 1921 when Col. Baker expanded the services to include a department for pre-school age children. Workers could now go to the homes and prepare the blind children for school in Brantford.

The training of school age children is entirely attended to by the government with financial assistance given for clothes, if needed by the C.N.I.B. When the child leaves school he is assisted by the C.N.I.B. to independence in jobs such as cafeterias.

HOME TEACHERS

Home teachers visit the largest group—the aged, in their homes and teach handicrafts, knitting, leather work and the reading of Braille. For those who are unable to grasp Braille, there are talking books available from the library in Toronto, and machines are loaned from the local institution. These services are all financed through public goodwill.

Mr. Timmins and Mr. Paddon then graciously answered many pertinent questions that were asked by members.

Mrs. A. English warmly thanked the guest speakers on behalf of the Women's Institute.

Mrs. R. Badgley moved that $20 be donated to the C.N.I.B. this was seconded by Mrs. J. English.

Notes of acknowledgment for cards and parcels were read. Members were reminded of Achievement Day in Stirling on February 26.

It was decided that $5 be forwarded for the Korean project, also that all outstanding accounts be paid.

The February open meeting is to be held on the 25th.

Everyone joined in community singing, this was followed by a reading by Mrs. K. McMechan, "Let's Pass a Compliment" and "Weight Control," by Mrs. J. McFarlane.

Mrs C. Weese also gave a reading on "Hospital Growth", telling of the pest houses of the early ages through the first big change brought about by Florence Nightingale up to the present day high standards of hospitalization.

Mrs. N. Demille gave a humorous reading "People Will Talk", followed by the roll call, "How to Postpone Old Age."

Communion Breakfast Held By St. Joseph's

A large number of ladies of St. Joseph's parish attended a communion breakfast in the school hall, Sunday morning, after the 8 o'clock mass.

Mrs. H. Carr-Braint, president of St. Joseph's CWL welcomed the members and also guests from St. Michael's and Holy Rosary parishes.

The head table was centred with an attractively arranged spray of gold and blue chrysanthemums, a variety of colorful place mats over the white cloths and blue and gold serviettes added a pleasing effect.

After a delicious repast served by members of the Holy Name Society a spiritual bouquet was presented to Dr. Peterkin by Mrs. F. Maund.

A number of prizes were also distributed by Mrs. J. M. Lawn, for lucky-marked place mats.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. J. D. McKenzie then introduced the guest speaker, Dr. Edith Peterkin, who spoke on "The Lay Apostolate," and how Catholic action could be applied in every-day lives.

After her inspiring address she was graciously thanked by Mrs. R. Lynch.

This splendidly arranged event was convened and catered to by Mrs. J. D. McKenzie, assisted by Mrs. B. Lynch. The gentlemen who served were: H. Carr-Braint, J. D. McKenzie, B. Lynch, R. Kennedy, R. Park, J. M. Lawn, H. O'Neil and E. Labelle.

Musical Lecture Enjoyed by R.M.T.

The Belleville Branch of the Ontario Registered Music Teachers' Association held its first meeting of the year at the home of Mrs. F. E. Houston, Pine street, with Mrs. L. Dandeneau, president, in the chair. A large percentage of the members was present including members from Belleville, Picton and Stirling.

The first part of the meeting was taken up by business arising from the minutes of the last meeting and plans for the new year. These monthly meetings are important to every music teacher—a time when they can get together for inspiration and to discuss their mutual problems.

An inspirational, illustrated lecture was given by Mr. Eugene Lang. Mr. Lang commenced his lecture by saying what an important part music plays in the life of every individual, from the cradle to the grave. Too often, music is taken for granted. He stated that in 1953, in the United States more people attended concerts, than went to baseball and hockey games put together.

Through the medium of recordings, Mr. Lang illustrated the component parts of music, namely melody, rhythm, harmony, tone color and form. He also conducted a questionnaire among the teachers as to how the music of different recordings affected them.

To conclude Mr. Lang played a number of request recordings. Mrs. Dandeneau, on behalf of the teachers, thanked him for the time he had given to the teachers and for the splendid address.

At the conclusion of the meeting tea was served by the hostess.

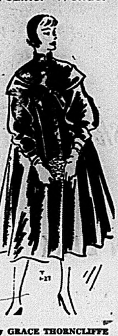
Weather Wonder



By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

RAINCOATS are getting prettier all the time and out they go, rain or shine on glamorous occasions, to be worn over date clothes and to the threatre. A typical entry is this design fashioned of water repellent rayon taffeta in navy blue or black, full flared to fit over wide skirts. The neckline is most attractive with its small stand up collar above a cuffed band at the shoulder yoke that ties in a bow in front.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

TODAY'S COURTESY TIP

One of the most maddening and belittling remarks you can make (and unfortunately it's a habit rampant in many families) is to say sarcastically when someone in the family has done you a courtesy, "Why the politeness?" or "This is so sudden. You must want me to do something for you." This is a sure way to encourage future lack-of-courtesy . . . and you'll deserve this lack.

PARTY HOURS FOR THE 2-YEAR-OLD

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My little daughter will be two years old next month, and I would like to give her a small party, her first birthday party. I just haven't happened to hear of a birthday party for such a young child, and I'm wondering what time of day would be best for this party. What hours would you suggest? — R.M.

I suggest that for the birthday party for your 2-year-old daughter you invite the little guests and their mothers to come about 11 o'clock in the morning, then serve an appropriate lunch and have the party end after this early lunch, so that the children will arrive home for their regular nap-time.

DON'T JUST REPEAT THE NAME

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a friend who always acknowledges an introduction by just repeating the name of the person being intoduced: "Mrs. Smith". . . "Miss Jones" . . . "Mr. Brown." To me this doesn't seem proper, sounds rather brusque. Is this a correct form? — Peggy H.

No . . . as you say, this just repeating the name does sound brusque, and usually somewhat affected. The standard form for acknowledgment of an introduction is "How do you do" . . . and to add the name to this, is in perfect form, "How do you do, Mrs. Smith?"

PAYING HOTEL EXPENSES FOR WEDDING ATTENDANTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Pease explain to my fiance and me (1) our responsibility as to paying the hotel expenses for our wedding attendants from out-of-town. His best man and two of his ushers are from out-of-town; the best man and one these ushers are married and their wives will be coming too. Three of my bridesmaids are from-out-of-town, and two of these are married. (2) Also have we any responsiblity about paying for their transportation? — Bride- to-be

(1) First let's wish that in-town relatives and or friends will offer to "house" the attendants from out-of-town. If not, the groom must make reservations and all arrangements to put up his attendants (their wives, too) at a hotel, and must pay all the expenses for their stay there. You or your family do the same for your attendants (their the same for your attendants—they (their husbands, too) are your guests, just as the groom's attendants (their wives, too) are his guests. Your family also provides transportation for your attendants from your house to the church, and for all the wedding attendants from the church to the reception. (2) All attendants pay their own transportation - expenses to and from the city where the wedding is to take place.

B.G.H. Nurses' Alumnae Holds Mixed Bridge

The Belleville General Hospital Nurses' Alumnae Association held its annual mixed bridge at the Ritchie Memorial residence on Thursday evening.

Despite the zero weather, a record crowd was in attendance with 40 tables in play.

Bridge prize winners were: ladies' first, Mrs. William McCreary; second, Mrs. Fred Fisher; third, Mrs. F. McKeown; low, Mrs. D. MacKinnon; men's high, Bruce Bishop; low, Tom Hookings.

The table lamp door prize was won by Mrs. Clyve Ryan.

The Alumnae wishes to extend a sincere thank you to Mrs. Clark James, who convened the bridge; to Mrs. Allan McCreary, who made all the arrangements for the tables and chairs; to Mrs. Harry Dowsett who was in charge of refreshments; to the local merchants for their kind donations; and to all those who helped to make this a most successful bridge.

Refreshments were served, climaxing an enjoyable evening.

Beauty

NAIL POLISH IN NEW COLORS

Fastidious girls no longer confine their beauty desires to a single bottle of nail polish. Having an eye for harmony in dress, they keep several polish bottles at hand.

Deep, rich shades of polish are suitable with furs and the tappings of the winter season. There are captivating tints to be found, ranging through the wine shades. They make the hands look snowy white by contrast. There is an American beauty shade that is lovely.

More delicate tones belong to the dear old summer when fabrics are sheer and dainty. Shell pink with white frocks; brighter ones with pastel colors; nasturtium when the hands have gone nutty-brown because of contact with sunlight.

Pomegranate is having a run with women who like to "be different." It is stunning with the black frock, looks well with green and grey. The lipstick then should be an orange-red if the color picture is to be harmonious. At cosmetic counters you will find combinations of lip tint and nail coloring of the same shades.

Cosmetic chemists are ever mindful of our pulchritude needs, ringing in exciting changes now and then. We're kind to them, too, flinging spending change their way to the tune of billions of dollars a year.

Other offerings include cardinal, French red, cherry, delicate mauves and natural tones.

You may find delight in corals because they make the fingertip sheaths look pearly and shell-like. They're a happy choice for the bride. Dark polish is too great a contrast to the bridal gown.

Beauticians suggest mixing applicantions. Combine onyx and orange-red and you have something exotic and stunning. You may even revel in gold or silver laid over your favorite selection.

Soups With Character

By Mary Moore

Somehow today I got a notion I was working extra hard. On morning devotions the minister had said each new day is as a clean sheet in a school exercise book, and urged that we use this new day to live abundantly. Fill the day as you would fill that exercise page from top to bottom, but keep it free from all blots.

So, thus inspired, I pitched in. My young people are to be home three strong this week-end. (My nephew Brian makes the third for he is living with me for 6 weeks while his parents are in the South.) I made four loaves of whole wheat bread and two pans of buns—1 for our house and the rest for the neighbors. I made a 2-quart potful of pea soup. I wrote two daily columns (this is one of them) and did the marketing, besides all the incidental meals, dishwashing, bedmaking that everybody does in a day—and for good measure gave my neighbor's car a push with my trusty vehicle.

Then along comes the following letter: "Dear Mary: What would I do without your help! The last time I wrote I had too many vegetables but this time it is too many soup bones and too much beef fat.

"Needless to say we've just bought another quarter of beef and the question is what to make from all those soup bones. Sometimes we have bones left over from the first quarter when we buy another. I make vegetable and pea soups to satisfy (or even please) the family but my beef noodle or Scotch Barley are both tasteless and colorless. Have you a recipe for either or both of them?

"What can I do with the fat? I use the suet for puddings (carrot, spotted dog, etc.), and frying steak. If I rendered it for what can I use it? It is not like lard. Can I use it in baking? deep frying? muffins? bread?. I could fill pages saying "thank you" . . hardly a day goes but that I use one of your recipes some date back as far as 1948 . . thank you for past help and what I know you will give.—M.C.

Isn't that a grand letter to get from such a busy gal? I thought since M.C. wants soup recipes and I want to give you the ingredients of the pea soup which is a-simmering on the stove right now they could be grouped together today.

SOUP STOCK

(For Scotch Broth and Beef Noodle.)

Four lbs. beef bones with some lean meat clinging to them, 2 quarts cold water, 1-2 cup each chopped onion, carrot, celery, 2 teaspoons salt, 6 peppercorns, 1 bay leaf, 2 whole cloves, 4 pepper berries. Let soak 1 hour—tying spices in a bag for easy removal. Bring to boiling point skim off scum, cover and simmer 3 hours. Chill until cold. Skim off fat. Discard bones, chop meat. Remove spices and leave in vegetables and meat.

For Scotch Broth—Add 4 tablespoons pot barley to broth and let 1 quart stand in cold place overnight to soak. Add 1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate, bring to boil and simmer until barley is tender. Add 1-2 cup finely chopped parsley. Taste to see if it needs salt and pepper. Genuine Scotch broth is made with mutton. Other vegetables or more of same may be added.

For Beef Noodle—Add noodles instead of barley and the same seasonings and to make it dark add 1 tablespoon caramel coloring or beef essence. You would need at least 1 cup of fine noodles measured dry for 1 quart

EMEM'S GREEN SPLIT PEA SOUP

One lb. green split peas soaked overnight in 2 quarts cold water with 1 bay leaf. In the morning add a ham bone leftover from baked ham— mine weighed nearly 1 lb.—and 1-2 cup chopped celery with leaves, 1 small onion chopped, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-2 teaspoon each pepper and monosodium glutamate. Simmer at least four hours. Remove bone, chop meat.

I'm serving the split pea soup with hot whole wheat rolls, breaded sweetbreads, large green salad, apple crumb, for dinner tonight.

NOTE:

Remainder of M.C.'s letter will be answered later.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GIRL WHO IS PROVING THAT SHE'S TOO YOUNG FOR MARRIAGE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 17, and the boy I love is 19. We wanted to get married, but my parents would not give their consent because they think we are too young.

Because of this, Joe and I have had an affair, and now I think I am going to have a child. I told Joe, and he said he is willing to run away and get married, and I think maybe this is the best thing to do and then tell our parents afterward.

What do you think? This would never have happened if we had been allowed to marry when we wanted to.—Wilma J.

Dear Wilma:

Why try to put the blame for what has happened on your parents? I quite agree with them that you were too young for marriage, and in refusing to accept responsibility for your own actions, you are proving it.

The only wise plan is for you and Joe to go together to your mother and tell her frankly what has happened. Nothing could be more foolish than for you to run away and get married, especially since there is no state in which you can do this, at 17, without your parents' consent, and you would have to lie about your age. In such case, your parents could have the marriage annulled, and then you wouldn't be a bit better off than you are now.

On the other hand, if you are honest about the situation, it might be that your parents would agree that it would be better for you to marry, under the circumstances, and, with their consent, the marriage laws of your state will permit it.

IF YOU BEHAVE RIGHT, IT'S ALL RIGHT

Dear Miss Fairfax:

One night a week, when the boys in the National Guard are drilling at the armory near where I live, visitors are allowed to go and watch them.

Several of my girl friends make a habit of going these nights, and I've heard them criticized by people who say they are just looking for an opportunity to pick boys up. These girl friends want me to go with them, but I wouldn't like to be criticized that way.

Do you think I would be considered to be chasing boys if I did go? — Pat H.

Dear Pat:

It all depends on yourself what people think about you. Watching the boys drill, and chasing them, are two separate and distinct things.

If you would enjoy going to watch the drill, there is no harm in that whatever, if you conduct yourself properly. If you giggle and flirt and act like a silly girl, that's something else again. Surely you have judgment enough yourself to know the difference, haven't you?

So tell your girl friends that you would like to go with them if they are going to behave like nice girls, otherwise you wouldn't care to go in their company.

DIEFENBAKER ASKS

Unless there was a change in the law which brought that situation about there would be a drying up of information sources on which Canadian newspapers must depend.

His reference was to the ruling by British Columbia courts striking out the right of defence of Blair Fraser, Ottawa editor of Maclean's magazine, in a libel suit brought by Gordon Wismer, former B.C. attorney-general.

At a pre-trial examination for discovery, Mr. Fraser refused to divulge his sources of information for a 1952 article in Maclean's entitled "B.C. Coalition Commits Suicide." An examination for discovery is a form of examination preceding a trial in civil suits. It varies by provinces.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the decision in the case means any newspaper can be sued for libel if it refuses to disclose its information sources.

Mr. Garson said he does not see what the Fraser case has to do with a bill of rights. The situation could be corrected by a simple amendment to B.C. laws.

Mr. Diefenbaker requested a bill to ensure that all Canadians will enjoy freedom of speech, religion, press and radio; that habeas corpus shall not be abrogated or suspended except by Parliament; that no one shall be deprived of liberty or property without due process of law and never by government order-in-council.

Mr. Coldwell's motion, an amendment to that of Mr. Diefenbaker, proposed a bill of rights on much the same lines as an amendment to the Canadian constitution; the British North America Act.

Mr. Coldwell said Canada has seen serious infringements of individual rights.

In the 1919 Winnipeg general strike the federal government had ordered the arrests of certain persons with no law to justify the action. Others were the 1937 Alberta Information Act, which had been ruled out by the Supreme Court of Canada, and Quebec's so-called padlock law which permits police to close any premises used for illegal purposes.

David Croll (L — Toronto Spadina) who seconded Mr. Coldwell's motion, said liberties are endangered by those who do not believe in them and by the widespread distrust of anyone who diverges from the established points of view.

SAYS AGRICULTURE

The Supreme Soviet accepted the resignation by a show of hands. V. Latsis, chairman of the Soviet's council of nationalities, said Malenkov will take on other unspecified duties and has promised to "carry them out faithfully."

GASP OF SURPRISE

Malenkov, dressed in a dark blue suit, sat on the platform with high Soviet officials as the announcement was read to the Soviet. A gasp of surprise swept through the diplomatic and press galleries.

Malenkov's statement said:

"I ask you to release me from my post as first chairman of the council of ministers in order to strengthen the council of ministers with people who are of more experience because my lack of experience has had a negative influence on work in the economic sphere."

The sensational resignation climaxed months of speculation concerning disputes between Malenkov and other government and party leaders. Some diplomats see in it the end of "committee rule" which the Communist leadership said has prevailed in the Soviet Union since the death of Stalin.

MAKES CONFESSION

Malenkov pointed out in his statement that he had been in charge of the Soviet Union's agricultural program before taking over as prime minister and confessed that this had "bad results."

For the past year Khrushchev has been in charge of a new agricultural program with primary stress on the development of virgin lands.

Malenkov said: "I admit my guilt and unsatisfactory leadership.

"The Communist party worked out and realized a number of new measures, like the reform in agricultural taxes, which gave good results. Now on the initiative and under the leadership of the Communist party we have started to improve agriculture on the basis of further development of heavy industry."

This was a clear reference to Khrushchev, the party leader, prime supporter of further development of heavy industry and the man in charge of the new agricultural program.

Malenkov added: "One can expect hysterical bourgeois slanderous speculation, but we are communists and we will not pay any attention to this slander."
